SOLAR SYSTEM'S ORIGIN PROBED

Third Moon Odyssey Begins

Launch Called Perfect

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 13 astronauts rocketed away from earth today on man's third moon-landing expedition, a search for clues to the origin of the moon in the rugged, ancient Frau Mauro highlands.

James A. Lovell Jr., 42, a U.S. Navy captain, and civilians Fred W. Haise, 36, and John L. Swigert Jr., 38, rode the fearsome power of their giant Saturn V rocket into space at 11:13 a.m. PST to start a daring and difficult journey almost postponed by German measles.

Swigert earned a late-hour seat on the flight Friday after proving in a crash training program that he could move up from the backup team to the first team.

He replaced Thomas K. Mattingly II, 38, who was exposed to German measles and is not immune to the childhood disease.

After examining the Apollo 13 crew several hours before launch, doctors described their condition as "top shape."

SECOND STAGE IGNITES

After two minutes, 36 seconds of flight at an altitude of 40 miles, the second stage ignited.

"We confirm ignition," Lovell reported.

"You're looking perfect," a ground controller told the crew a few minutes later as they were 200 miles down-range.

The disappointed Mattingly had flown back to the Manned Spacecraft Centre at Houston to help out and watch the launch on television.

Pushing Apollo 13 toward an earth orbit before the journey to the moon, the 36-storey Saturn flashed to life with a roar and a sheet of flame.

RISES MAJESTICALLY

The super rocket screamed on its launch pad for 8.9 seconds while a computer system made certain all five first stage engines reached a full thrust of 7,600,000 pounds. Then steel restraining arms folded back and the rocket rose majestically, arching out over the Atlantic Ocean.

Lovell reported the inboard engine of the second stage shutdown early. However, Mission Control said the other four engines functioned properly and the mission was "go."

The engines are designed so that if one stops early, the others will take up the slack.

To reach the moon, Apollo 13 first had to circle the earth 1½ times in 2½ hours while Lovell, Haise and Swigert checked spacecraft systems. Then a second burst from the Saturn's third stage was to hurl the three men and their space home toward the waiting moon, 246,524 miles away.

From deep in space, they will beam back a 30-minute television program Sunday, giving viewers a tour of the command module starting at

MACE RULED OUT IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Police Commission published Friday strict regulations controlling the use of firearms by police and banning use of the riot-control chemical Mace.

The new regulations, effective immediately, were drawn up by the commission under amendments to the Police Act last year and affect all Ontario police forces.

G. W. Mullen, executive officer of the commission, said several Ontario police forces, including London and Windsor, have used Mace, which may cause eye damage in some cases.

Under the new regulations, the only gas or chemical weapon permitted for police use is tear-gas, and even that must not be "applied intentionally in concentrated form directly to the person."

Cable TV Plans Local Shows

Victoria's first television channel with strictly-local programming will go into operation a few hours a day next fall.

Victoria Cablevision president Les Curran said today the company plans to introduce shows on "just about anything of local interest" using local talent and local production staff.

The local programming would occupy channel 10, running two or three hours daily initially, and gradually expanding as resources permit to take up a complete broadcast day.

Channel 10 is currently used by radio station C-FAX for music.

Curran said introduction of local programming is in line with new recommendations by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission which direct cable systems to rank CBC, CTV, and educational and community programming over United States station signals.

"Let's face it," Curran said, "our local station (channel 6) is just an extension of CTV and the CBC.

NO OUTLET

"There is no local outlet."

He said C-FAX would continue to broadcast over channel 10 when local programs were not being run.

Curran's anouncement of Victoria Cablevision's plans for local programming come after CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau, announced a set of guidelines for operation of all Canadian cable systems.

The guidelines are aimed primarily at areas like Calgary where there is no cable television.

Systems like Victoria will be affected when their licences come up for renewal. The Victoria Cablevision licence expires in August, 1971.

At that time there could be two developments in local viewing:

● CRTC could refuse to authorize distribution of the KVOS (channel 12, Bellingham) signal;

● Second showings of non-Canadian programs — such as Laugh-In — will be blacked out, a recommendation that prompted Curran to predict programming on U.S. channels will be reduced by half for Canadian viewers.

The commission said Friday it reserves the right to prohibit U.S. stations near the border that solicit Canadian advertising and disrupt "the economic balance."

KVOS, which broadcasts mainly into southern B.C. and the Island, could be affected. Management of the Bellingham station could not be reached today for comment.

The prohibition on duplicate shows says a program carried on a local station can't be allowed a week before or a week after by the cable company.

For viewers that means if a popular American show is carried by the CBC, it can't be seen again on a Seattle channel—except by people who still use a roof-top aerial.

"It's obviously aimed at protecting the Canadian broadcaster," Curran said.

Heart Attack Kills Author

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — John O'Hara, who chronicled a generation of eastern establishment Americans, with a series of short stories and novels including "Appointment In Samarra," died today at the age of 65.

O'Hara, born Jan. 21, 1905, in Pottsville, Pa., which became the "Gibbsville" of his novels, died of a heart attack in his home in this university town, a family spokesman said.

THUNDERING — if cockleshells can thunder — under the Gorge Bridge south of Portage Inlet this morning, El Toro sailboats competing in the annual Gorge Race hit white water on their way to the Inner Harbor. Bill Whitby of the Canadian Forces contingent has a narrow lead on Doug Kidd of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. The 36 boats entered came mainly from Victoria, Seattle and Port Angeles.

Wounded Survivors Tell of Massacre

By LAURENCE STERN

PRASAUT (WP) — The bodies of nearly 100 massacred Vietnamese civilians lay stacked under the sun and the flies Friday in a detention compound at this outpost on Cambodia's eastern border.

They were killed during a firefight that raged most of the night between Cambodian troops and Viet Cong forces who attacked Prasaut shortly before midnight.

The bodies were set out along a barbed wire fence that marked the boundaries of the compound where they had been herded by Cambodian troops Wednesday as suspected Viet Cong sympathizers: I saw them that day being marched in from their homes under armed guard.

Some of the approximately 100 survivors, many still bleeding and in great pain, told a Vietnamese-speaking cameraman that when the Viet Cong attacked, the Cambodians ordered them to run. When they complied, the Cambodians opened fire on them at close range, they said.

MILITARY SILENT

There were a large number of spent Chinese-Communist cartridges within the compound, attesting to the fact that a considerable amount of shooting had been done from inside the area where the civilians were clustered. Both the Cambodians and Viet Cong use Chinese ammunition.

Cambodian military officials here would not make themselves available for questioning after the incident was discovered by a small group of newsmen.

From all the available evidence it had to be concluded that the incident was a mass execution of unarmed civilians by Cambodian troops.

The most charitable surmise is that the Cambodians, in penning the Vietnamese into a hazardous outpost where imminent attack was expected, acted with utter disregard for human life.

One little girl of about eight lay in a semiconscious state with a bloody bandage around her mid-section. She moved her head only when files landed in her eyes and on her mouth. Another young woman with a gaping thigh wound was being sutured by a Cambodian male nurse who had no anesthetic. The woman was gasping and half-fainting with pain as the operation proceeded.

PAINFULLY WOUNDED

Clustered in the shade some of the wounded were moaning. Some lying very still with their faces contorted in pain. A tiny boy cried as he threaded his way amidst the wounded.

I counted 82 dead and two dozen wounded. Another correspondent counted 91 dead and still another 79. In some cases as many as two or three bodies lay under the same cloth covering, making a precise count impossible. The little children who had died made tiny lumps and were difficult to detect.

The impact of the massacre of civilians may well be to intensify the scale of the eastern border war. The

NOW HE'S HOPING HE GETS MEASLES

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — It will be a crying shame if Thomas K. Mattingly II doesn't come down with German measles next week. Then, at least, he won't have been disappointed for nothing.

He was to have left for the moon today!

But instead of waving cheerily and saying, "Good-bye world, for 10 days," Mattingly will watch from the sidelines while Apollo 13 leaves with John L. Swigert Jr. occupying his seat.

Two years of practice and study, days and weeks away from home and family, had prepared Mattingly for participation in man's third mission to the moon.

All of it was shot to blazes because a little kid got German measles and gave it to another kid, who gave it to an astronaut, who breathed on Mattingly and his two crew mates.

The others, doctors say, are immune to measles. But Mattingly isn't.

MATTINGLY
. . . no spots yet

Did Mattingly make any comments, astronaut boss Donald K. Slayton was asked. "Yes, but you wouldn't want to write any of them down." replied Slayton.

NERVE GAS LEAK DEFENCE READY

British Columbia's civil defence chief said Friday night B.C. officials will work with their counterparts in Washington State in case of an accident involving shipment of U.S. nerve gas.

The gas is to be shipped from Okinawa to Bangor, Wash., using Juan de Fuca Strait off Vancouver Island, then go by rail to Hermiston, Ore., and the U.S. Army's Umatilla, Ore., ordnance depot.

★ ★ ★

John Erb of Victoria said the B.C. civil defence organization has been in touch with its Washington State counterpart and "we have certain basic, standard plans." He declined to give details.

In Washington and Oregon, opposition to the planned shipment continued to build up Friday,

Oregon Gov. Tom McCall said the U.S. defence department's assurances of security appear to be hollow talk. The two states could not effectively guarantee the safety of their residents, he said.

Rhodesian Whites Back Smith Rule

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesia today entered a new phase in its fight against international condemnation and sanctions with Premier Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front entrenched more firmly than ever.

Final results from Friday's first general election under a republican constitution cleanly divided the government and opposition on racial lines.

The Rhodesian Front won all 50 seats it contested in the 66 seat parliament. The country's 87,020 white voters decided who should hold the 50 seats.

The only opposition returned in this first Rhodesian election run on racially segregated lines consisted of eight Africans returned by the country's 8,326 eligible black voters, representing the Mashona and Matebele tribes on a parity basis.

Eight other Arfican parliamentarians will be selected April 14 and 17 behind closed doors by tribal leaders who mainly support the white rulers.

Smith's victory means he controls the composition of Rhodesia's first republican Senate. Of the 23 senators, 10 will be directly elected by the Rhodesian Front caucus, three will be appointed by the president (formerly officer administering the government) and five African tribal chiefs each from Mashonaland and Matabeland will make up the remainder.

It was the first nationwide election since Rhodesia's white-minority government declared the British colony independent in November, 1965. The seizure of independence without providing for eventual rule by the black majority brought international condemnation and economic pressure in the form of trade sanctions voted by the United Nations.

A month ago, the Smith regime declared Rhodesia a republic.

52-Year Newsman Honored at Dinner

HUTCHISON
. . . wrote nine books

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bruce Hutchison, author and editorial director of the Vancouver Sun, was honored Friday night at a testimonial dinner marking his 52nd anniversary as an active journalist.

His record of achievement is without parallel in the history of Canadian journalism said Sun publisher Stuart Keate in paying tribute to Mr. Hutchison, who started his career as a sports writer with the Victoria Times and then switched to political reporting.

After working for a number of other newspapers he returned to the Times as editor-in-chief, a position he held from 1950 to 1963.

A water color painting of Lake Cowichan, a Vancouver Island area familiar to Mr. Hutchison, was presented by Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of the Supreme Court of B.C. It was done by Victoria artist Brian Travers-Smith.

Dinner guests included former prime minister Lester Pearson, publishers, editors and businessman.

Editorials and columns represent only a fraction of Mr. Hutchison's output.

"Assaulting his old typewriter with jack-hammer ferocity, he never ceased to amaze us with the volume of his copy, nor of its quality," Mr. Keate said.

WON SEVERAL PRIZES

He has written nine books, including The Unknown Country, The Incredible Canadian and Canada: Tomorrow's Giant—all winners of the Governor-General's Award.

Mr. Hutchison, 69 in June, also won two National Newspaper Awards for editorial writing and one national award for staff corresponding.

He was the first winner of a silver medal awarded by the Royal Society of the Arts in London to the best Commonwealth journalist outside the United Kingdom.

In 1951, the University of British Columbia awarded him an honorary law degree. Yale University conferred on him a doctorate of humane letters in 1968, the year he became a member of the Canadian News Hall of Fame.

To the sheer zest for newspapering which made him approach every story as though it was his first, "Bruce added that extra dimension known as Style," Mr. Keate said.

"He never wrote a dull line. His rich vocabulary and genuine feel for the swing and rhythm of words were the product of a lifetime of reading and studying the masters.

IS PATRIOT

"And there is something more that must be observed in his work: That deep and abiding love for Canada which shines through all his writings."

Mr. Keate said that in addition to his work as a journalist, Mr. Hutchison was being honored "because he has been for half a century a fine family man, a firm and trusted friend and a great citizen of this country."

Explaining why it was decided to mark Mr. Hutchison's 52nd year in journalism—it seems a sort of off-beat number—Mr. Keate said it wasn't until a year ago that it was remembered he had passed the 50-year mark.

"Let a veteran alderman or retiring president of the sewage-disposal plant be presented with a golden shovel and he's good for a four-column picture, 1,000 words of passionage prose and a ringing editorial.

"We, on the other hand, tend to forget our heroes. One reasons may be that there's so damned few of them."

Is Mr. Hutchison, who lives near Victoria, retiring?

"Not as long as we can prevent it," said Mr. Keate.

"The CRTC knows Canadian broadcasters can't compete with American networks, so they've decided to eliminate the competition, and I don't think that's the way to go about it."

CRTC priorities for cable operators are:

- Provision for the CBC network;
- Provision for CTV, the private Canadian network;
- Canadian TV stations located in nearby areas whose signals reach the cable operator's area;
- Community channels, to be as accessible as possible to groups in the community who want to use it;

Non-Canadian commercial stations are ranked sixth on the CRTC priority list, followed by non-Canadian, non-commercial stations (for example, Channel 9, Seattle).

CRTC last December announced a ban on use of microwave relays for "wholesale importation" of U.S. programs. The restrictions raised strong protests from Kamloops, Edmonton, Calgary and Sudbury, all too far from the U.S. border to pull in American signals with the usual cable TV antenna tower.

Ottawa Riders Add Newcomers

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference Tuesday announced the names of two new players who will attend their June training camp.

John Paddon, 25, an Ottawa player who attended Lenior Rhyne College under an athletic scholarship provided by Riders, is seeking a spot as either an offensive end or flanker.

Paddon is six feet tall and weighs 188 pounds.

The second player is defensive end Don Gerhardt who played for Saskatchewan Roughriders in 1966, 1967 and 1968.

Gerhardt, also 25, is 6-3 and weighs 237 pounds. He is making a bid for an Ottawa job because he prefers playing is Eastern Canada.

Civil Service Pay Boosted

Salary increases up to $2,800 for senior civil servants in the provincial government were announced Friday by cabinet orders-in-council.

The unfilled post of premier's executive assistant now pays $18,900, up seven per cent.

Geoffrey Stewart, chairman of the Medical Services Commission, received the largest boost, almost 14 per cent, from $20,200 to $23,000.

The comptroller-general's salary goes up by 6.5 per cent to $24,000.

Other increases:

Public Utilities Commission chairman J. F. K. English, up 5.9 per cent from $20,400 to $21,600.

Purchasing Commission chairman R. G. McKee, up 6 per cent from $18,700 to $19,900.

Senior Public Utilities Commission officers Lyle Wicks and E. W. Bassett, up 7 per cent from $17,700 to $18,900.

B.C. Assessment Commissioner W. P. Wright up 7.9 per cent, from $16,140 to $17,420.

Increases were also granted to employees in the office of the leader of the opposition with administrative officer John Wood's salary reaching $12,900.

All increases were effective April 1.

Earlier this week $7 million worth of civil service pay increases were announced.

Vietnamese, a large minority in these provinces, are suspected and feared by the Cambodians.

HOMES BURNED

As we drove back toward Phnom Penh Friday afternoon Cambodian soldiers were burning Vietnamese houses in towns along the national highway. It was explained that the houses belonged to Vietnamese who had gone to join the Vietcong.

But one Vietnamese family was standing on the road with all their household effects stacked beside them. They had the confused and forlorn look of evictees.

What is in progress here is a pogrom against the Vietnamese in Cambodia. This is one of the byproducts of the war here that is beginning to look more and more each day like a page out of the war in Vietnam.

Lake Pollution Control Agreed by Canada, U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Canada and the United States took their first practical steps Friday to control pollution of the Great Lakes.

A communique issued after inter-governmental talks, held at the request of Michigan Gov. W. G. Milliken, announced a joint action program to clean up the lakes.

Representatives of Michigan, Ohio, Ontario and the two federal governments agreed to establish technical committees to co-ordinate control efforts and indicated a conference of governors and premiers of states and provinces bordering the lakes will be held in June.

The emergency meeting was a result of Canada's decision earlier this month to impose restrictions on fishing in Lake St. Clair, the St. Clair and Detroit rivers and in sections of Lake Erie and Lake Huron.

The restrictions, including an outright ban on fishing in the St. Clair system and a ban on fish sales in other areas, were imposed after fish were found to have been contaminated by industrial mercury to a level believed unsafe for human consumption.

Although the International Joint Commission last year issued a report decrying damage caused the Great Lakes by phosphates used in detergents, pesticides such as DDT and sewage, officials only recently became aware of the presence of mercury contamination.

MAP OUT PLANS

The 31 government representatives who attended the meeting agreed to take these steps:

—Michigan will institute proceedings to close down Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River to all fishing as a precautionary measure pending further study.

—Michigan will not restrict fishing on the U.S. side of Lake Erie or on the Detroit River, but Michigan, Ohio, Ontario and the U.S. federal water pollution control administration will co-operate in investigating the situation in these areas.

—Two permanent technical committees, one dealing with health matters and the other with environmental control, will be established to co-ordinate anti-pollution efforts by both countries.

—A major pollution conference to be held in June, probably in Toronto, will be recommended for convening by Ottawa and Washington.

—The participants agreed to co-operate in eliminating mercury contamination, to consult with other authorities prior to taking action affecting the Great Lakes and to investigate other sources of pollution.

—The participants will urge the affected agencies of both federal governments to investigate sources of mercury contamination in all states and provinces.

—The U.S. food and drug administration will take action to seize fish in interstate commerce containing mercury in excess of the level of .5 parts per million believed dangerous to humans.

Investigations into mercury contamination of the St. Clair system by a Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. plant at Sarnia, Ont., may result in Dow accepting responsibility for compensation. The company already has taken action to reduce mercury pollution.

Mr. Milliken told reporters he had been informed by Wyandotte Chemical Co. Ltd., located on the Detroit River near Detroit, that the company is taking steps to terminate all discharges of mercury. Ontario had blamed Wyandotte as the major pollutor of the river.

. . . MOON

5:28 p.m. PST. U.S. television networks said they would not have live coverage of the show, but would consider later transmissions by videotape. Canadian networks will carry coverage of the events on regular news programs.

The spacemen fire themselves into lunar orbit Tuesday night, and on Wednesday night Lovel and Haise are to attempt the most risky space adventure yet — steering the lunar lander toward a precision landing in a narrow valley on the eastern shore of the Ocean of Storms.

Fra Mauro is a battered region of hills, ridges, deep craters and huge boulders — some the size of automobiles. Scientists believe it may harbor rocks dating more than 4,500,000 years to the creation of the moon and perhaps the solar system.

During 33 hours on the moon, Lovell and Haise plan two outside excursions to set up a nuclear-powered science station, collect rock and dirt samples, and drill 10 feet into the lunar crust.

New Fund Limits Outlined at Talks

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark talked all day Friday with the people who build and operate hospitals and two points emerged:

- There's no change in the government edict of a week ago which limits funds available to meet hospital wage increases;
- And government, hospital boards and administrations, doctors, nurses and architects will join forces in the search for ways to counter the soaring cost of operating hospitals.

At the same time Loffmark predicted services besides hospitals and schools face having their spending restricted by government. He did not elaborate.

T. C. Marshall, Vancouver lawyer and president of the B.C. Hospitals' Association, said today the meeting probed every facet of hospital functions and went well except on the subject of the new fund limits.

On that point there was disagreement, he said.

Out of the discussion came the decision to put task forces to work immediately examining promising economy moves like expansion of day care units (for same-day surgery), regionalizing services like laundry and more bulk purchasing.

Late in the just-completed legislative session the government introduced legislation which gave it authority to take over hospitals in financial trouble. Marshall was highly critical, asking if it was another step towards a provincial take-over of B.C.'s hospitals.

He said Loffmark answered this Friday by saying it was still government policy not to unduly interfere with a hospital's local atonomy but with available funds short any hospital piling up a big deficit can expect more limitations.

CAR CHASE SPEEDS HIT 120

Police chasing a car driven by Wolf A. Lehmann, 20, of 530 Dumeresq, couldn't close the gap at 110 miles per hour, prosecutor J. W. Anderson told Judge J. A. Byers in court today.

But the police car did start to catch up when it was travelling at 120 miles per hour, he said.

Lehmann was fined $100 after pleading guilty to dangerous driving.

The judge said he would recommend to the superintendent of the motor vehicle branch that his licence be suspended for three months.

The police chase started when the accused was seen speeding on Douglas Street in Saanich.

After travelling for about 3½ miles Lehmann stopped his car.

He told the court he did not realize he was being followed by police.

Victoria-Born Centre Signed By Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference announced the signing of defensive halfback James Henshall and centre Peter Travis, both Canadian prospects.

Travis, 24, formerly with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference and British Columbia Lions of the WFC, received a wrist injury in the Lions' training camp last year and finished the season wity Spokane Shockers of the Continental League.

Travis, six-foot, four-inch, 250-pounder, signed with Montreal in 1968 after graduating from University of Louisville. He was born in Victoria.

Henshall, 23-year-old graduate of University of Western Ontario, was selected to the Canadian college all-star team in 1969. He was Edmonton's second draft choice in the 1970 college draft.

Violence In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Violence once again marked Montreal's 68-day postal dispute Friday as seven trucks rented by the post office to haul mail were attacked and one man suffered minor injuries.

Full soft drink bottles were hurled through the truck windshields as they made their rounds on busy city streets. Security vehicles following the trucks could do little to prevent the attacks because of heavy traffic.

One driver was punched in the face.

Chilliwack Choir To Sing Sunday

The Youth Choir of Chilliwack United Church, directed by Colleen Erb, will sing at a choral vesper service at 5 p.m. in the chapel of Metropolitan United church Sunday.

The regular 7 p.m. service has been cancelled.

$100 to Hospital

The local chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Xi sorority presented St. Joseph's Hospital Administrator E. G. Q. Van Tilburg with a $100 cheque Friday afternoon. The money will be used to purchase hospital equipment. The group raised the money at a St. Valentine's dance.

WOMAN TOLD TO PAY IN DIVORCE TRIAL

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Louis Cohen, 63, learned Friday that after months of litigation he will be the first Canadian to receive alimony from his divorced wife.

The Ontario supreme court ordered his wife, Ruth, to pay him $355 a month.

Cohen, the first man under relaxed Canadian divorce statutes to be granted alimony, has been living in Toronto the past year on a $100-a-month welfare allowance.

Mrs. Cohen started divorce proceedings last fall, after the couple had been separated since 1951. The case was argued before the supreme court here in January. In Friday's decision, Justice John H. Ostler ordered the alimony payments, less costs involving the custody of their two daughters.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The strong ridge of high pressure will remain over B.C. and a sunny weekend is looked for. Some cloudiness will, however, persist along the mountains since the air over the province is fairly moist and cool.

Cloud and rain is expected over the Charlottes this evening with a weak disturbance. However, this system will weaken rapidly as it moves through the ridge of high pressure and other areas of the province will experience little weather with it.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Man has always sought water from the heavens. When he was a savage, he did it through ritual dancing, incantation and fireworks. Then he sought rain with prayer and, finally, he turned to science and had the clouds seeded.

Modern scientists want to make rain come at will and they want to modify the weather in critical regions where the balance between the various factors in the cycles of solar energy could be upset to produce better weather and changes in the land itself. They see the possibility of warmng Arctic areas so that farming may be possible and profitable where now there is nothing but frozen wastes.

To do it they might be able to use the destructive force of the nuclear bomb to manipulate the atmosphere by creating or obliterating or altering large bodies of water. It scares one, doesn't it?

FLASHING his proverbial smile, Premier Bennett presents retiring provincial comptroller C. J. Ferber with watch and commemorative plaque. Ferber was in the centre of B.C.'s financial decision-making for 25 years, unofficially retiring at the age of 64 at the end of March. See story at right.

Comptroller Watched B.C. Budget Increase to Billion Dollar Mark

By SAM EGUAVOEN

"When I joined the British Columbia government 25 years ago, government's annual budget was 50 million dollars. Today, the province spends over a billion dollars on its business.

"I have been in the centre of financial decision-taking in this province — managing the growth and modernization of my department to this present stage.

"It has been an active life. It has actually been a very active, important and responsible position that I held."

That was Charles J. Ferber, 64, as he settled into retirement after being comptroller-general of B.C.

He retired from the service at the end of March and as he begins his rest, he says: "I am so happy to be able to relax after such a long time. I have no immediate plans for travelling and all that yet."

To government employees, Ferber can best be remembered as the man whose signature has been appearing on their pay cheques for 20 years.

He was the director of the centralized accounting system of the province, auditor of the three universities in B.C., auditor of the Workmen's Compensation Board and medicare; he audited and signed claims which the federal government used in giving the province its share for the running of hospitals and educational institutions; and he was an adviser to other departments on expenditure.

During his tenure, Ferber's staff grew from 45 to 70. He also saw the complete computerization of the department.

He was prominent in transactions to take over B.C. Electric in 1961 and in refunding money invested by subscribers in Peace River power prior to construction of the Peace River dam.

Charles Ferber was born in London, England, and came to Canada on a farm immigration scheme in 1926.

He became a chartered accountant in 1932 and in 1934, moved to Vancouver to run an accountancy firm.

After more than ten years of successful practice, he decided to join government service in 1945 because "I thought it would be very interesting and challenging".

He joined as deputy comptroller-general and five years later, he became comptroller-general.

To mark his retirement, Premier Bennett presented Ferber a wrist-watch and a certificate of merit. About 125 of his friends and colleagues held a reception in his honor.

A Cut, a Snip, a Shear Dulled Brilliant Plan

By JIM HUME

Hume

A few quick shuffles at the middle-echelon level of CPR's Marathon Realty this week could result in the Belleville Street development proposals getting back on the rails.

But forgive us if we prove too cynical to believe Marathon brass Dave Mooney when he tells us that the plan now being worked by local architect John A. Di Castri will be better than the original scheme.

It's a year ago that Marathon, aboard the Princess Marguerite unveiled its first dramatic proposals for Belleville Street. At that floating press conference the Di Castri scheme and design was hailed as brilliant.

And it was.

Alas, as the months went by, Marathoners consulted less and less with their architect, more and more among themselves. And then they started to tinker.

A change here, a change there. A cut, a trim, a snip, a shear.

By mid-March the latest proposal, says city planner Geoff Greenhalgh, "bore no relationship at all to the original scheme."

When the city protested, Marathon made rumbling noises which sounded strangely like threats. An unwise move when you're facing negotiators like Ald. Peter Pollen and veteran fighters like Greenhalgh and City Manager Dennis Young.

While Marathon hinted at all sorts of dire deeds, the city people quietly laid a fist full of aces on the table.

Marathon had gone ahead with a building at its new terminal site without a building permit. Trouble.

Marathon, to hook that building up to city sewers, would need an easement across city land. Trouble.

CPR Steamships, to be able to renew its lease for the ferry terminal with the federal government needed a letter of approval from the city of Victoria. And more trouble.

Three leases were involved, one lapsing on April 19 this year, two lapsing in two years time. None renewable without the city's blessing.

Observers on the sidelines could almost feel a twinge of sympathy for the Marathon team as those cards were turned face up, one by one.

INSIDE CITY HALL

Marathon still doesn't have a building permit not even for the new customs-terminal shed already constructed. It still doesn't have that desperately needed letter approving lease renewals. And it still has to cross city-owned land to hook into sewers.

At the start of this week Marathon could not be described as negotiating from a position of strength.

Then came the shuffles.

The young man in charge of the project for Marathon departed for other fields of endeavor. A new team came in to try and unscramble the mess. And Mooney came over from Vancouver to conduct a press conference regarding the new scheme.

Di Castri, he said, was back on the job. The original scheme would be used as a base for the new scheme. The new scheme, while aiming for a $1 million budget target could well go beyond that.

The errors of the past (yes, Mooney admitted them quite freely and humbly) were now well behind and a great new day was about to dawn.

He was convincing — until he asked the press what they'd like to drink, "tea or coffee" and reporters realised that all was not yet well with Marathon.

Hopefully, optimistically, this time around Marathon will stick with the product Di Castri comes up with over the next few weeks. But track records insist that nobody believes that until it happens.

The city certainly won't.

They have told Marathon that permits, leases and easements will all be granted cheerfully when the final scheme is approved by city hall and positively assured by Marathon.

That makes it all a little dicey for Marathon, but it's no more than they deserve.

Doesn't Marathon hold any cards? Yes, indeed it does, and one of them is a beauty.

Way down at the Rock Bay end of the harbor Marathon owns a key piece of property where the old E and N freight terminal used to be.

It sits alongside property owned by B.C. Hydro and adjacent to property owned by Ocean Cement.

Does the light commence to dawn?

Ocean Cement must move before the long-awaited Wharf Street Reid Centre Fort Victoria project gets under way. It could move to Rock Bay if enough land can be assembled. Marathon owns a key piece of property in the re-location area.

From here on in the bargaining will be tougher than ever before. But holding three aces to Marathon's one, I'll bet on the city players.

Canadian Artists Promoted

TORONTO (CP) — Artist and gallery owner Justin de Santos hates the walls in Canadian immigration department offices.

He believes Canadian paintings should be hung on them because that is where newcomers usually get their first introduction to Canada.

De Santos, who came here from Guyana in 1953, believes he has a right to be critical of Canada. His first works were a symbolic protest against United States economic takeover.

"I feel I have a right to protest," he said. "I chose Canada. I became a Canadian citizen just as soon as I was here for five years. I feel if I live and work in Canada and make a living here, I should back Canada."

His protests now are in the form of displays. He has provided a tiny gallery in the basement of a small brick house for showings of Canadian artists.

In the near future he hopes to have an exchange of work with neighboring galleries in Ontario.

Cards on the Table

IN INTRODUCING LEGISLATION to claim a 12-mile territorial sea around the coasts of Canada the government has done what 57 other countries have already done. The recognized width of territorial seas, over which a nation exercises full sovereignty, has customarily been three miles, with a further nine-mile area added in which the country concerned may impose fishing controls. And more recently there has been discussion of claims to the seabed beyond these limits, where a relatively shallow continental shelf is involved.

The United States bases its objection to the Canadian action on the effects which this would have on shipping on the disputed area of the high seas. While rights such as fishing may be recognized, it is a more serious matter to acknowledge that a stretch of sea "belongs" to a particular nation. The United States, which has not claimed a full 12-mile sovereignty, is not ready to concede this to Canada. But this week's Canadian action has another particular application to the United States, for a second measure claims "jurisdiction" — although not sovereignty — over the Arctic seas 100 miles from the mass of the northern islands for the purpose of controlling possible pollution.

Taken together, the two pieces of legislation impinge directly on the present determination of the United States to assure free transit through the Northwest Passage. The 100-mile regulation, if effected, would call for inspections, conformity with safety specifications, and heavy penalties for infractions causing pollution. The 12-mile extension of sovereignty could remove Barrow Strait from the claimed "international waters" category by making it unquestionably Canadian, and since this strait is an integral part of the Northwest Pasaage, Canadian control would be assured. Obviously, the United States is not yet ready to agree to this arrangement.

Prime Minister Trudeau for many months has been handling the matter of Canada's Arctic sovereignty with great care — indeed, with much more diffidence than most Canadians favored — but he knew the strong objections of the U.S. State Department and he was apparently trying to clear the diplomatic tracks in behind-the-scenes talks. Now, apparently, it has become evident that Washington insists on holding the line, and Ottawa has taken the uncompromising step of publicly introducing legislation which embodies the Canadian stand.

In a matter involving international relations, of course, that is not the end of the matter, but only the beginning, for it is necessary to obtain the compliance of other countries in observing the new Canadian statutes, or to be prepared to enforce them. It is clear that as regards the United States — no other countries have evinced strong interest so far — we are in for a time of heavy negotiation and testing. The Washington statement made a point of urging "co-operative international action" and indicated that the way is open for further talks.

We have so much that the United States wants today — minerals, oil, gas, uranium, water, and traffic through the Arctic — that there will be heavy pressures on all counts. Ottawa should know that it has the full backing of the Canadian public for a policy of insisting on Canadian rights and interests, particularly where these involve the basic ingredients of our sovereignty and our future.

Voluntary, but Chancy

PRESIDENT NIXON'S HOPE OF stalling Congressional tariff action to stem the influx of Japanese synthetic textiles, until some voluntary arrangements could be made with the exporting country, is apparently growing dimmer.

Japan seems unwilling to accept the warnings of Nixon administration senior office-holders that the United States wants a slowdown in the movement of such goods from Japan. The Japanese made their stand clear in a recent note and the protectionists in the United States appear anxious to mount an offensive.

The outcome of the prospective trade fight in the United States will be watched with interest in Canada. This country enjoys apparent advantages from so-called "voluntary" quotas accepted by Japan on a number of commodities. Canada's imports from Japan in 1968 were listed at $360.18 millions, against exports to Japan of $606,789 millions.

The position of the two North American countries is, of course, vastly different. The relatively clear-cut competition between textile producers in the United States and in Japan is blurred by other considerations in Canada. Japan wants Canadian raw material, is investing in its production, and under the circumstances is willing to accept, even though reluctantly, a quota system. Self-interest encourages her industries to make trade concessions to Canada, up to a point. But acceptance of the quotas could change very quickly if overall Japanese self-interest suffered.

The Pressure of Progress

IVORY CROCKETT, WHO hurried faster than three Olympic Games performers to win the United States Amateur Athletic Union's 100-yard outdoor championship recently, turns a jaundiced eye on the American public's reaction to its sports heroes. The public demands too much of them, he says. If they break a record one time out, they are expected to break another on their next appearance—and so on absurdum.

Mr. Crockett cites as examples other stars, whom he has heard booed after winning races merely because they didn't set new records in the process—and his resentment against the practice is understandable. But the young athlete is wrong if he thinks this is the treatment meted out only to athletic heroes. It is merely one expression of the current phenomenon of escalating expectations.

At one time a performer in any number of fields was expected to maintain a high standard of performance. That isn't good enough in today's impatient world. The star is expected to progress from stardom to super-stardom and thence to super-super-stardom. And, surprising as it may seem, if he doesn't someone usually comes along to accomplish what he has failed to achieve. It's the pressure of "progress", and no one is permitted to rest on his oars.

Letter

Battle Won Long Ago

Mr. R. B. Shaw has been fighting the good fight against modern art for nearly two decades, according to my recollection. Like the rest of us, he is entitled to his opinion.

In his letter to you last week he expresses his "wonder and astonishment" at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria's acceptance of "occasional exhibitions of modernistic paintings by much publicized painters."

What he should be asking himself instead is why virtually all nations of the western world, and some in Africa and the East, have consecrated modern art by erecting galleries in their capital cities devoted exclusively to collecting, exhibiting and promoting it.

The battle for modern art was won in all the major centres and most of the minor ones at least a decade ago.

It is no longer good enough to refer vaguely, as Mr. Shaw does, to "multi-coloured splotches of meaningless shapes and patterns." Public libraries in every city are full of books explaining the highly structured and philosophically subtle nature of 20th-century art.

The trouble is that those who complain most loudly about it are the ones who will simply not read these books. — Colin Graham, director, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

MR. SNIFKIN LEARNS ABOUT NEWS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Secrets of Mr. Official Source and Mr. Leak

LIKE most readers of the press, I have long been puzzled by the identity of those mysterious Ottawa "sources" who give out news every day. Until now I had supposed that they were bloodless, inhuman, mechanical or even imaginary. Or else they were the latest kind of computer. But on his recent visit to the capital my friend, Horace Snifkin, discovered that these assistants to the Press Gallery reporters are only men after all. The Sources, to give them their legal name, belong to a distinguished Ottawa family which has been employed by federal governments for almost a century.

Hutchison

At his luxurious home on Sussex Street the head of the family, Mr. Official Source, greeted Mr. Snifkin hospitably and recalled that he had first worked, as a youngster, with John A. Macdonald in the Pacific Scandal, not successfully, to be sure, but it was good training for a beginner. Nowadays, he added, his relations with Prime Minister Trudeau were intimate and highly confidential. He could not discuss them.

Twinned

In fact, Mr. Source, Sr. is so close to the prime minister, and looks so much like him, that the two men are usually mistaken for each other. Even experienced reporters have often supposed, on meeting Mr. Source in the corridor of the East Block, that they were talking with the leader of the government in person. The news announcements, however, are always attributed to Mr. Source, never to Mr. Trudeau, who shrinks from publicity. This is an unwritten rule in Ottawa, strictly enforced by the Press Gallery.

Through many years of practice, Mr. Source can disguise himself as any cabinet minister and imitate him so convincingly, in dress, manner and speech, that no one can tell the difference. Sherlock Holmes and James Bond were pikers compared to Mr. Source.

Great Impersonator

On Monday, for example, he will appear in the guise of Mitchell Sharp and announce a new foreign policy. On Tuesday he will explain some intended change in the white paper on tax reform and the reporters will imagine that they have been received in the finance minister's office by the actual Edgar Benson (who is easily impersonated with a pipe, behind a thick cloud of tobacco smoke). Or on Wednesday Mr. Source will emerge from the cabinet chamber resembling Jean Marchand to the life and interpret the election news from Quebec, off the record.

Mr. Trudeau and his desperate ministers make such heavy demands on Mr. Source, telephoning him in the middle of the night, that the poor old man is exhausted by his labors and suffers from frequent losses of memory.

But if he fumbles and makes some unpopular announcement that backfires on the Liberal party, the news is promptly contradicted by the efficient department of denial, which will be merged shortly with the new department of information in the interests of accuracy.

Sometimes Mr. Source is so tired and bewildered by his employers that he asks his younger brother, Unofficial Source, to act in his place. Or, in a pinch, even Usually Reliable Source, the genial scamp of the family, is called into service, but no one really trusts him.

It was he, you will remember, who floated out the rumor that the government intended to grapple seriously with inflation. Another time, in a reckless mood and a painful hangover, he told the reporters that Eric Kierans would be fired, merely for disagreeing with all government policy.

The department of denial is kept busy correcting these absurd canards, but Usually Reliable Source doesn't care. He just retires to a bar in Hull until the trouble blows over, knowing that he will soon get another government job. No ministry can do without him for long.

Then the Leaks

The Sources should not be confused with a second well-known Ottawa family, the Leaks, a disreputable lot. While Lester Pearson was in office he felt constantly irritated by Cabinet Leak, the notorious ringleader of this group. Whenever Mr. Pearson discussed some vital state secret with his colleagues he would find Cabinet Leak sneaking down the hall to meet the reporters in the cafeteria and brief them, quite accurately, just for the fun of it.

Often the prime minister mistook Cabinet Leak for one of his own loyal ministers but could never be sure. Occasionally he threatened to dismiss him from the civil service but always hesitated because the Leaks are very useful in their own peculiar fashion.

Hot Tip-Offs

When a government can't make up its mind on a sensitive issue one of the Leaks is instructed to meet some friendly reporter down in the basement, behind the furnace, and tip him off to a hot piece of news. Then, if the public reaction is bad, the department of denial goes into instant action and denounces the gross irresponsibility of the press. This routine arrangement works satisfactorily but, as Mr. Pearson found, is hard on the nerves.

So Mr. Snifkin tells me that the Sources and the Leaks are never likely to be without full employment at handsome wages. As Official Source remarked only the other day, when he strode out of the East Block looking exactly like the prime minister, with a lovely lady on his arm, the news media, of course, are lousy. Nevertheless, the government, Mr. Source said, can't afford to abolish them until the new department of information is ready to perform its essential function and make sure that news is no longer slanted in favor of the ruling political party.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Campaign to Polish a Quarter-Century Image

UNITED NATIONS supporters, including the United States Government, see in the world organization's 25th anniversary, coming this summer and fall, a public relations problem of considerable magnitude. Unless something is done to channel constructively the hundreds of thousands of words that will be written and spoken on the subject, the prevailing theme of anniversary comment is likely to be an unflattering contrast between the UN of 1970, as it has developed, and the institution that its founding fathers envisaged in 1945.

Frye

The net effect would be a blow to the UN's principal source of strength: its support in public opinion. This in turn would be a blow to the national interest of the United States, which — despite everything — is still, on balance, served better by a healthy UN than by a moribund one.

No Easy Solution

It is easier, however, to diagnose the problem than to see what can be done about it.

American diplomats would like the world organization to rack up some major accomplishment, such as a Middle East peace. This would muzzle criticisms fast. But any such miracle is unlikely in the extreme.

Not entirely out of the realm of the possible is East-West agreement on the revival of UN peacekeeping armies. A private negotiation has been in process on this subject for months. Sometimes it has seemed promising. It could conceivably come off.

That would do much to revive hopes of future UN effectiveness. It was the collapse of veto-free peacekeeping which disillusioned many in the 1960's.

Short of some such accomplishment on which to focus public attention, the UN's 25th anniversary could be a public relations man's nightmare.

It is difficult, even for a well-wisher, to write wholly complimentary things about the UN at the current stage of its history. And newsmen are not supposed or expected to be propagandists.

The organization set out, in 1945, to be something of a superstate, with power to impose its will on wrong-doers. This authority never became a reality; it was drowned in the cold war.

The UN then sought to develop a capacity to influence, or nudge governments toward peaceful change by means of instruments which harnessed its moral authority. This effort went too far, too fast, and ran afoul of much the same cold-war obstacles.

The UN therefore was left with only one role to play: that of a forum. Even so, it could be useful. It could provide a safety valve in tense situations; it could afford opportunities for private diplomacy, and it could mobilize public support for righteous causes.

But some of the UN's members misused the forum, and its credibility and authority were dangerously diluted. Special pleaders tended to monopolize the platform, and double standards of justice crept into the proceedings.

Not a Good Year

Thus 1970 is not all a good year to be elebrating a UN anniversary. The calendar being what it is, it could not be postponed; so attention has to be focussed, as far as possible, on the future.

One way of doing this has been, and will be, to give the spotlight to youth, the diplomats of tomorrow. A major feature of the anniversary celebrations will be a Youth Assembly, attended by and run under the direction of, young people from all over the world.

Selecting the American representatives for this Assembly is proving to be no easy task. If Washington had done it, or sought overtly to influence the choice, there would have been a formidable outcry against manipulation by the establishment. Some of those omitted would probably have picketed the proceedings, and the credibility of the American spokesmen in the hall would have been damaged.

On the other hand, turning the choice over to youth organizations was also a risky thing to do. If radical militants were to get a chance to speak on behalf of the United States in a major world spotlight, they could do immense damage to the American image.

The government is giving advice, but from a very low profile. It is letting an informal committee of youth organizations make the selections. The committee will screen applications and select the final ten persons by lot. Hopefully the screening will weed out extremist kooks of either the Left or Right.

Unpredictable Youth

The Youth Assembly ought to be unpredictable enough, and interesting enough, to focus attention of commentators for a while. As for the rest, friends of the UN hope to rest their case on constructive programs for future action: on remedies for pollution of the environment (the UN is planning a major conference); on arms control (the 1970s have been proclaimed a "decade of disarmament") on economic development (the UN and its agencies could be important channels for aid in the future, as disillusionment with bilateral channels grows); on human rights (the UN is slowly toughening on this issue); and on race relations (which could be the biggest source of trouble in the next decade).

UN public relations men still have a story to tell, and 1970 will be a crucial test of their ability to get the story across.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Wild Life Week, honoring the memory of the late Jack Miner, should be of particular interest to this part of the country at this time. We have spring lifting new life around us and in the Greater Victoria area we have splendid parks, many of them containing wild land, that are a suitable habitat for the creatures to whose protection Mr. Miner devoted his life.

In Goldstream Park we have the salmon stream and the salt marshes that are ideal for many plants and animals.

At Thetis Lake Park early blooms are making a fine showing, and on Mill Hill, close by and reached by a good climb, similar conditions prevail. In Thetis itself, the lake is a gathering ground for bird life, with osprey nesting on its western shore.

A profusion of bloom greets visitors to the Tom Francis-Freeman King Park complex, where trails lead off to rocky knolls through true Douglas fir forest. Along them you come eventually to open clearings abounding in the sun-loving flowers. Further along you reach the small stream and the near rain-forest as well as the marsh, with its particular growth, and on the way, rocky areas show glacier scores.

On the Saanich peninsula John Dean Provincial Park reveals different species of blooms and, further afield, Matheson Park at East Sooke is a haunt of wild life.

Closer to town the swans and coot lend elegance to Elk-Beaver Lake and at Mount Douglas the combination of attractive growth and magnificent views carries its own appeal.

From the summit of Bear Hill Park, north of Elk Lake the visitor can enjoy a fine view of the neat farm lands below as well as a wealth of flowers in the sections open to the sun.

During Wild Life Week it is appropriate to consider what the human family here is doing to preserve these attractive regions, what precautions it is taking to keep the flowers in profusion and the creatures of nature in healthy balance. The area is richly endowed. From it today's generation may draw great pleasure. But in that enjoyment, time and effort must be provided to preserve what is here for the generations still to come.

Commercialism Strangling Our Hockey

By BRUCE KIDD
Canadian Dimension

The chain reaction that cancelled the 1970 World Hockey Tournament in Winnipeg and put Hockey Canada out of business was predictable enough but who touched it off remains the question.

Once Avery Brundage, the octogenerian president of the International Olympic Committee, began rumbling that players in the professionalized Winnipeg Tournament might be ruled ineligible for the 1972 Olympics, the rest followed according to script.

First the Eastern European hockey-playing nations asked the International Ice Hockey Federation to reconsider its decision of last June to allow the use of nine professional players in the 1970 championship. The new rule meant little to the Russians, Czechs, and East Germans, for they have always used professionals on their teams and have simply defined them as amateurs. On the other hand, the possibility of Olympic disqualification was a matter of great concern.

The political intrigues of the IIHF are something Stendhal would write about, but it's safe to say that the Europeans call the tune. Opposition to the professional rule quickly developed as the Swedes saw the possibility of gate receipts from a 1970 tournament in Stockholm and other countries suddenly became reluctant to see the tournament leave Europe. The IIHF executive met in early January and voted to return to an amateur championship.

Canada's response to this decision was the most predictable of all. Canada simply could not return to the status quo because Prime Minister Trudeau and his Health Minister John Munro promised the electorate that they would improve the country's international hockey standing (Canada finished fifth in the 1969 Tournament) and the commercial National Hockey League has so pillaged amateur and semi-professional hockey in Canada that under existing rules we can no longer field a non-commercial team worthy of international play (Canadian Dimension, July 1969). "National selt-respect" required that we pull out of the championship.

Who got to Brundage first, knowing full well that the undaunted champion of Victorianism would react precisely in the manner he did?

▣

The Europeans stood to gain from the departure of their most troublesome opponent. Without Hockey Canada, a high place in the standings would be easier for everybody and IIHF councils could remain as cosy as ever.

The NHL also stands to gain by keeping the world tournament officially amateur. Like all good multi-national corporations, the League hopes to expand its commercial operations to western Europe. If the IIHF had endorsed open hockey, it would have stimulated the development of fully professional leagues in Europe. Under such conditions, it would be much more difficult for the NHL, with its expensive franchises, to establish a foothold. Now the market is still wide open.

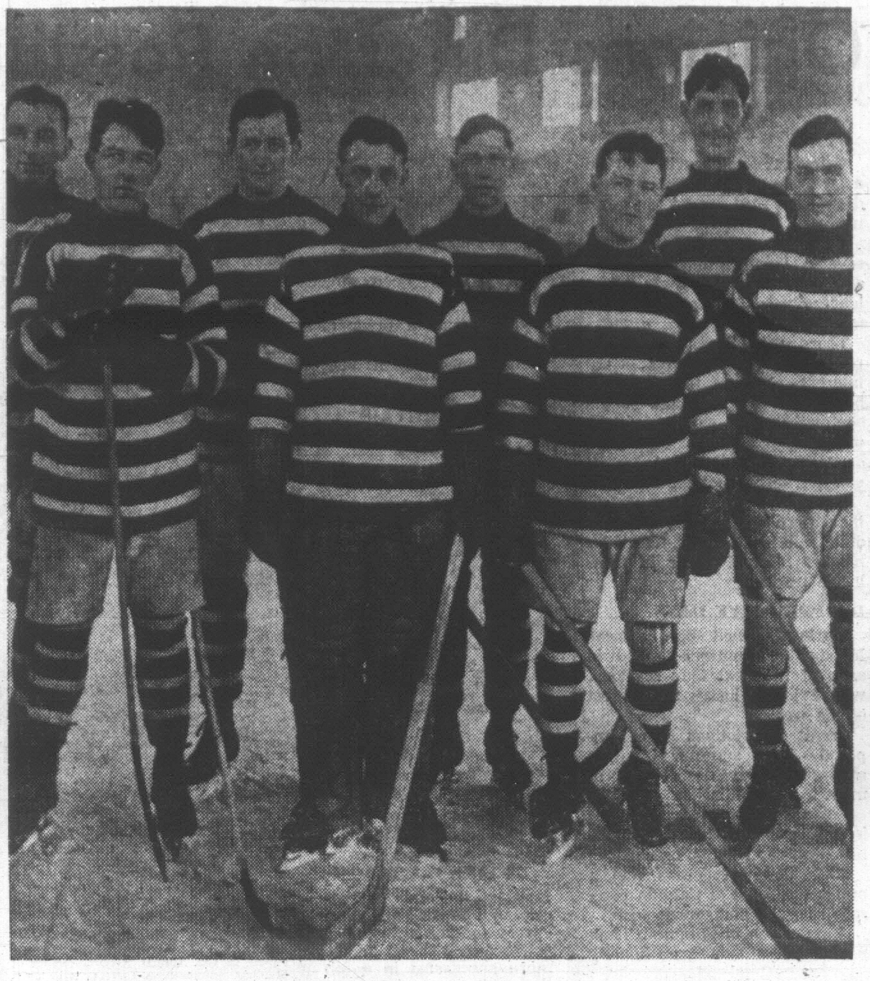
Maybe Brundage pulled the trigger all by himself. According to all reports, the Defender of the Faith takes on all the mannerisms of a betrayed husband whenever he hears of an association between an athlete and a dollar bill. Or is there another Brundage under that bluster and self-righteousness, who is quietly scheming to drive all amateur sport into the hands of the North American commercial sports entrepreneurs? After all, he did make his millions as a capitalist.

Whoever touched off the events that condemned Hockey Canada — whether it was the Russians, the NHL, or Avery Brundage himself — we can only decry the result. Internationally, sport is again discovered to be the pawn of propaganda politics.

In Canada, too, the future is much bleaker than it has been in recent years. Without Hockey Canada, the NHL can once again exploit our national sports culture without challenge, by skimming off our best young athletes and sending them off to the United States to make a commercial profit for U.S. entrepreneurs.

Hockey Canada presented another example that all Canadians could follow: that of the mix of sport and career. Very few persons who want to participate themselves in sport can identify with the NHL's image of the player who devotes his entire life to the game and shuts himself off from everything else. But national hockey players who teach and study along with their hockey playing provide easy models to integrate participatory, recreational sport with a normal life and responsibilities.

So bang the drum slowly, play the fife mournfully. Hockey Canada and the National Team were noble experiments, but they got it in the neck.



. . . In the days when political intrigues were unknown and Avery Brundage was a boy.

New Amchitka Blast Might Make Waves

By ANDREW WILSON

Turkey's recent earthquake disaster must add fuel to the debate among scientists about the danger of earthquakes resulting from an underground nuclear test.

A test is to be held in the Aleutian Islands shortly, in which the U.S. Atomic Energy Authority will explode a device of between two and three megatons — believed to be the largest ever exploded underground. The test is said to be necessary to the development of the Safeguard anti-missile system, which uses nuclear warheads to intercept incoming enemy rockets.

●

The chosen site is at a place called Amchitka. A pilot explosion, of only one megaton, was made last autumn at the bottom of a 4,000-foot deep shaft five feet in diameter.

Two other shafts have been bored for 2-3 kiloton tests, of which there will eventually be four or five. The completed shafts are 6,000 feet deep and have diameters of eight and 10 feet respectively.

This is the deepest that a nuclear device has ever been exploded, and because the shafts go far below the water table of the Aleutian Islands, there are fears that the test will contaminate water supplies.

But the greatest anxiety of critics of the Aleutians project, who are said to include some of President Nixon's own advisers, is that the test may trigger off a natural earthquake, which in turn could cause a tidal wave known in the Pacific as a tsunami. The creation of tsunamis makes Aleutian earthquakes greatly feared in the Pacific area. They occur when an earthquake causes the bottom of the ocean to rise or fall.

IMAGINE IT
UNDERGROUND

Most tsunamis are about two foot high, but major earthquakes can create a much higher wall of water. Because of the shape of the ocean bed off Alaska, tsunamis can reach speeds of 500 miles per hour and travel for thousands of miles. In 1946, 1952, 1957 and 1962 giant tsunamis caused death and destruction in Hawaii, the Japanese islands and the Pacific coast of North America.

●

The Atomic Energy Authority says it is confident of the safety of the Aleutian test on the basis of its experience with underground tests in the Nevada desert.

None has produced a major earthquake. But seismologists say the geological structure of the Aleutians is very different from that of Nevada, and that Amchitka may stand directly above the so-called Alleutian Thrust Fault — a long discontinuity 25 miles beneath the earth's surface whose exact location has never been fixed.

The Thrust Fault causes dozens of small earthquakes each year. It has also been responsible for several major earthquakes in the Alaska area.

●

Prominent among those who fear that the H-test will cause a similar occurrence are two University of California physics professors — Nina Byers and Marvin Chester. Their campaign to call a halt to the tests may receive a boost when the effects of underground tests come up for examination by the Muskie congressional subcommittee on Air and Water pollution later this year.

Lab-Conceived Human Birth Not Far Off

By VICTOR COHN

The beginning of human life — the joining of male sperm and female egg cell — is regularly taking place outside the womb in a George Washington University laboratory near Washington, D.C.

Dr. Cecil B. Jacobson here is among a number of American, British and other scientists who are now urgently exploring the biological frontier commonly called "test-tube birth."

It is an exploding frontier. The birth of a baby conceived in the laboratory could come very soon, many authorities believe.

Dr. Jacobson is not trying to grow "test-tube" human babies, only to learn to start a baby in the lab, then transfer it to a human mother.

Like others, he has successfully implanted laboratory-fertilized egg cells in animals (in his lab, rabbits and rats) to have them develop into full-term newborns.

But he arrests the growth of human pre-embryos after 18 hours, when they have progressed in complexity from one to four cells.

Then — his sophisticated contribution to this young field — he studies the thread-like chromosomes of these lab-born beginnings of life to see whether they are normal.

Chromosomes, strings of molecules inside each cell, are man's units of heredity. Their analysis is vital if starting babies in the laboratory is to become safe, with a normal child the happy end-point.

The GWU scientist worked for several months in Britain last year, in a laboratory at Cambridge University. Doctors collaborating with other Cambridge scientists said only a few weeks ago that they intend to implant a lab-grown embryo soon in a childless mother.

"It should be possible within a year," Dr. Patrick Steptoe predicted. But his current patient, Mrs. Sylvia Allen, said: "I'm expecting D-day in about two to six weeks from now."

Blocked Tubes

Mrs. Allen is childless because she has blocked fallopian tubes. Her husband's sperm simply cannot reach her ova or egg cells to fertilize them. But a laboratory-grown embryo, the product of her ovum and his sperm, could readily be implanted beyond the blocked point.

"This is why I'm working on this," Jacobson insists. "I'm not working on it to make babies in a test tube, but to help people.

"We want to help couples have normal children. It doesn't seem a problem to most individuals — until they have difficulty.

"There is another reason now why this work is urgent. There is good evidence — most probably because of increasing environmental and chemical pollution, affecting our genes — that our children will have a much greater problem producing normal children."

Science in this case, he maintains, has to be ready to give them all the help that it can, to maintain the quality of the human race.

Jacobson — head of a reproductive genetics unit in GWU's department of obstetrics and gynecology — started his work on laboratory fertilization four years ago. He made his first medical progress report in 1968.

The other day he made another — and in fact in a pair of talks at meetings in Washington of the American College of Surgeons, then the American Fertility Society, he described his unit's main goal; "to monitor the reproduction of man."

To this end, he said first, his group has examined the fetuses or embryonic material spontaneously aborted by more than 600 women in the past three years.

One U.S. conception in six results in a spontaneous abortion rather than a full-term baby. In one case in three, Jacobson has found, the cause may be found in faulty chromosomes.

Chemical Information

Chromosomes — 46 in each cell, half from the father, half from the mother — determine every inborn thing about us. Each set carries all the chemical information that makes us black or white, male or female, short or tall — and normal or abnormal.

Most abnormal fetuses are naturally aborted. But not all. Three babies in 100 have some defect. One third of these have some plainly apparent chromosome abnormality.

Hence, Jacobson said, it is "crucial" for the woman who aborts or miscarries — the two are the same — to ask her doctor: "Why? Will I abort again? What did the aborted material show?" The answer comes in large part from chromosome analysis.

Hence, he said too, doctors who would engage in test-tube human fertilization must also learn to read the chromosome record.

He told fellow doctors of reading it both in human cells and those of scores of animals — rats, mice, rabbits and, in Britain last summer, the chromosomes of hundreds of embryonic pigs.

And he reported fertilizing 51 human ova, egg cells from 18 women, patients in the hospital for various reasons: hysterectomies, removal of ovaries, other ovarian surgery.

In each case — he demonstrated the dramatic process in slides and time-lapse films speeded up 100 times — one or more swimming, tadpole-like human sperm approached a round egg cell just as they would inside a woman's body.

With a sperm's entry, the egg cell quickly began changing in structure and form. Soon it was ready to split, in the process of cell division that ultimately results in a whole human being.

Before the camera eye, egg cell after egg cell slowly undulated and moved in alternate periods of activity and inactivity.

Yet only in 13 of the 51 human fertilizations did the process result not only in cell division but also in chromosome replication: manufacture of an identical set of chromosomes for each new cell.

Only these 13 cases, Dr. Jacobson maintained, can be regarded as successful fertilizations.

He stressed this point. For it demonstrates that trying to start babies in the laboratory is no simple game. It can often result in faulty sets of chromosomes, and these obviously must be eliminated.

Will a set of such cells ever be allowed to grow into a complete human being in the laboratory, without ever knowing a human womb?

So far nothing like this has been achieved either in human material or animals, and in fact, Jacobson reported, "most people have trouble keeping anything alive beyond a few days."

Many scientists think such a step will come someday. This has raised fears of future genetic engineering and manipulation of whole races by unscrupulous bio-dictators.

"We're very far," Jacobson maintained, "from any such end.

The recently announced British goal — giving a childless woman a start on a normal baby — he considers another matter, "a logical next step," though he himself intends to wait until he is more certain of a normal offspring.

Ample Demand

In most such cases, he points out, the sperm and egg cell could be provided by husband and wife, with both cells examined for genetic normalcy.

In other cases where a woman is sterile or habitually produces genetically abnormal ova — the egg cell might be provided by another woman: a normal donor. He thinks many women who want to bear babies would accept this.

He feels sure about one thing: when the new techniques are ready, there will be ample demand.

From a Start on the Times

By ART STOTT

Years ago I sauntered with a boy close to me along a dirt road at Shawnigan in the warmth of a sublime summer evening. The rays of the setting sun glinted on the needles of tall firs bordering the road and picked out in delicate hues the fine lines of cobwebs among their branches. The air was still. The sounds of the forest were muted. The smell of trees, ferns and the dirt road itself blended harmoniously.

Stott

It was a time for low-voiced talk, for the hesitant confidences of a youngster, for the sharing of impressions his small experience of living had given him.

"I guess," he told me, "that I know only two famous Canadians—Archie McKinnon and Bruce Hutchison."

The comment sprang from an easy association of ideas. The McKinnons came up for "their day" with us at the lake each summer—a day of sheer enjoyment—and were due the next morning. And on evening walks we occasionally met Bruce walking and talking on his after-dinner stroll from further along the lake.

★ ★ ★

I asked the boy if perhaps friendship was influencing his judgment. He didn't think so. Everybody knew what Archie had done and Bruce was the best Canadian he'd heard of in the writing business, knew all the important people and had turned out books.

Yesterday evening—the day chosen by Stu Keate to host an impressive testimonial dinner to Bruce Hutchison, marking his 52 years in journalism—recollection of that walk returned to me. No tribute to Bruce carried greater sincerity than that of the young boy. And it was my turn to decide what influence friendship might have on my assessment.

There are obvious yardsticks with which to measure a man's stature in his particular field. The honors that come his way officially provide one—and Bruce has had honors in abundance. Critical analysis of his writing is another. The standing Bruce has in the craft attests his ability in that area. The confidence reposed in him by leading figures in the public life of the continent and beyond provide a further indication of his merit. Doors open to Hutchison in Ottawa, Washington and elsewhere. He has met leading personalities in politics and statecraft in Canada, the United States, Britain, Germany, Japan, Taiwan and way points. By any conventional standard, he has achieved high success.

★ ★ ★

The ingredients of accomplishment in his case are no secret. To unusual ability he has welded hard work, careful use of time, voracious reading and a recognition of the need for health, which he has maintained with strenuous physical activity, sawing wood, building, making a garden, finding exercise in outdoor living.

As the story has it, his career in journalism started just over a half-century ago at the old Victoria Times.

He and a fellow Victoria High School student, Paul Clyde, had come to Ben Nicholas for advice on a debate. Ben had talked to them, helped them, and remembered the intense, wiry boy when he found he needed a sports editor young enough to hold when others of military age were leaving the paper to fight in the First World War. Bruce came on the staff. Journalistically he never looked back.

Beside Benny, there were other mentors along the way—P. C. Rawling of the old Province, Roy Brown of the Sun, Canada's immortalized John Dafoe of the Winnipeg Free Press and the coterie with which Dafoe surrounded himself.

The Hutchison bent for politics emerged early. His full-page features with cartoons of his own limning brought a cheerful lampoon of British Columbia legislators to the Times and the Province.

His early legislative columns, under the heading Loose Ends, with authorship thinly disguised under the transposed initials H.B.W., won early, sustained and wide readership. He hit the slicks with topnotch fiction, "Strawberry Roan" and "Park Avenue Logger" among them, and then came a series of books, mostly of Canadian political-historical content, but interspersed with sensitive pictures of the country he loves and sympathetic treatment of the Canadian ethos.

During his various transfers to newspapers across the country—and while he improved his international reputation as Canadian correspondent for The Christian Science Monitor as well as with articles in leading circulation American magazines—he came back for a time to the editorial chair of this paper, giving it its most impressive journalistic figure since, and probably including, Ben Nicholas.

There is much more to the Hutchison half-century in the craft. But voluminous as the complete biography would be, it tells only part of the story of the man.

It would conceal the shyness of Bruce Hutchison frequently hiding behind abruptness. It would not mention, because such mention is taboo, a multitude of benefactions. It could not reveal the sentiment, even sentimentality at times, of a warm-hearted person whose affection is treasured for friends. It could, though, disclose his insatiable appetite for crises, his bounding enthusiasm for watersheds crossed or to be crossed, and the scalpel of an intellect which cuts to the core of things.

When it had been told, Bruce would dismiss that inconsequential subject with his perpetual query: "What's new?"

Two Irritants Stall Wall St.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved downward this week although it appeared for a few days it might be building a base for an assault on the 800 resistance level.

For most of the week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials held firm despite increased numbers of declining issues. But on Friday the Dow Jones dropped, too.

Some analysts thought the market is in much the same situation as it was in late January and early February when fourth-quarter earnings reports were being announced.

The peak of the period for reports on first-quarter earnings wi'l be over in another week or two.

While elimination of this temporary restraining force, and the other temporary irritant — selling to raise money for the April 15 U.S. personal income tax — may not be enough to perk up the market, it could help pave the way for the revival of optimism.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 1.38 to 790.46 for the week.

Bonds Close Higher

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian bond market closed higher in quiet trading this week.

Dealers are reporting that investors are cautious, waiting full details on the Canada Refund issue, on Monday.

Day-to-day money was available Friday, at the lowest rate of the week, 6 per cent.

They traded throughout the week at 7 per cent.

Three- and six-month treasury bills traded Friday, at 6.80 and 6.55 per cent, respectively, also the lowest rate of the week.

The 90- and 182-day treasury bills ranged on the week from 6.80 and 6.55 per cent to 6.99 and 6.71 per cent, respectively.

In Ottawa the finance department said Friday $375 million of bonds maturing May 1 will be refunded by a cash offering of a new 33-month issue and a 59-month issue 'open to maturity'.

As well, $200 million of a new seven-year-four-month bond will be offered in exchange for holdings of a like par value of 4¼-per-cent government bonds due Sept. 1, 1972. The exchange offer is a partial refunding of $1,267,000,000 of bonds due Sept. 1, 1972, and will reduce the amount coming due on that date to $1,067,000,000.

Opinions Differ on Possible Bank Rate Cut

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets broke a two-week rally this week, dropping moderately in dull trading.

The upswing began after several large American financial institutions cut their prime lending rates to eight per cent from 8½.

There were hopes that the reduction in prime rates — the interest charged to a bank's best customers — would be the beginning of an easing in tight monetary conditions that have depressed Canadian and American markets since last June.

However, when it appeared that there would be no immediate relief in Canada, Canadian markets turned lower in lacklustre trading.

DROPPED FIVE DAYS

Markets opened slightly lower Monday and continued to fall in each of the next four sessions, with Friday's losses the largest of the week.

Credit restrictions were imposed last summer in an attempt by the federal government to fight inflation.

But the government has not indicated that it thinks inflation has been retarded or beaten.

Still, some observers feel a cut in the Bank of Canada bank rate may be announced soon.

A reduction in Canadian bank prime rates has traditionally followed a central bank rate cut.

Observers believe that if such a cut comes, it will not be simply in response to interests rate reductions in the United States but because the Canadian government feels that inflation in Canada has been slowed down.

Another point in favor of a bank rate cut is that federal authorities now face the task of refunding $375,000,000 in bonds and $175,000,000 in special treasury bills falling due May 1.

Nesbitt, Thomson and Co. Ltd. said in a money market letter that it expected the bank rate to be cut before the new issue is announced to create more settled market conditions.

But Burns Bros. and Denton Ltd., disagree. "At present, the monetary authorities appear content to hold the line, and prospects of a bank rate change are slight until the May 1 refunding is completed."

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials were down 2.73 to 182.79, golds 7.17 to 166.69, western oils 4.01 to 195.58 and base metals 1.51 to 116.0.

Volume was 10,971,000 shares compared with 11,286,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 485-304 with 200 issues unchanged.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Tax Courts Play Important Role

In a democracy there are two chief agencies for law reform — Parliament, which has the power to speedily amend, repeal and enact law, and the courts which have the authority to read new interpretations into old law. Both vehicles are essential, so they operate independently.

In the current tax reform discussion, the value of Parliament's contribution cannot yet be assessed. However, the importance of the tax courts is beyond dispute. Over the years the judges give judicial interpretation to existing law in the tax cases that come before them. The change in the law through judicial interpretation is often imperceptible, but nevertheless pervasive.

A striking example of law reform through the agency of the tax courts can be seen in a recent judgment of the President of the Exchequer Court, Mr. Justice Jackett. In effect, he took an old suit and tailored it to fit modern styles.

The issue before him arose from an appeal from the Tax Appeal Board and involved facts which are familiar to all businessmen. A floor and wall tile supplier from Toronto opened a subsidiary company in Montreal. In the two taxation years under review, the taxpayer had contributed $8,000 and $10,000 respectively to various local charitable organizations.

In each of those years, the value of the gifts exceeded 10 per cent of the company's income. The Income Tax Act provides that a corporation can deduct charitable gifts from its income only to the extent that the gifts don't exceed 10 per cent of its income.

PRESSURE IGNORED

With the heavy pressure exerted by the general community for financial aid to worthwhile projects, there are many taxpayers who annually make charitable gifts in excess of the present deductible limit and face the costly non-deductibility difficulty. It is surprising to many that the government's current tax reform proposals don't increase the limit. In the present United States Tax Reform Bill, the charitable deductibility limit has been expanded to 50 per cent of the taxpayer's income.

In any event, this taxpayer wasn't discouraged at having exceeded the 10 per cent charitable gift limit. The company proceeded to deduct the excess from its income on the rarely admitted, but frequently accurate footing, that these gifts weren't charitable gifts at all, they were ordinary expenses of doing business. If you contributed to a customer's favorite charity, he gave you business, if you didn't. . . .

The tax department was distressed at the apparent cynicism of the taxpayer. Applying its own departmental motto "it is better to receive than refund," the revenue authorities disallowed the deduction.

The taxpayer, obviously anxious to expose what it considered the hypocrisy of calling contributions charitable gifts when in fact they are more frequently a genuine cost of doing business in certain communities, appealed to the Tax Appeal Board.

STERN LECTURE

The case was heard by assistant board chairman, R. S. W. Fordham, QC. The board ruled against the taxpayer saying that charity is charity, and promotion is promotion, but it would be wrong for the court to acknowledge that the two kinds of expenses are interchangeable. Indeed, the board gently chided the taxpayer and delivered a stern lecture complete with Biblical quotes as to just what constituted a charitable motivation.

Undaunted, the company appealed to the Exchequer Court, where Justice Jackett agreed with its position and substantially allowed the majority of the claim for tax deduction of the "gifts." His Lordship was satisfied on the evidence presented, that there was a direct connection between the charitable gifts and the business obtained by the company.

He ruled that some charitable gifts, all under $100 each, were actually charitable gifts and deductible as such, because their only business purposes was to avoid criticism of the company, not establish or maintain business contacts. But the rest were akin to advertising expenses, which under the circumstances, and having regard to the amount of business they generated, were valid, reasonable and necessary business promotion expenses, and hence, deductible.

LAW ADVANCED

The court dispelled the idea that business morality had any role to play in deciding whether or not an expense, was or wasn't deductible.

The judgment advances the law considerably; this modern interpretation is a reform whose scope equals many of the reforms proposed in the White Paper, and opens the way for many of the reforms proposed in the White Paper, and opens the way for many similar deductions which previously weren't considered deductible at all. The judgment draws attention, by implication, to many other reforms the government should have included and which would improve its proposed tax package.

As the Carter Report recommended, all outlays made as part of the profit or income-earning process, should be deductible at some point in time. This would include contributions to political parties which are increasingly and necessarily a cost and responsibility of both businessmen and employed taxpayers. As well, the royal commission urged that business should be able to deduct reserves for future claims resulting from product warranty. It should follow that professionals should be able to deduct reserves for potential negligence claims; employees should be able to deduct their cost of transportation to and from work, and so on.

If these reforms are costly to government revenues, Canadians would willingly accept higher tax rates as the price they must pay for a commercially enlightened tax system.

40,000-Mile Guarantee

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — B. F. Goodrich Canada Ltd. announced today that it is offering a 40,000-mile written guarantee on its radial car tires.

The guarantee, effective immediately, is on a replacement basis pegged to the miles of wear received. Thus, if a motorist received 20,000 miles of wear, he would get a new set of tires at half price.

Goodrich's radial tires have six plies of cord, four of them circling the tire beneath the tread. The most popular size sells for just under $60 each.

The company said it is the only tire mileage warranty offered by a manufacturer.

General Electric

General Electric Corp. has reported a $42.6 million loss for the first quarter of 1970.

Fred J. Borch, chairman, said sales dropped 22 per cent to $1.56 billion during the three-month period. He attributed the decline in sales revenue to a five-month strike which began at the end of last October.

During the first quarter GE had earnings of $77.5 million, or 86 cents per share.

Borch said that while the effects of the strike were felt throughout the first quarter of 1970, company operations in March were profitable.

New Trust Firm

The Bank of Montreal and the Bank of N. T. Butterfield and Son Ltd., Bermuda, have formed a new trust company.

Known as the Montfield Trust Co. Butterfield will own 60 per cen and the B of M 40 per cent of the new venture.

Captial will be $128,400 with Butterfield providing accommodation and personnel as well as the services of the Butterfield Executor and Trust Co. Butterfield was founded in 1858 and has assets exceeding $200 million.

Bowaters

A record net profit of $26 million was reported by Bowaters Paper Corp. Ltd. last year, up substantially from 1968. The London-based company has major paper-making operations in Newfoundland. Pre-tax profit was up $4.35 million to $23.89 million.

The company expressed concern about mounting paper imports to Britain from Canada and other countries, urging the government to encourage more waste paper recovery, review power costs and imcrease domestic tree production.

Electric Reduction

Negotiations to sell millions of dollars worth of liquid phosphorus to Nippon Chemical Industrial Co. Ltd., Japan, are being conducted by Electric Reduction Co. of Canada Ltd., which has production facilities in Newfoundland.

The bulk element would be shipped in special tankers to Kinuura, near Nagoya, in cooperation with Toyo Menka Kaisha Ltd.

A contract for the sale will mean the first movement of liquid phosphorus across the Pacific, the first Japanese agreement for ERCO from its new plant, and the first application on an international basis for bulk phosphorous handling.

Canada Safeway

Canada Safeway Ltd. reports higher sales but lower profits in its 1969 annual report.

Consolidated sales including overseas divisions increased 6.8 per cent to $645.2 million from $604.3 million in 1968, board chairman Walter J. Kraft of Vancouver siad.

Net earnings were $12.55 million, an increase from $11.78 million in the previous year.

Totals include $94.4 million sales and $1.98 million earnings from overseas operations in United Kingdom, West Germany and Australia. Earnings of Canadian operations were down $275,115 from 1968, a decrease of 2.5 per cent.

Seaboard

Seaboard Life Assurance Co. reports a modest profit of $2,000 for 1969 compared with a loss of $144,000 in 1968.

President Harry Seed said premium income increased 17 per cent from $2.79 million in 1968 to $3.28 million. Assets increased from $4.29 million in 1968 to $5.39 million in 1969.

Seed said the highlight of the year was the company's decision to acquire the inventory of in-force policies of Cosmopolitan Life Assurance Co. of Edmonton.

Q Broadcasting

Q Broadcasting Ltd. reports net earnings increased 47 per cent to $119,000 from $81,000 in the six-month period ended Feb. 28.

Gross income increased 16 per cent to $1 million from $935,000 in the previous six months, an interim report to shareholders said.

Hiram Walker

Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. reports profit for the six months to Feb. 28 of $25.17 million or $1.46 a share, up from $23.47 million or $1.36 a share in the corresponding period of 1969.

Sales for the distillery totalled $390.15 million, up from $363.58 million. All figures are in U.S. funds.

'Lornex Deal With Japan In Jeopardy'

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Rio Algom Mines Ltd. said today that federal regulations on ownership of uranium mines in Canada will cause a reduction in exploration and development of new uranium ore bodies.

R. D. Armstrong told the company's annual meeting that in the case of Rio Algom the practical effect of causing curtailment of the company's exploration program since they would limit Rio Algom's ownership of discoveries."

He said the proposed regulations would also impose "severe restrictions" on the company's ability to arrange financing for new projects whether or not they were related to the development of uranium ore bodies.

Mr. Armstrong said British Columbia's new Mineral Processing Act has placed in jeopardy the sales and financing arrangements made for the giant Lornex copper subsidiary in British Columbia.

He said the company is seeking a solution to the situation "but it is not possible to predict the outcome as of this date."

Car Sales Decline

TORONTO (CP) — Optimistic car dealers at the first of the year predicted that sales for 1970 would be as good as in 1969, although not likely any better.

So far they have been half right: It hasn't been any better.

First-quarter sales figures from the big three Canadian manufacturers show hefty sales losses. Only American Motors reported an increase.

First-quarter vehicle sales figures:

Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. — 44,511 units, down 20.8 per cent from 56,214 in 1969.

General Motors of Canada Ltd. — 61,983, down 33.2 per cent from 92,779 in 1969.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. — 28,384, down 16.9 per cent from 34,585 in 1979.

American Motors Canada Ltd. — 4,944, up from 4,493 in 1969.

The Canadian automobile industry set sales and production records in 1969, with toal sales of 889,453 units. Sales slowed late in the year and manufacturers began to reduce production.

Dealers attribute this year's sales slump to the tight money supply. Most noted that buyers are turning to the intermediate-sized cars.

Ford said sales of its recently-introduced Maverick were the best of any new car entry in the 66-year hstory of its Canadian subsidiary.

Chretien To Okay Park

Federal Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien is expected in Victoria on April 21 to sign into existence a west coast national park.

The park will include Long Beach, the Effingham Islands in Barkley Sound and the 50-mile West Coast trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Chretien has expressed a wish to see the trail and if time permits is expected to inspect a part of it in the Clo-oose area—about 2½ miles south of the Nitinat.

B.C. Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan and park officials would be invited.

Deputy Minister Harold McWilliam said provincial planners will first concentrate on acquiring privately-owned land at Long Beach before tackling the Effingham Islands and the west coast trail.

"We are going to start right away," he said.

He expected no trouble in assembling the land on the Effingham Islands, but he said the width of the buffer zone for the west coast trail will not be determined until federal and provincial planners complete a survey of the coast by 1972

The creation of an adequate buffer zone for the trail is a major concern of recreationists and outdoor groups who want to preserve the wilderness aspects of the coast.

They also want two lakes included in the buffer zone — the Cheewhat Lake, situated about 2 miles inland from Cloose and Tsusiat Lake.

The Cheewhat is an important sockeye spawning ground and to log off the trees around the lake and its creeks would destroy the fishing ground for years.

The lake has also a recreation potential because it is connected to the sea by a navigable river which at present is clogged with blow downs.

Tsusiat, a much larger lake is situated about eight miles north of Nitinat — about 1½ miles from the sea.

Outdoor groups want to preserve a belt of trees around the lake to preserve its amenties, fish and wildlife.

OWEN-FLOOD

City Lawyer to Join Irish Bar In Ancient Rites in Dublin

Dermod Owen-Flood, a prominent Victoria lawyer, is returning to his native Dublin next month to be admitted to the Irish bar.

He will be ceremonially received into what is traditionally known as the King's Inns—an order of justice reaching far back into Ireland's history.

"This does not mean I shall give up my Victoria practice," the 33-year-old lawyer said, "but it will give me the right to appear before the courts of Ireland should it be required."

Born in Dublin in 1931, Owen-Flood is the son of an eye surgeon. He studied at Trinity College, Dublin, and at the University of Munich, Germany, before coming to Canada in 1957.

Subsequently he was admitted to the bar of Alberta and practised there before coming to British Columbia in 1964.

To qualify for admission to the bar of Ireland, Owen-Flood had to learn Gaelic—the traditional language of the Emerald Isle.

"It is a fiersome tongue," he said, "but I managed to learn enough of it to gain admission to the King's Inns."

HELLO THERE!

There was reception committee of one waiting for Philadelphia outfielder Tony Taylor after he was picked off first base in third inning of National League baseball game Friday. Taylor attempted to reach second base and found Pittsburgh's Gene Alley waiting with ball to make tag. Taylor and Phillies went on to blank Pirates 2-0 for third straight victory. (AP Wirephoto)

Bill WALKER

Here are some leftovers to nibble on between periods tonight, and tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night. Gosh! And somehow the Masters Golf deserves a look-see as well.

Quiet mother!

Remember the post-game disagreement between the two Patricks, Lester and Frank, in which blows were reportedly exchanged and which was referred to in an earlier item in this corner?

Here's why it happened.

Archie Wills was sports editor of the Times at that time and recalls the heated rivalry between the brothers well.

"It was in a game between Vancouver and the Cougars here," he said, "and began over a disputed goal."

This was the era when the goal judges stood inside the playing surface at the back of the net. The nets weren't quite the same design as those of today, and often were knocked from their footings, Archie said.

On this particular occasion, Helgie Bostrum of Vancouver let go a shot that entered the net either at or before the time the goal had been knocked askew.

The goal judge signalled "goal," and referee Mickey Ion upheld his decision.

Lester took violent exception to the ruling.

The late Byron (Boss) Johnson and brother Johnny were the goal judges at the time, and it is not known if Lester berated the guilty one. But he did dispute the matter with brother Frank who, besides running the Vancouver club, also was league president.

●

The argument continued long after the game, and also on the way to the midnight boat, which the Vancouver team was boarding. And it was very bitter most of the time.

"It wasn't a fair goal," was Lester's point, and, as it was the only goal of the game, Lester perhaps had reason to be annoyed.

As it was, he finally demanded what Frank, as league president, was going to do about it.

Frank finally agreed that the argument was valid, and suggested that if the result of that game had any bearing on the standings at the end of the season, the game would be replayed.

Lester was appeased, but as it turned out, there was no need to play the game over again.

Still, the incident serves to prove, again, the deep sincerity of purpose the two brothers had.

On hockey, too, there was a reference in a news story the other day to the fact that this was the first year since 1926 that no Canadian teams were in the Stanley Cup playoffs. It should have said, perhaps, that it was the first time Montreal Canadiens and Toronto had missed. Because in the 1926 season there definitely were two teams from Canada.

One was from Montreal, the other from Victoria. And in that series, Jocko Anderson of the Victoria Cougars broke his leg in the first game in a collision with Babe Seibert, and the Maroons went on to take the cup. The Cougars were defending champions, having won it from Montreal Canadiens the year before.

●

And some shorties — Nanaimo Hornets, Second Division Rugby League champs this year with an 8-1-1 record, will move up to the first division next year . . . and there won't be any hole left, because they are going to field a second-division team as well, as will Navy, and probably Castaways . . . the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League has rejected a suggestion that Inter-City League games featuring an all-star team be played on a regular basis against teams from other northwest centres . . . or did you know that "Hank" Greenberg has registered for the 10th annual summer hockey school at Esquimalt, July 20 to Sept. 5? . . . This "Hank" is six years of age.

Did you know that the top five lifetime hitters in the majors are in the National League? They are Roberto Clemente (.314), Hank Aaron (.313), Matty Alou (.312), Rico Carty (.311) and Pete Rose (.309) . . . The Du Maurier international ski championship is an event of the past . . . The Imperial Tobacco Co. has dropped sponsorship because of its policy: "To engage in no endeavor which constitutes a direct appeal to youth" . . . It is the plan of the ski association to carry on with the world cup event which began in 1966 . . . Pat Kelly of the Kansas City Royals is a brother of Leroy Kelly, running back for the Cleveland Browns football club . . . Lenny Wilkens has been signed to a two-year contract as coach of Seattle Super-Sonics . . . The Sonics closed with a rush this season, winning 21 of the final 26 games, but missed the playoffs . . . If Curt Flood wins his case against pro baseball, it could mean a big payoff as in an anti-trust suit such as Flood's treble damages are virtually automatic . . . Flood is suing for $1 million.

And, get this, there is a revolt brewing on the pro golf trail . . . the younger pros are complaining that the more successful of their kind are pre-empting all the best caddies . . . They can afford to send their caddies to a tournament days in advance, study the course, and chart every blade of grass . . . The younger players say this puts them at a disadvantage . . . the charge was to be heard this week at the Masters . . . In that regard, it has been said that Billy Casper has his caddie on a $12,000 retainer . . . Perhaps the caddies should get together and form their own guild . . . the benefits are good.

Aaron Still Hurdling Baseball's Milestones

By Associated Press

Atlanta Braves Hank Aaron, with the bases loaded in the third inning, slammed a Tom Griffin pitch into the left field seats for his 556th career homer and 13th grand slam that launched the Braves to a 5-0 victory over the Houston Astros Friday night. Lefty George Stone hurled a six-hitter for Atlanta.

It was the season opener for the Astros.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis beat the New York Mets 7-3, the Chicago Cubs nipped Montreal Expos 2-1, Philadelphia Phillies blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0, San Diego Padres trounced Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 and San Francisco Giants edged Cincinnati Reds 4-3.

In the American League, it was California Angeles 11, Kansas City Royals 7; Boston Red Sox 4, Washington Senators 1; Chicago White Sox 5, Milwaukee Brewers 4; Baltimore Orioles 3, Detroit Tigers 2 in 10 innings.

Aaron's four RBI boosted his career total to 1,732, pulling him even with Honus Wagner for the ninth spot on the all-time list. He also took over 10th place in career hits with 2,963, passing Sam Crawford.

BIG CROWD FOR WIN

The Cardinals thrilled a record St. Louis opening game crowd of 47,568 by scoring all seven runs on six hits in the third inning and coasting past the Mets.

Singles by Lou Brock and Jose Cardenal and a walk to Richie Allen set things up and Joe Torre doubled the first two runs across. Leron Lee's double made it 3-0 and the Cards continued their assault after Ray Sadecki replaced starter Jim McAndrew. Cardenal singled home the final run.

Ron Hunt opened the eighth inning with a pinch double and Bobby Bonds singled him home with a tie-breaking run as the Giants ended Cincinnati's winning streak at four games. The Reds had tied the score in the top of the eighth inning on Pete Rose's single and a triple by Bernie Carbo.

Ken Henderson, who scored the Giants' first run in the second, singled home two more in the fifth.

PADRES DOWN DODGERS

San Diego's triumph over the winless Dodgers was highlighted by Nate Colbert's two-run homer in a four-run first inning and the relief pitching of Dave Roberts, who retired the first 17 batters he faced.

The Cubs were one out away from their third consecutive defeat when Ron Santo singled and Johnny Callison unloaded a two-run homer, ruining a fine performance by Montreal's Joe Sparma, who allowed only three hits over the first eight innings. It was the fourth straight setback for the winless Expos.

BASEBALL RULE BENDS IN MONTREAL WEATHER

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal's 40-degree weather Friday caused a slight bending of one of baseball's controversial pitching rules.

Umpire Paul Pryor ruled in the third inning that pitchers could put their hands to their mouths after the cold weather made it nearly impossible to keep hands warm.

Baseball rules prohibit a pitcher from putting his hands to his mouth.

Cocky Yancy Doesn't Expect Any Bad Rounds

Shares Lead With Littler; Knudson Six Shots Behind

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Confident Bert Yancey shot a 70 Friday to match Gene Littler at five-under-par 139 for the lead at the halfway mark in the Masters golf tournament.

"I'm capable of two more good rounds," Yancey said Friday. "Somebody else had better shoot better to beat me, because I don't think I'll turn in any bad rounds."

Besides the American contingent, Yancey withstood golfers from Canada, South Africa and Japan.

Billy Casper stormed in with 68 to trail by a stroke at 140. The Bonita, Calif., star was tied with young Bob Lunn of Sacramento, Calif., who had a second-round 70.

Gary Player, the little South African trying to allow talk of threats on his life fade away. used sensational iron play to shoot 68 and moved into contention at 142, three behind the Yancey-Littler tandem.

Takaaki Kono of Yokahoma blazed in with 68 for 143.

And then there's Tommy Aaron the first-day leader at 68. Aaron had early troubles going four over par in the first three holes but fought back, to par the next five holes and shot a sharp 34 on the back nine to tie Player at 142.

KNUDSON SIXTH

George Knudson of Toronto was six off the pace at 145. The lone Canadian in the tournament, he shot a 72 Friday to go with his opening-round 73 Thursday.

Among notables failing to make the cut of 150, six over par, were Ray Floyd at 152 and Argentine Roberto de Vicenzo at 151.

Jack Nicklaus' hope of a fourth Masters green coat faded when he blasted his second shot on the par-five eighth hole into a deep ravine. He shot 75 for 146, seven strokes behind the leaders Arnold Palmer, seeking a fifth title, shot a 73 for 148. Last year's winner, George Archer, shot 72 for 145.

Chelsea, Leeds Battle to Draw In Soccer Final

LONDON (CP)—Leeds United and Chelsea battled to a 2-2 overtime tie today in their English Football Association Cup soccer final, the first time there was a draw in an English Cup final since 1912.

The score was 1-1 at half time and 2-2 at the end of the normal 90 minutes of play.

A sell-out crowd of 100,000 watched at Wembley Stadium as the two English League First Division teams battled for 30 scoreless overtime minutes. The game will be replayed April 29 at Wembley.

Meanwhile, Aberdeen upset Scotland's crack team, Glasgow Celtic, 3-1 in the Scottish FA Cup final at Glasgow.

Aberdeen led 1-0 at half-time on a 27th minute penalty by Joe Harper.

MacKAY SCORES TWO

Celtic, favorites for the European Cup of Champions, did nearly all the attacking but couldn't get a goal. Then in a storming finish MacKay scored two goals for Aberdeen in the 82nd and 89th minutes.

Between those two goals Bobby Lennox got one for Celtic.

At Wembley the game was a grim struggle on a heavy field that had been treated with 100 tons of sand.

The ball bounced badly in the mud and both goals in the first half were soft affairs.

In the 27th minute Eddie McCreadie completely missed his kick on the goal-line and a header by Jackie Charlton trickled in to give Leeds a 1-0 lead.

In the 41st minute Gary Sprake, Leeds' Welsh international goalkeeper, let a shot by Peter Houseman slip through his arms for the equalizer.

GOALIE STANDS OUT

Leeds stepped up the pressure in the second half and only brilliant goalkeeping by Peter Bonetti—one of England's World Cup squad—stopped them.

Bonetti held Leeds at bay until the 83rd minute. Then a header by Allan Clarke hit the post and Mike Jones shot Leeds into a 2-1 lead on the rebound.

The game was even more gruelling than the famed World Cup final of 1966, when England defeated West Germany 4-2 after 30 minutes extra time. At that time the Wembley field was at its best, but today it was deep in mud and the players had difficulty keeping going to the end.

At Glasgow, Aberdeen, with Danish star Henning Boel a strong man in defence, spoiled Celtic's bid for a four-point triumph. Celtic have already won the Scottish League and the Scottish League Cup and were aiming to add the Scottish Cup and the European Cup as well.

Now Aberdeen will go into next season's European Cup of Cup winners.

Closed Champs Tumble Early

WINNIPEG (CP)—Bruce Rollick was muttering out loud, Jennifer Dakin was crying and the Mexican roadrunner kept on running during opening day of the Canadian open badminton championships Friday.

Rollick, Canadian closed singles champion, had reason to mutter as he led the parade of closed champions that tasted defeat Friday.

By the end of the day Rollick, women's singles champ Alison Ridgway, men's doubles winners Jamie Paulson and Yves Pare, women's doubles champions Pat Moody and Nancy McKinley and Pare and Mrs. Moody, the mixed winners, were beaten.

Roy Diaz Gonzalez, nicknamed "the Mexican roadrunner" by opponents, shook off an early bout of nervousness then whipped Rollick 12-15, 15-5, 15-9.

The 17-year-old Mexican champion put on a brilliant display of footwork and net play that had Rollick talking throughout the final two games.

BEATS U.S. STAR

Miss Dakin, an 18-year-old from Toronto was overjoyed as she upsetted ranking U.S. star Caroline Hein of Seattle, Wash., in the morning draw. But she couldn't hold back the tears after beating Mrs. Ridgway in the second round.

Miss Dakin, who won 11-6, 11-5 said she "felt so relaxed in the open, not like in the junior where there was so much pressure."

Paulson, of Calgary, and Pare from Montreal lost to Rob Patterson and Abdul Shaikh of Vancouver 9-15, 15-7, 15-2 in the men's doubles.

JUDY ROLLICK LOSES

Pare and Mrs. Moody were beaten 15-2, 15-10 by Patterson and Mimi Nilssen of Vancouver in the mixed doubles.

LATEST COMPUTER AID . . . . . . FOR BASEBALL MANAGERS

Dial-a-Lineup Time May Soon Be Here

Seattle (AP) — Baseball may be entering the age of dial-a-lineup when a manager can tell a computer the other team's pitcher and find out the best batting order to use against him.

The time might not be that far off, because a Seattle computer analysis firm already has such a program worked out and is positive it can help a team win 20 more games a year.

What's more, the system might go even further into baseball and a general manager will use computer analysis to determine which players in the minors will make it to the major leagues.

One team already has expressed interest in the possibility, say officials of Systems Analysis, Inc., of Seattle. The firm, which prides itself on its creative approach to the computer age, has made trial runs to see if the system would work. They say it would.

"We're still negotiating with an eastern team about it," said Perry Sikes, head of SAI's research and development section.

"We estaimate that it would mean 20 more victories a year, give or take three," he added.

Obviously, managers now use what they consider the best lineup possible, The big difference is a computer's ability to amass factors ranging from a player's past performance to the weather. Another factor is human predictability, Sikes commented. Psychological tests indicate humans are very predictable.

"We've looked at the possibility of using computers in scouting and we believe it can be done," he said. "Human behavior and reactions are among the most predictable things in the world. A computer would be able to use factors scouts can't even begin to use to make predictions."

The system would cost a team perhaps $100,000 a year, depending on how much a team used it. But a team's expenses likely would be reduced if the system lives up to SAI's expectations.

TRACK OWNER BOOKED ON CAMPAIGN CHARGES

MIAMI (AP)—Eugene Mori, owner of Hialeath race track, surrendered Friday to authorities and was booked on two charges of making illegal political campaign contributions.

Mori's arrest was based on charges signed by State Attorney Richard Gerstein, who said Mori made an alleged $25,000 contribution to the 1966 re-election campaign of then Gov. Haydon Burns.

Meanwhile, Gerstein said Friday he was preparing to file a suit in circuit court here seeking to dissolve the corporations operating Tropical Park and Hiahleah race tracks.

Brygadyr Bows In Boxing Meet

LANGLEY — Fred Brygadyr, the only Victoria area belter to taste opening-night action, was shunted to the sidelines Friday in the B.C. amateur boxing championships.

Brygadyr, a member of the Langford Boxing Club, dropped a decision to Dave Wood of Prince George in the 85-pound division

Winners of senior events here will compete in the Western Canada championships in Winnipeg May 1-2. The Canadian championships follow May 30, in New Westminster.

Control of midfield play will be the aim of Victoria O'Keefes when they tackle Vancouver Croatia in a sudden-death Pacific Coast Soccer League semi-final Sunday at Vancouver's Callister Park.

"If we can control the midfield, we should have them," commented coach Frank Grealy, who listed only one regular as a doubtful starter for Sunday's match.

Expected to miss action is Ron Sandness, who commutes from Nanaimo. Sandness has been battling flu during the past week.

Working on his plan to dominate the middle, Grealy is shifting Victoria scoring leader Peter Wilson from his link position to left wing and moving Jim Menzies to right wing from the centre slot.

Brian Robinson and Ron Thompson will play on either side of Bill Hamilton in the interior of the 3-3-4 formation Grealy plans to use against the second-place finishers.

Winner of the match will clash with league-champion Columbus in a two-game, total-goal final for the playoff crown on April 19 and 26.

TIED FOR SECOND

Wilson ended the regular season tied with Gary Thompson of UBC Thunderbirds for second place in the individual scoring race. Each had nine goals.

Jack Perri of Westminster Blues set the pace with 14.

Peter Brett was the second-highest scoring Victorian with four goals.

Laycoe Calls Shot As Gulls Rebound

By The Canadian Press

Coach Hal Laycoe of Vancouver Canucks said it: San Diego Gulls couldn't get any worse than they were last Tuesday.

Gulls got a lot better Friday night and nipped Canucks 5-4 in sudden-death overtime in Vancouver, knotting their best-of-seven Western Hockey League semi-final series at 1-1.

Gulls, winning on a goal by Johnny MacMillan, didn't look anything like the club that Vancouver slammed 7-1 in the first game of the series Tuesday.

In Seattle, Jack Michie scored twice as Totems crushed Portland Buckaroos 6-3 Friday night to knot their semi-final at one game apiece before 7,076 fans.

Laycoe summed the San Diego-Vancouver series' opener this way:

"A big loss like that can do quite a bit to a team. In fact, it can mean a lot to both teams.

"Let's put it this way. San Diego can't get any worse and we can't get much better."

MacMILLAN'S SECOND

Friday night, the Canucks got worse as the game wore on and MacMillan won it for San Diego with his second goal of the game at 5:04 of overtime.

He caught a pass from Len Ronson and beat goalie George Gardner with a quick wrist shot from 30 feet, disappointing 8,932 Vancouver fans.

San Diego goaltender Ted Ouimet was a standout, blocking 38 shots, six more than Gardner.

Totems built up a 3-0 lead in the second period in their brawling contest with Buckaroos.

Referee Wally Harris handed out 88 minutes in penalties and broke up five fights.

Rangers Hope to Solve Puzzling Playoff Slump

By The Canadian Press

New York Rangers have a point to prove in their National Hockey League playoff games this weekend with Boston Bruins—that they don't choke up in Stanley Cup play.

The Rangers have lost 10 straight Stanley Cup games and 14 of their last 16. They trail the Bruins whom they meet again tonight and Sunday at New York's Madison Square Garden in the third and fourth games of their best-of-seven East Division semi-final.

The Rangers have won only two games in Stanley Cup play since 1967, when they were eliminated four games to two by Chicago Black Hawks in 1968. In 1967 and 1969 they lost four straight each time to Montreal Canadiens and now are down 0-2 in their series with the Bruins.

Three other NHL teams, all trailing 0-2 in their best-of-seven quarter-finals, are at home hoping the advantages of their rinks will halt their elimination from their respective series in games tonight and Sunday.

Detroit Red Wings, beaten twice by the Black Hawks in Chicago, will be counting on their veteran line of Gordie Howe, Alex Delvecchio and Frank Mahovlich to stop the high-flying Hawks in the Olympia in the other East Division quarter-final.

In the West, Pittsburgh Penguins meet Oakland Seals in the Seals' West Coast arena while Minnesota hopes to break St. Louis Blues' mastery of the NHL playoffs in the West in North Stars' home ice.

New York, leaders in the NHL East Division for most of the regular season, barely made the playoffs after injuries to key players, including Vic Hadfield, Donnie Marshall and defenceman Brad Park.

Park returned at the end of the season but he was injured again in the first playoff game. He is expected to be in the lineup tonight, but another defenceman, Rod Seiling, is not expected to play. He has strained shoulder muscles.

The third game of the quarter-final series between Boston and New York will be telecast tonight on Channels 2 and 6, starting at 5:30. Fourth game of the series also will be carried Sunday, starting at 4 p.m.

The CBS network (channels 7 and 12) will carry the fourth game of the Detroit-Chicago series Sunday morning, starting at 10 a.m.

Bruins Are In the Pink of Health

Goalie Ed Giacomin, rested in the second game after being bombed in the opener, is expected back in goal tonight in place of veteran Terry Sawchuk.

The Bruins, meanwhile, are healthy, rolling along behind the defensive and offensive strength of Bobby Orr and forwards Phil Esposito, John McKenzie and Johnny Bucyk.

The Wings, who returned to Detroit Friday, must rely on the continued hot goaltending of Roy Edwards and the Howe-Delvecchio-Mahovlich line to save them from elimination.

Howe, who recently celebrated his 42nd birthday, also marks his 19th year of playoff hockey, equalling the record held by Red Kelly, now coach of the Penguins.

CLAIM TOOK DIVE

The Wings are incensed at what they call a bit of acting by Chicago's Stan Mikita in Thursday night's 4-2 loss to the Black Hawks.

Sid Abel, Wings' manager-coach, claimed referee Vern Buffey was fooled when Mikita faked a fall and Bruce MacGregor was called for tripping. The Black Hawks later scored with the man advantage.

"Mikita took a dive and he (Buffey) goes for it and we get a penalty," Abel said.

MacGregor said he complained but Buffey ignored him saying "it was a trip. . . . But Mikita has been doing that sort of thing ever since he's been in the league."

Shrum Asks Report On Power Line Plan

B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum is getting a personal report on the controversial overhead transmission line which the Crown corporation plans to run through four miles of urban and suburban Victoria.

This was disclosed Friday in a letter from Shrum to Mrs. Marie Bown, 1266 Dunsterville, one of the organizers of petitions against the overhead line along Interurban and Burnside.

"We are certainly giving serious consideration to the great number of complaints which we have received and as a result I am sending one of our division managers to Victoria to prepare a personal report for me on this whole problem," write Shrum.

"He will examine all possibilities of relocating the line or even part of the line if this will help to meet some of the objections which have been raised.

SYMPATHY

"I have the deepest sympathy with those who are protesting but as I have said before, we have only so much money available and we have to keep within our budget.

"The legislature this year very generously increased our borrowing power by $250 million. However we shall exhaust nearly all of this in less than two years in providing for increased load growth due mainly to an increased population.

"During the next five years we shall require $800 million in order to provide the service that will be needed in B.C. by 1980."

UNDERGROUND

Shrum said that until he has a further report, he would not attempt to give detailed estimates of putting the line underground.

In an earlier letter he has said the whole problem would be solved immediately if local residents paid the extra cost. Mrs. Bown wrote back asking for the costs in detail.

In his latest letter, Shrum said he thinks it would have to be handled through municipal councils, "probably an increase in the mill rate. Of course the cost that would have to be met by the municipalities would be the difference between underground and overhead installation."

STEEL POLES

B.C. Hydro has said underground costs are $303,000 a mile compared with $80,000 a mile for the planned steel poles, which will be 75 feet high, or equivalent to a seven-storey building.

Opponents have labelled the overhead lines as an eyesore and a blight on surrounding residential areas, reducing property values.

The Interurban-Burnside line is the last leg of an overhead line from Jordan River, carrying extra power for Greater Victoria's needs.

Purchasing Areas Are 'Soft Targets'

Purchasing departments of industry are new soft spots vulnerable to labor union bargaining techniques, a Vancouver shipyard labor relations officer told western Canada and Pacific northwest purchasing men Friday.

Speaker M. A. Pierotti, of Burrard Dry Dock Ltd., was luncheon guest of the 30th annual Pacific northwest purchasing conference and products show at the Empress Hotel.

He said that while the opportunity for massive confrontation between industry and labor exists in B.C. and elsewhere this year, "the bargaining techniques will be of new flavor and sublety." Pierotti referred to the effectiveness of the work-to-rule and slow-down procedure in recent disputes which is "difficult to prosecute or obtain redress" for management.

UNION ACTION

The speaker cited these areas as targets for union attention, as well as the actual products used by or manufactured by industry and hence directly involving purchasing departments:

Growing staff involvement in the gargaining process as white collar unions proliferate and staff groups seek recognition; accreditation by companies of a single bargaining agent within an indusrty; point of origin or union label of goods traded by or made by companies; the ladder progression technique of bargaining.

The latter Pierotti explained is the recent preference of some unions to reject a series of proposed settlements recommended by their union spokesmen before accepting a much higher contract.

CLOSING RANKS

About accreditation, Pierotti said the idea of closing ranks was learned the hard way by unions many years ago, and is just now being accepted by management (e.g. Construction Labor Relations Association).

It affords to labor a united front, producing a standardized rate structure within the industry, and may prohibit the entering of private deals with a union in order to keep working while a competitor is struck, he said.

It would not be extreme to suggest that economic sanctions could be imposed against companies which have broken away and acted irresponsibly in the eyes of the trade orgainization, Pierotti said.

What then might be a company's policy in dealing with a maverick company's products, he asked. "Would it be extreme to consider that perhaps even prohibition of trade commodities could occur?"

Not all these developing situations can be laid to the perfidy of labor, he said. "The bulk of present employees have not experienced the depression or the Second War. They express different concepts, identify to their own images, and collectively follow the sound of a different drum."

Union leaders appear ready to follow the stream rather than change some of these ideas, Pierotti said.

It is only a short hop from union contracts calling for union sub-contract work only, to contracts calling for union-made products only, he warned, and this would be a direct problem for purchasers.

The nature of such techniques may be called obstruction, and to a greater extent the purchasing manager must be prepared to deal with them, to be completely informed and ready to co-operate closely with his company's industrial relations or personnel division.

BLOOD DRIVE GOING TO GULF ISLANDS

A Red Cross blood donor clinic for the residents of Mayne, Galiano and Saturna Islands will be held Wednesday, April 15 in the Mayne Island Community Hall.

The clinic is the first ever held on the island, and its co-ordinator, Angus Shaw, is confident that at least 12 per cent of the islands' population will register as blood donors.

The clinic will be open from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and transportation will be available from Galiano and Saturna Islands.

Youth Different, Says Bishop

People over 30 were brought up in a different social and cultural background from that of yonng men and women today, says Most Rev. Remi De Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria.

"That is why our values are being challenged," he told the Catholic Women's League of St. Andrew's Cathedral at a communion breakfast in the Dominion Hotel.

"We in the Western World were brought up in a cultural pattern which we thought was the only civilized pattern. Today, through modern means of travel and communication, we have suddenly become aware that there are a variety of civilizations and cultures.

"We are going through a process of acceleration change and will have to learn to live in a completely changing world, because everything is being challenged."

ACCEPT CHANGE

"In the field of religion we accept a change on the authority of God and we believe God contributes to the dimension of our knowledge."

Bishop De Roo said the deep frustration people are experiencing in life are a cause for social concern.

"We are gradually moving towards a more unified cultural society and it is going to influence the mode of fashion. The music and language may be different but the beat is the same."

Guests at the communion breakfast were Sister Kathleen Cyr, Superior of St. Joseph's Hospital; Sister Frieda Marie, Superior of St. Ann's Academy; Sister Theodoric, principal of St. Andrew's School; Mrs. W. Rogers, vice-president of the provincial council, Catholic Women's League; and director Msgr. Michael O'Connell.

They were introduced by CWL president Miss Virginia Hanley.

The business was purchased earlier this year by two Victoria men, Wilf Hatch and Ron Norrie.

A dollar still goes a long way.

A dollar may buy a lot less these days—but it doesn't buy less Volkswagen.

To begin with, we still protect the bottom of every VW with a solid slab of steel.

Then we stamp the famous beetle shape out of a heavier gauge metal than even most big cars use.

And since we've been stamping out basically the same shape for the past 20 years now, everything fits.

(So well in fact, that the Volkswagen is actually airtight.)

Our paint job is the envy of the industry. 28 pounds worth. 4 coats. And the parts you don't see are finished as well as the parts you do.

The VW's 1600 cc. engine is not only ridiculously easy on gas and oil, it's easy on itself.

(We nearly went broke giving away gold watches to Volkswagen owners who drove their Volkswagens more than 60,000 miles.)

What's more, 1 out of every 8 VW employees is an inspector. They inspect every part of every Volkswagen 3 times. And then they give the finished bug a going over that cars costing twice as much don't get.

And when a VW finally does make it out of the clutches of our finicky inspectors, it falls right into the clutches of our equally finicky service people. And the awesome VW Diagnosis System: every new car we put on the road now gets a series of free electronic checkups.

How much do you have to pay for this amazing automobile? Only $1999.*

And right away a VW will start saving you money. Money you can spend on some of life's little luxuries: like food, clothing and shelter.

All because a bug won't cost you more for upkeep than you can keep up with.

Which is only right.

After all, if you're buying a small car to fight inflation, we think you should buy one that won't fight back.

White Paper Rapped For Little Imagination

Authors of the white paper on taxation were accused Friday of having little imagination in the effect their proposals would have on Canada's economy.

Roy E. Burrell, partner in the Vancouver chartered accountancy firm of Thorne, Gunn, Helliwell and Christenson, told the Pacific Northwest conference of Purchasing Management Association of Canada, the central issue of the white paper is that effects of its proposals on Canadian economic stability are not known.

The "growth and productivity aspects of taxation seem to have received little of the imaginative effort of the white paper authors and to have been relegated to a secondary position," Burrell told a panel discussion at the Empress Hotel.

"Where are the provisions to help our exporters compete in foreign markets? Where are the provisions to encourage secondary industry and cut imports?

"Where are the provisions to fight inflation by encouraging saving rather than spending? They've not in the white paper," Burrell said.

Burrell noted that deputy finance minister Bryce has admitted the inflationary impact of the white paper had received no more study than represented by a few scribbled notes.

He said the white paper assumes incentive is no longer necessary to maintain a favorable climate for hard work and saving, that affluence is permanent and the creators of the dynamic Canadian society will continue to perform regardless of the economic climate.

DESIRABLE AIMS

It should be concluded that Canada ensure tax reform proposals are not too extreme, Burrell said.

He said he agreed equity and fairness are desirable objectives. But a prudent man sets his goal and works toward it objectively, rather than plunging forward uncertainly.

"We must ensure that the swing from the present system to the new system is not so great as to alter the rate of growth in the Canadian economy or its stability," Burrell said.

Relief to the lower income group through increased taxation for the majority is an acceptable change and will not have an appreciable detrimental effect, Burrell said. He also agreed that proposed tax rates are sufficiently high for the individual, but too high compared with U.S. income tax.

ESCAPE ROUTES

Dealing with corporate taxation, Burrell said equity in the full integration of personal with corporate tax is questionable. He also sees discrimination between closely-held and widely-held corporations.

Those who are discriminated against will be ingenious in their attempts to reduce tax. "The proposals will have the effect of merely encouraging taxpayers to devise new escape routes to avoid the tax," against which there will have to be considerable policing.

Burrell said he would favor abandoning the integration proposals in favor of a 20 or 25 per cent dividend credit, which he said is roughly equal to 50 per cent integration, but more study should be given to the idea, and government should do the study.

The accountant did not agree that fairness requires business income to be taxed on the same basis as personal income. Wages or salaries earned are received in cash, constituting disposable personal income, while business profits often are expressed in inventory, receivables and new plant, which are not disposable income.

TOO ABRUPT

Small business, by definition, has difficulty raising growth capital, but the contribution of small industry is nonetheless great, Barrell argued. White paper proposals will discourage motivation and expansion in this sector he said.

Generally, Burrell favored the capital gains tax, but felt the increase from no tax to a maximum 50 per cent all at once would be too abrupt.

He also urged modification of exemptions on personal transactions, and removal of homes and such things as heirlooms from the tax roll.

Burrell said he was concerned that authors of the paper were too academic and had tried to go too far, too fast, "almost to the point of recklessness."

Canadians have demonstrated they can make social reforms and will do so again, provided they are assured the adjustments will not "kill the goose that lays the golden egg. The only way to do this is to introduce tax reform slowly and then carefully measure the result of each turn of the tax screw," even if it means postponing some wealth distribution, said Burrell.

Negligence Ruled In Crash Trial

A Victoria man was convicted in County Court Friday afternoon of criminal negligence following an accident in which a husband and wife were seriously injured last Dec. 19.

But he was found not guilty of failing to remain at the scene of the accident.

Gordon Graham, 23, of 3901 Quadra Street, will be sentenced Friday at 10 a.m. by Judge Montague Drake. The judge called for a probation officer's report on Graham.

INJURIES

Injured in the accident were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lepine of 937 Wollaston. Both were pinned under the instrument panel of their car until rescued by Saanich police.

Lepine suffered a broken foot and arm, plus chest and neck injuries. His wife was knocked unconscious.

Crown counsel Cecil Branson alleged that, after Graham's car collided with another on the Saanich Road, near Falmouth, Graham ran into some blackberry bushes at the side of the road and hid there until found by police.

SHOCK

Defence sounsel Dermod Owen-Flood argued that Graham was in a state of shock from the crash and did not know what he was doing.

When called to the witness stand, Graham said he remembered nothing after the crash until he half woke up in an ambulance on the way to hospital.

Drake accepted this statement.

MEDICAL EVIDENCE

"I am satisfied on the medical evidence that his condition at that time was such as to cast serious doubt on the assertion he was trying to escape liability." the judge said.

On the first charge, he said it was clear that Graham drove with "a reckless disregard for the lives and safety of others."

Police witnesses testified that Graham was travelling at between 55 and 60 miles an hour in a 30-mile-an-hour zone.

Strikers Take Pity On Boozers

BEAUMONT, Tex. (UPI) — Union members of beer distributing agencies walked off their jobs Friday, practically shutting down all distribution of beer in the Beaumont area. The strikers, however, agreed to supply one brand of beer.

"We want to afford beer drinkers the chance to drink beer, although it might not be the brand they prefer," said union leader Lynn Wells.

Strikers used the lottery system to pick which brand would go through. Schlitz won.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says Harrison trichologist to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Monday and Tuesday

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair — will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, April 13 and 14. This news was released here today by A. B. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In the announcement, Harrison named Staff trichologist T. Cronshaw to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Cronshaw will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Hotel Sussex.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Cronshaw," director Harrison said. "Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause baldness."

Who Can Be Helped?

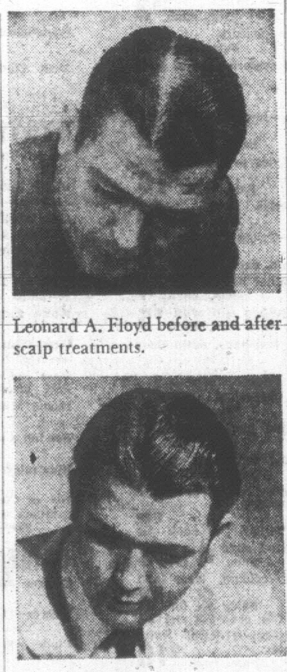
Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Harrison sincerely. "We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Harrison. "But to over-come the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything'. So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."



Leonard A. Floyd before and after scalp treatments.

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Cronshaw in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Cronshaw's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

Tub Rusts in Millstream

Off Millstream Road, a Junk Pile Grows

Litterbug Plague: When Will It Stop?

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Despite repeated warnings that the resources of our environment are not infinite, people continue to pollute creeks with junk and rubbish and to litter the green countryside with old cars and every conceivable type of hardware.

Does society have to put up with this?

"No," says Dr. Alan P. Austin, biologist at the University of Victoria. "And it's vitally important that it doesn't.

"Until the message sinks through that society can no longer tolerate such malpractices, anti-pollution and anti-litter laws should be rigidly enforced," he said.

●

In many western European countries, the citizens just wouldn't put up with what their counterparts in Canada have to accept from a small minority who have no respect for environment and nature, he said.

Austin's views are shared by thousands of Victorians who feel it's time provincial and municipal governments cracked down on people who abandon their old cars and hardware along public highways, creeks and crown lands.

David Sterling, an official of the Victoria Natural History Society, said the Highland district is a favorite dumping ground for old bed springs, washing machines, cars, bathtubs, glass bottles, oil tins and greasecans.

There are those who don't give a damn and those who feel it's a right to dump junk on vacant land

Parts of the creeks are littered with rubbish of all sorts," he said. "I imagine the bottoms of some lakes are no better."

The creek along Humpback Road which runs between Goldstream and Sooke Road, is another bad spot where junk has been dumped, he said.

Dick Chudley, president of The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, said some people do it because they "just don't give a damn."

●

"There are others," he said, "who feel they have the right to dump junk on vacant land, especially crown land and creeks — even though this is offensive to people and detrimental to an environment."

He said this attitude resulted from the Industrial Revolution in the 19th century.

Few people questioned methods of waste disposal in those days, and the practice of dumping junk in rivers and streams became a common practice, he said.

There were others, of course, who abandoned their junk all over the countryside because that way it cost little or nothing.

"It's a cheap method of disposing waste," he said. "And they will continue to as long as they can get away with it."

A Sore Sight on Admirals Road

40 Men Shed White Collars And Clear Way for Church

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Forty city slickers sat down to a loggers' breakfast on the Cedar Hill Cross Road site of the new Emmanuel Baptist Church, near the University of Victoria, this morning.

And 43 women plied them with flapjacks, sausages, maple syrup and coffee.

The men — most of them office workers — had responded to a call for unpaid volunteers to prepare the 2.7 acre site for construction of a modern church that will seat 500.

After breakfast, they sat in silent prayer for five minutes. Then individual men and women stood up in turn and offered spoken spontaneous prayers for the future of the church, which will replace an old building at 1900 Fernwood.

Warm sunshine beamed on the gathering and tall trees bordered the site on three sides.

"We hope to dedicate the new church before Christmas," said the minister, Rev. Norman K. Archer, who wore workman's clothes along with his volunteers.

He circulated a questionnaire among male parishioners asking them to state what jobs they could do best. The men offered to do land clearing, carpentry, brickwork, landscaping cement work, tile-laying, painting and laboring.

The church will be built by Dewey De Vries, who has constructed more than 40 churches in Western Canada. The architects are Wagg and Hambleton of Victoria.

A bell from the old church will be transferred to a square-built tower in the new. Besides the sanctuary, the church will have a fellowship hall and library, offices and an apartment for a caretaker.

"We are happy to be so near the university," Archer said, "because we have a fair number of students in our congregation and we hope to get more."

The old church on Fernwood will be sold.

Hydro Rechecks Power Line Plan

B.C. Hydro has decided to take a second look at its plans to run an overhead transmission line through five homes on Munn Road in Saanich.

Hydro Chairman Gordon Shrum, in a letter Friday, informed the homeowners he is sending a senior division manager to Victoria to "make a careful assessment" of the problem.

The letter was addressed to Pat Codyre, 1890 Munn, spokesman for the group opposing the expropriation of their properties for the 138,000-volt line.

The line would be strung on 75-foot poles and would run from Jordon River to Munn Road, to Interurban and along Burnside to a substation in the 2900 block Douglas Street.

Shrum said he wants a full detailed report on the matter.

"We don't want to move you or your neighbors, and we will not do so if there is any other practical solution," he said. "Our engineers say that there is not, but this I am going to investigate."

Codyre said Hydro could use 300 acres of vacant land situated to the north of the homes instead of expropriating the five properties.

"It wouldn't bother anybody there," he said. "And I don't think it would cost any more to do so."

"I hope the man Hydro is sending over here looks as the problem from the human angle," he added. "The homeowners are not interested in money. They don't want to move as most have lived here for years." (See story Page 12.)

Scholarship Granted

A University of Victoria bacteriology student has won one of 13 National Research Council library science scholarships.

Nancy Gonnason, 21, of 2056 Kendal, said she plans to attend the University of Western Ontario at London next fall on the $3,600 award.

She will spend 12 months or three semesters working toward a master's degree in library science.

She will graduate from Uvic next month with a BSc in bacteriology.

ANTI-CAR GROUP AGAIN ON PROWL

University of Victoria students Sunday afternoon will circulate a petition to ban cars from certain roads within Beacon Hill Park.

Organizer Mark Jackman, 20, said, barring wet weather, the students, on a person-to-person basis, will try to outline their argument to as many park users as possible.

The petition will be presented to city council.

Jackman said the students will not try to stall traffic, as they did last Sunday. That resulted in hot tempers and some cars drivers making runs at demonstrators.

The petition argues that heavy traffic is ruining the park's peaceful atmosphere and hindering free movement of people on foot.

It proposes the city close down such roads as Park Way, Chestnut Way and Bridge Way, and leave open Camas Circle and Circle Drive, which lead to the main parking area and to the lookout.

Ask The Times

Q. Why was the west bypassed this year to start the production of the Canadian revue Spring Thaw? Does this show have a government grant?

A. The Toronto-based Spring Thaw for the first time will not go on tour this year. During its years of production the show has chosen various cities, not necessarily in the west, to open its tour. This year purchasing rights to use the material can be obtained and local material inserted to make it topical in the city where it is played. There are no records to show that the production has ever received government sponsorship.

VOLUNTEER workers breakfasted on flapjacks and sausages this morning on 2.7-acre site of the new Emmanuel Baptist Church on Cedar Hill Cross Road, east of Henderson. Then work on preparing the site for the builder began in earnest. Among the workers were Rev. Norman Archer, church minister, and Dr. David Parfitt, chairman of building committee. Church Head Open to Tax Property tax on church land and buildings might benefit churches, the president of the Greater Victoria council of churches said Friday.

Rev. John Watson of First Baptist Church was commenting on a suggestion by Ald. Harold Olafson city council should look into the possibility of taxing church property.

Watson listed three possible advantages to imposition of property tax:

- It would force churches to give more thought to what kind of expenditures a religious body should have;
- Plans would be drawn with an eye to community value instead of "pride and comfort";
- And it would act as a stimulus to implementation of ecumenical movements.

EDIFICE COMPLEX

Watson said a property tax might shock church planners out of their "edifice complex," which he defined as "duplication of facilities beyond foreseeable needs."

He said his views were personal because the council of churches has not yet discussed the property tax issue.

"I do not think the church would throw up its hands in holy horror if it considered this matter, nor would it desire to express a blanket statement that all churches should be taxed," Watson said.

"Churches and civic authorities ought to sit down together and re-examine the issue of property tax and discover what public policy will best serve the needs of the people.

GOOD FOR CHURCHES

"This would be good not only for the country but for the churches."

Rev. Bert King of Metropolitan United said those most critical of the churches are often ignorant of their contribution to the community.

"I think they (aldermen) should move cautiously on this because if the church goes out of existence in terms of rendering these kinds of services then the community will have to take them up."

He said a property tax would probably have a crippling effect on local churches.

"If we were hit with a business tax it would probably put us out of existence, but that's fine with us if its' fine with the community.

"It just means they can tax us out of existence so far as the institution of churches is concerned, but they can't tax our faith out of existence."

Arthur Mayse . . .

THIS MORNING I looked up to see a bearded face and chunky frame advancing into this newsroom. Here was an old friend, and one who claims a unique distinction.

His name is Michael Mehemet Dean, his boast that he was the only Turkish-born Canadian to serve in Canada's army during the last world war.

He went in as a private and emerged as a captain. Then he dived back into newspaper work — circulation and later promotion — in Vancouver.

Sixty and a grandfather now, Mickey Dean is still recognizable as the spry young man who in 1928 launched out on an adventure that changed his life.

His name then was Mehmet Sabahaddin, which in loose translation signifies 'Prophet of the Dawn of Religion.'

"I was a tourist guide on the streets of Istanbul," he recalls, eyelids crinkled in a smile broad as a scimitar.

"One of my clients each year was the director of an American cigarette company. That particular trip, Robert J. Cromie of the Vancouver Sun was with him."

Cromie, a man given to whirlwind tours and swift decisions, took a liking to the 18-year-old guide.

"He asked me if I would like to come to Canada." To Mickey, the rough-and-tumble newspaper publisher long deceased remains a great man. His veneration deepens his gravelly voice. "So he brought me here. I had learned to speak English well, but to me, Canada was a different world."

That was in 1928. Until after the war, Mickey says, he was Canada's only Turkish-born citizen.

"You might say that I opened the door to the Turks," he declares. "Under a law of 1929, my people were classed as Asiatics, and whenever I thought about that, the blood gushed up into my head.

"If anyone can trace the origins of the Turks, he's a miracle-worker. They're such a mixture.

Cromie, persuaded by his protege's eloquence, agreed that Turks were unfairly designated as Asiatics. He saw to it that the prophet of the dawn of religion, his name by then Canadianized, got a hearing from John Diefenbaker.

"He listened," says Mickey Dean, "and he helped bring about changes. In Canada now, there are maybe 800 Turkish Canadians. Most of them are professional men — doctors, dentists, scientists and engineers."

In 1963, the British Columbia Canadian Turkish Society was formed with Mickey as its first president. Similar societies now function in Toronto and Montreal.

"I'm quick with a plug for both countries," he continued, fingering the little star-and-crescent emblem in his lapel. "I remind Canadians that Canada and Turkey fought side by side in Korea. When I went back on a trip to Istanbul, I gave Canada a wonderful image."

What brought him to Victoria?

The B.C. Canadian Turkish Society is seeking help for the stricken city of Gediz through an earthquake relief fund.

Would I tell Victorians moved to contribute that donations may be sent to the Bank of Commerce at Douglas and Bay? Funds are also being set up in Toronto and Montreal, and a Bank of Commerce representative in Turkey will turn over the proceeds in the name of the Canadian people.

As Mickey Dean observes, It's a small world, and growing smaller all the time. Perhaps this cheerful plugger for two countries has helped make it smaller.

AT 10:30 A.M. TUESDAY, an Arbutus Craft bus will deliver four young Cerebral Palsy victims to Boys Club of Victoria Headquarters.

There, entertained by records and by volunteers who will read aloud to them, they'll remain until 1:30 p.m.

For these boys and girls in their upper teens and early twenties, the trip will be the first they've made from their homes in a long time.

Mrs. Genevieve Ali of Victoria Community Council tells me that the group will grow larger as more parents of young adult cerebral palsy sufferers move to take advantage of the new service. Mrs. Ali hopes that parents will get in touch, also more volunteers.

Age isn't a factor — just the ability to read aloud, and a willingness to ease the boredom of those who can't do for themselves.

That's it for this week, and off now to do any number of around-home jobs too long put off. Soon Daylight Saving, when the days will be longer . . . though still not long enough!

Edrin Use Experimental

There was no cause for alarm at a report that a deadly poison was being used to control forest mice, according to a forest protection officer.

Robert Kennedy, president of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, said B.C. Forest Service planned to coat spruce seeds with edrin to kill mice.

Edrin is more toxic than DDT.

Bob Sutton, forester in charge of planning and research, said edrin had only been used on seeds planted in two experimental plots.

"We have no intentions of using it in our forest management programs," he said.

He said his department was fully aware of the dangers of insecticides to wildlife and was working to eliminate the use of toxic poisons in forest protection projects.

Richter To Chair Harbor Board

Mines Minister Frank Richter has been appointed chairman of the British Columbia Harbor Board by cabinet order. He succeeds William Mearns who retired from the post his week.

Mearns said in Victoria today that many decisions now being made by the board are closely associated with the government and it seems appropriate, for the time being at least, to have the board headed by a cabinet minister.

He said that while stepping down now, he may in future take on similar assignments if invited.

Others appointed to the board through cabinet order are J. A. Broadbent, general manager of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, and David King, industrial development officer of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority in Vancouver and former executive-secretary of the board.

Richter said Friday that the former board, headed by Mearns, was dissolved by the formation of the new board, but there will be no "outward changes" in operation.

Earlier this week cabinet orders were passed to allow the B.C. Hydro railway line to the Roberts Bank superport to begin operation and allow Kaiser Resources Ltd. to use its coal-loading facilities at the superport.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Does Church Have Role in Social Reform?

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Most of you will agree that the church should engage in exercises in compassion, enterprises in social welfare. The church is often criticized for not spending enough money and energy on such things. But should the church also become involved in movements for social reform? Should it go beyond social first-aid and concern itself pretty basically about conditions in society which cause suffering and distress? Should the church "meddle" in public issues?

I can report, out of my own experience, that most of the people who insist that the church not meddle in public issues are members of economically and socially fortunate groups which are not quite sure that their good fortune is going to last. I must also report that the person who tells me that the church should try to do something constructive in politics generally means that the clergy should try to persuade people to vote for his party or to support his pet project in social reform.

●

A few years ago Billy Graham said this in an article: "We must change men before we change society . . . Social sins, after all, are merely a large-scale projection of individual sins and need to be repented of by the offending segment of society."

Really? Is that the church's proper agenda, to change men before trying to change society? Is that an effective way to deal with poverty, hunger, deprivation, injustice? Will the church have much real success in changing men who are caught in the poverty trap, who have minimal opportunities for personal development, who are victims of injustices?

The relationships between the individual and his social environment are infinitely complex, and very few social scientists see the situation in the simple way that Graham apparently saw it. (Graham seems recently to have moved on from his earlier sociological naivety: he now acknowledges, cautiously, that the church should concern itself in matters of widespread social reform.)

I am utterly repelled by any form of Christianity which professes an intense concern for the souls of men but which fails to show an intense concern for the changing of those conditions in society which cripple and destroy and damn men. And let it be noted that to refrain from challenging in any way the structures and methods of the status quo, to acquiesce in things as they are in society, can be as much a matter of "meddling in politics" as is the direct challenging of any aspect of the status quo.

The church should not meddle in public issues simply for the sake of meddling. But when it fails to stand up for those who suffer and fails to try to change the conditions which make for their suffering, then it has compromised its witness to the point of utter irrelevance.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ cannot be fitted into a straitjacket provided by any social philosophy or political ideology — even those splendid ones which you and I favor. Christians will disagree among themselves on methods of reform. Faith does not give specific guidance on the intensely technical and terribly complicated problems of economics and politics and social welfare — except at the level of primary motivations.

●

But the church must demand, and seek ways of implementing its demands, that political decisions serve the real good of all citizens and that the economic order be judged by the ways in which it serves the legitimate economic needs of all persons.

Concern for the sacredness of the individual under God demands a concern for the total environment in which the individual exists. That demands that the church involve itself in public issues — involve itself creatively, compassionately, responsibly.

Parable of Talents Put to Modern Use

By GORDON WAINMAN

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Last Easter Sunday Byron United Church parishioners, who had come prepared to pay out inflated offerings to make up for past negligence, instead were offered crisp new $5 bills on the collection plate—to be taken by the handful if desired.

Rev. Douglas Story and his church stewardship committee, one night before Easter, had been racking their brains to think of an idea to stimulate the congregation when the minister suggested an approach tried successfully in Australia.

He didn't think they'd take to the idea but after discussing it and becoming "very excited," these "alert, intelligent, hard-headed Christian businessmen," as the minister calls them, decided to throw caution to the wind and go along with the idea.

"It's hard to get people excited about things churchwise," Mr. Story says, but after the initial shock of having $3,000 circulated on the offering plates, the parishioners took to their minister's suggestion and took $1,930 in $5 bills.

Before offering the money, Mr. Story read the parable of the talents from the Bible, and suggested the parishioners should take the money, think up some way of increasing it, and return it with a profit for Thanksgiving.

"We weren't as much concerned with returning a profit after the six months as we were with stimulating people and showing them there is more to church stewardship than the church extracting money from them," Mr. Story said.

But in the six months the parishioners returned a profit of $1,355 at Thanksgiving, a sum more than adequate to pay the interest to the bank which financed the offering.

One of the boys in the congregation took enough money from the collection plate to buy some pumpkin seeds. He cultivated a pumpkin patch in his back yard and when Halloween came about he harvested the patch and sold the pumpkins to supermarkets.

A man bought brooms made by the blind and sold them at a profit, explaining to his customers they were aiding a double cause with their purchase.

A family made their money grow by inviting other families to dinners at which husbands and fathers cooked the meals.

Cambodian Insurgency Taking on Characteristics of War

By LAURENCE STERN

CHIPHOU, Cambodia (WP) — The hit and run insurgency on Cambodia's eastern border took on the formal aspect of war for the first time this week—with this village as its "front."

A battalion of regular government troops arrived to stake out a defensive position around this village some three miles, at its closest point, from the South Vietnamese border.

Vietnamese Communists were reported to be in control of three border villages, Bavet, Chantrea and Kompaong Trach. At the weekend I visited Bavet and Chantrea with correspondent T. D. Allman and local authorities at that time expressed their concern about encircling Communist forces.

The chief casulaties of the day were two Japanese correspondents from Fuji television and their Cambodian drivers, who were abducted by Vietnamese Communists. Their rented car was burned on the national highway just east of here.

★ ★ ★

While the kidnapping was taking place less than a mile away, the Cambodian military region commander was briefing newsmen and foreign attaches on the gravity of conditions in the district.

Three other correspondents, reported to be Americans or French, were abducted along with their rented car, on the same road Sunday near Bavet. They have not yet been identified, though Cambodian authorities here have obtained eyewitness reports of the incident.

Police and local defence forces from the three Communist-occupied villages have taken refuge in the provincial capital of Svay Rieng. The Communist main elements scattered about this frontier region were identified as North Vietnamese by the chief of Svay Rieng province.

He said they were fully uniformed and equipped and numbered some 6,000 in the adjoining districts of Chiphou and Kompong Trach.

★ ★ ★

The fresh detachment of government troops which arrived Monday was part of a convoy of several hundred soldiers dispatched from Phnom Penh as a military escort for the newsmen and military attaches. Many of the soldiers returned after the tour to their defensive positions in the capital.

Those who stayed behind were equipped with rockets, armored personnel carriers, American-manufactured M-16 rifles and several Chinese Communist 75-millimetre recoilless rifles, fresh from the crate.

As two of the Chinese weapons were being emplaced earthen bunkers were being dug by Cambodian troops on the northern edge of the village an elderly woman squatted in her front door and looked on impassively.

Hers was one of several houses that lay between the defensive firing position and the direction of anticipated Communist attack.

Chiphou has already felt the impact of near full-scale war. On Friday night, four hours after my visit to the village, three Communist battalions attacked Chiphou with mortars and 75-millimetre cannons and drove out government forces.

The battle went on most of the night, according to Col. Thongvanan Panmuong, the region's commander, despite the presence of only a flimsy defence force in the town.

★ ★ ★

Two armed villagers and soldiers's wife were killed and eight other persons wounded in the battle. The Communists later abandoned the village to the government after looting the government arsenal of some 350 rifles, mortars and machine-guns.

The government estimated that 50 Communists were killed in the battle but the enemy removed the bodies during their retreat.

Within the past month, Panmuong reported, 37 Cambodian soldiers and civilians have been killed in 51 separate incidents in this five-province district. The region stretches from Takeo in the south to Snoul in the north. An additional 78 were wounded and 108 captured by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

Large caches of government weapons were also taken by the Communists, Panmuong said, among them 453 rifles and five motorbikes.

★ ★ ★

Cambodian authorities were strong in their insistence that there is no joint military planning or communication with American or South Vietnamese forces across the nearby border. Pahmuong noted, however, that it would be possible for troops across the border to monitor military communications here, as they are not coded.

During my visit to the border a South Vietnamese sentry said relations with their Cambodian counterparts across the barbed wire have warmed since the coup d'etat against Prince Nordom Sihanouk.

"Now we can smile at each other," he said. "But that is the extent of it."

New Zealand Agreements Hinge on Trudeau Visit

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — One of the major duties for Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau on his visit to New Zealand in May is likely to be the signing of a new trade agreement between Canada and New Zealand.

In recent days, the existing 38-year-old agreement has been renegotiated by officials of the two countries meeting in Wellington in almost complete secrecy.

The Canadian delegation was led by James Langley, undersecretary of state for external affairs, and the New Zealand team by the deputy-secretary of industries and commerce, G. L. Easterbrook-Smith.

The terms as agreed have been referred to both governments for ratification and, meantime, officials are reluctant to comment. But it is believed that a good many of the claims of each side remain unresolved and may be subject to further consideration when issues affecting them become clearer.

The initiative for reconsideration of the 1932 agreement came last year from Canadian Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin while on a visit to New Zealand.

He noted that subsequent agreements with other countries by both Canada and New Zealand had done much to erode the agreement as originally signed. Negotiations were subsequently begun in Ottawa, and the talks in Wellington during March carried these negotiations further.

It is understood that Canada argued the agreement at present covers the great majority of New Zealand exports but only a small proportion of those from Canada, and the Canadians sought concessions on some 250 items. Agreement was reached on some points, but only on fairly small items in terms of value.

WANT CONCESSIONS

New Zealand made a particularly strong plea for concessions on admission of dairy produce, but seems to have made little headway as the Canadians insisted on the need to protect the domestic industry.

The main New Zealand advance is thought to have been Canadian agreement to approve unlimited access for meat. Some Wellington sources deny that this represents any advance on the existing situation, but government quarters maintain it is valuable to have the position in writing.

There was also discussion on Canadian controls which provide that indirect shipments to Canada do not qualify for preferential tariffs unless accompanied by a government certificate testifying to the lack of a direct service. The need to supply such certificates has caused a great deal of red tape in air-freighted meat supplies and other small consignments of goods from New Zealand to Canada. The outcome of the discussions on this point will not be known until the terms have been considered in Ottawa.

Behind the talks lay the prospect of British entry to the European Economic Community with the resulting uncertainty in many aspects of Commonwealth trade.

Until this and other similar issues are resolved any Canada-New Zealand trade agreement is liable to be fairly temporary in character. The hope is, however, that the terms now reached will assist in revival and increase in two-way trade and lay the foundations for further advances when agreements can be reached on a longer-term basis.

Soccer Skid Continues For Proud Aston Villa

JAMES CONWAY

LONDON (CP) — Aston Villa, one of the 12 pioneers which founded the pro soccer league here in 1885 and with a proud history, is sinking towards the lowest placing in its 96-year career.

Rounding out the current season in the Second Division cellar, the Birmingham club will be downgraded to the Third for the first time next fall, a sad decline from the days when it won the Football Association cup seven times—still a record.

It's a depressing end to a season which started out full of hope.

League champion six times, Villa has been slipping downhill steadily in recent years. It last won the cup in 1957 and was booted out of the First Division in 1967.

* * *

Disgruntled fans threatened to lynch the board of directors when the dispirited club tumbled to the bottom of the Second Division.

The result was a big-business-style takeover led by Birmingham businessman Doug Ellis, who took over in 1968.

It promised to transform the club and brought in controversial Tommy Docherty to perform the miracle.

The abrasive Docherty, who was fired from three clubs in three years, took over in December, 1968, and narrowly saved Villa from demotion to the Third Division that season.

Given a free hand and a blank cheque, Docherty spent more than £200,000 ($520,000) on new players. But his 14-month reign ended last February with Villa back at the bottom of the Second and no money left to buy it out of trouble.

* * *

Some charitable observers claim he got a raw deal. His methods were beginning to pay off, especially in a promising farm team he established, but the results were too slow in coming for his impatient bosses and the fans who have dwindled to less than 20,000 a game.

Villa's fine stadium, opened more than 70 years ago to take 70,000 fans, now displays gaping areas of empty seats and concrete standing enclosures during Villa's league matches.

Echoes of former days of glory still fill the stadium which is used for important domestic and international matches played on neutral ground, but Villa hasn't played in one of these events for years.

Alf Shaw, secretary of Villa's loyal fan club, has followed the team's fortunes for 50 years and remembers its golden days before the war.

"I don't believe I have seen a poorer team in the claret and blue colors than the one that wears them today," he says sadly.

* * *

Ellis hopes the fans will wait a little longer.

"We are determined to put things right," says the chairman.

"We don't belong in the Third Division and we must hate every minute of our time there."

Players Pick Brad Selwood As Top Rookie

SEATTLE (AP)—Players of the Western Hockey League have voted Vancouver defenceman Brad Selwood "Rookie of the Year."

Selwood compiled 441 points out of a possible 540 to dominate the selection. Frank Hughes of Phoenix finished second and teammate Chris Evans, a Roadrunner defenceman, was third.

The 22-year-old Selwood, a native of Leamington, Ont., played all 72 games for the Canucks. He scored nine goals and 24 assists and served 93 minutes in the penalty box.

The voting included 18 players from each team with balloting only for an opponent. Ballots counted five points for first, three for second and one for third.

CFL Players Are Planning All-Star Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of the Canadian Football League Players' Association have set a meeting here next Monday to adopt plans for a game between the league champion Ottawa Rough Riders and all-star players from the other eight league teams.

The game, to be played in Ottawa July 2, is to be an annual event with the proceeds going to the pension fund for CFL players.

The players' association is responsible for organizing the game.

The all-star game is planned as a successor to the annual East-West all-star event that previously was played after the Grey Cup championship game.

Canadian Linemen Sign With Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Signing of two Canadian linemen who played last year in college ranks has been announced by British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League.

Seeking berths with the team will be 225-pound defensive end Merve Killoran, who played last season with Eastern Washington College, and 245-pound centre Bob Moffatt, who graduates this year from Simon Fraser University.

Warm Soil Vital For Tomatoes

By JACK BEASTALL

The oldest species of wild tomatoes, originally found along the borders of Peru and Ecuador in South America, is Lycopersicon ceraciforme.

As a garden plant it is useless because fruits are tiny, and dense, sprawling vine growth has a spread of 25 feet; but it is so resistant to disease it is still used for breeding.

Although native to a land area near the tropics, altitudes rise sharply from sea level to 12,000 feet, and the moderating effect of the South Pacific Ocean lying to the west, gives temperatures in some areas comparable to the temperate zone further north.

Thus it is quite reasonable that the tomato should be grown in so many parts of the world. Through hybridizing programs, strains have been developed to suit a wide range of soils and average climate conditions.

* * *

To realize the work that has been done on the tomato needs only a superficial scanning of a seed catalog put out by a tomato specialist in Ohio, containing 26 pages of tomato varieties and tomato relatives.

Listed are strains from Sweden, Central Europe, Israel, North and South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. Many of these are being used to produce new strains on this continent.

The close relationship between the tomato and the potato is evident in the foliage of some strains, the leaves being typical potato leaves. Others produce the more easily recognized tomato form of leaf, but rolled under to give the effect of tubes, possibly from plants adapting to hot sun by reducing the amount of exposure leaf surface, thereby conserving moisture in the tissues.

Moisture is vital to tomato plants, but this does not mean they thrive in continuously wet soil nor require constant watering when growing in our gardens. In fact, too much and too frequent watering is detrimental.

* * *

To understand this we must remember the tomato is a warm soil plant. It will only make optimum root growth in soils averaging a certain temperature.

As gardeners we already know that a soil which holds water is a cold soil, also that water is the one component of soil most difficult to raise in temperature.

For this reason we effect drainage where needed to remove excess water as quickly as possible so that air can enter the soil and raise its temperature.

It follows that every time we add water to the soil, that is, every time we water our plants, we cool the soil because the water absorbs the heat in the soil to increase its own temperature.

This cooling of the soil seriously retards tomato growth, and often results in plants loaded with unripened fruits when the growing season ends.

Since the tomato is so sensitive to both soil and air temperatures, it makes its greatest amount of growth when these are most suitable.

In our climate it means that growth goes in spurts according to environmental conditions.

When these spurts of growth take place, be it day or night, the plant suddenly requires a supply of moisture to go into the newly forming plant cells.

If moisture is not readily available to the roots, it is translocated from other parts of the plant to the new growing points.

We see the effect of this robbing Peter to pay Paul in the sudden yellowing of older leaves from which the moisture has been withdrawn, and later in the season, in the black or brown leathery portions that develop on the blossom ends of maturing fruits, or as fruits failing to ripen all over because of cells hardening.

Summing up, success with tomatoes results from a warm soil which contains the needed moisture that can be drawn on at any moment.

Since warm soil is a dry soil, and it becomes cooler as moisture content is increased, in insurmountable problem seems likely to develop, but resourceful gardeners have found the solution.

We know that humus (compost or well rotted manure) is composed of thousands of tiny sponges which hold moisture, and that a soil high in humus content is warmer than one lacking humus.

* * *

This solves our problem. All we have to do is incorporate quantities of humus into the area for tomatoes, or into separate areas for each plant, to provide the moisture reserves and a more even soil temperature the tomato needs.

Some gardeners endeavor to create similar soil conditions by putting a mulch over the root area of the plants, but this defeats our purpose.

First, it keeps the soil constantly damp which means a lower temperature and restricted root growth; secondly, the mulch itself prevents the summer air temperatures from reaching the soil.

Any soil covered with a mulch will be some ten degrees lower in temperature than adjoining unmulched areas, therefore mulches are used for plants needing a cool root run, not those liking a warm soil.

While on the subject of soil we should give a few moments to the consideration of soil fertility for tomatoes.

Some advocate reasonably fresh manure with plant food, others fairly heavy dressings of fertilizer before planting, while my preference is for very little plant food in early stages.

A lot will depend on how the plants are to be grown, that is, staked and trained to one or two stems, or as bushes, or trailing over the ground.

* * *

Experience has shown us that flowering-type plants in a rich soil make quantities of foliage at expense of flowers. The same plant in a poorer soil will make little foliage but quantities of flowers. Since we want tomato fruits (therefore flowers) the latter condition is ideal.

Staked and trained plants need a little richer soil because they have to make a heavy vine and quite a bit of height before the first flower trusses appear. Unless they get away to a good start the fruits will be formed quite late in the season.

Bush varieties grow a certain height then produce the first flower clusters at the tip of the plant. This prevents further height and promotes branching which later bears flowers and fruits.

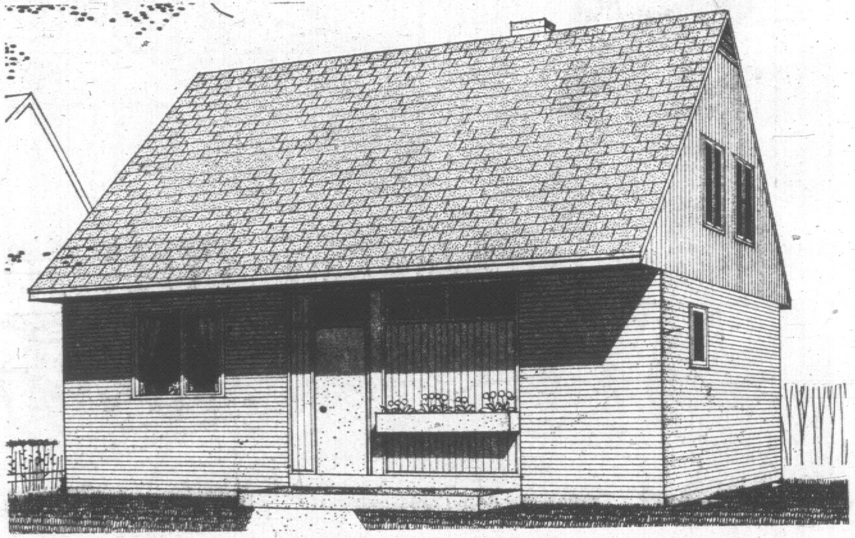
If bush varieties are planted into a rich soil they will produce masses of foliage and few flowers. The more scruffy the plants (although still healthy), the better the crop they bear and the earlier ripe fruits will be picked.

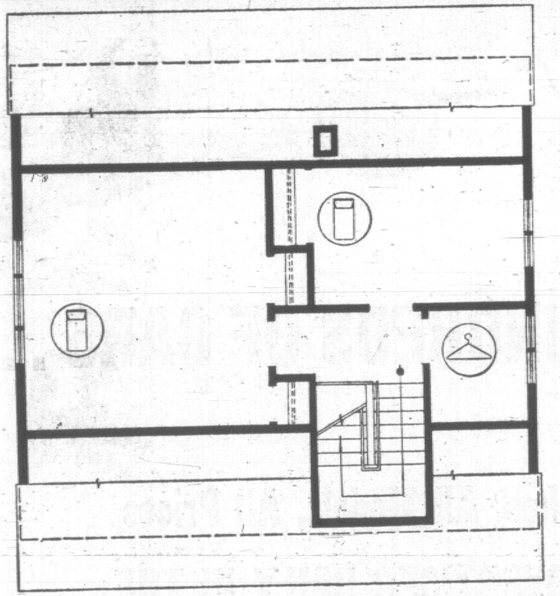
WORK FOR WEEK

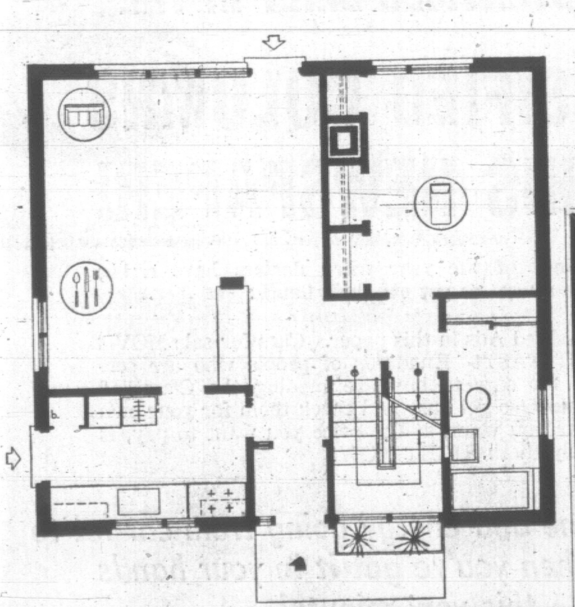
The Brompton stock plants raised from seed sown last year and kept in coldframe this winter can be planted out now.

Choose a sunny mild day for claning out waterlily pools, and for planting new roots. Use an old shallow box or basket as container, and well-rotted cow manure.

Check carnations, pinks, and all other perennial dianthus; cut off straggling growths and flower stems, then give side dressing of wood ashes.







Efficient Use of Space

Efficient use is made of all available floor space in this three-bedroom 1½-storey solid brick house designed by architect Henry Files of Toronto.

All second floor rooms have windows on the gable ends. The storage space on this floor could be easily converted into a second bathroom. The living room, which overlooks the back garden, should face in a southerly direction.

The basement has space for a large playroom in addition to the laundry and furnace rooms. The roof overhang protects the front and garden doors from the weather. This house is admirably suited to the needs of the small family.

The floor area is 1,383 square feet; the over-all exterior dimensions are 31 feet by 27 feet six inches. Working drawings of this house, known as Design 316, are available at minimum cost from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

STAMP NEWS

Explorer's Birth Marked

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Canada on April 15 will place on sale a 6-cent pictorial commemorating the 300th anniversary of the birth of the explorer Henry Kelsey.

In or about 1670 he was born in England, and in 1684 he was apprenticed to the Hudson's Bay Company. As an agent for that company he was sent to Canada. He lived amongst the Indians promoting trade, and he became the first white man to travel on Canada's western plains. Kelsey died in England sometime in the 1720's.

This stamp was printed in blue, yellow, dark brown and red by one color steel and three color gravure by the British American Bank Note Co. Ltd., Ottawa. It was designed by Dennis Burton of Toronto, and will be released in sheets of 50. Each stamp measures 40mm by 24mm. Featured is a portrait of Kelsey.

New Zealand released three adhesives April 8 for their participation in Expo '70. Shown are 7c, the Geyser Restaurant; 8c, the five interconnected units which form New Zealand's pavilion; and 18c, one of N.Z.'s exhibits, the bush walk.

There have been three date-of-issue alterations in Canad's 1970 program; namely for the Mackenzie, Mowat and Group of Seven stamps. The following is the rest of Canada's 1970 lineup: May 13, 25th anniversary of the United Nations (10c and 15c); June 19, a 6-cent value for Louis Riel (1844-85); June 25, 150th anniversary of the death of Sir Alexander Mackenzie (6c); Aug. 12, 150th anniversary of the birth of Sir Oliver Mowat (6c); Sept. 18, 50th anniversary of the Group of Seven (6c); Oct. 7, Christmas; and Nov. 4 150th anniversary of the birth of Donald Alexander Smith, 1st Baron Strathcona and Mount Royal (6c).

Last month, Israel issued a stamp paying tribute to Levi Eshkol (b. 1895), who was prime minister of Israel from 1963 to his death in 1969.

Two Expo '70 adhesives from Turkey were released March 27.

March 24 was the date on which four Guyana pictorials for Easter came out. They reproduce paintings by Peter Paul Rubens (1577-1640).

The visit of the Royal Family to Australia is honored by two pictorials issued by that country March 31. Featured are 5c, portraits of Queen Elixabeth and Prince Philip; and 30c, the Australian flag and a silhouette portrait of the Queen.

Orchids are pictured on 5c, 15c, 22c and 25c stamps which British Honduras came out with April 2.

World Meteorological Day was marked by four pictorials released March 23 by Dubai.

On March 4, the current Fiji 2c, 10c and 25c definitives were issued overprinted Royal Visit 1970.

The $280,000 received at auction last month for the unique British Guiana 1-cent black-on-magenta stamp of 1856 is the highest price ever paid for a single philatelic item.

Expo '70 is honored by a 50-paisa postage stamp issued March 15 by Pakistan.

The April meeting of the Greater Victoria Philatelic Society will be held on Friday the 17th, at The Inn, 1528 Cook Street. It will be "bazaar night" — philatelic items will be on sale. The doors open about 7:30 p.m., and non-members are welcome.

Victorian Lament: Where Are the Clothes We Can Wear?

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

Most complaints about fashion today, apart from groans about the ugliness of the midi, centre on the lack of interesting clothes for older women.

Women who want to dress well even though they're over the hump (arbitrarily set at 30) claim it is impossible to find anything between teen-age fad clothes or dull classics at high prices.

"I can give you one reason why everybody says there are no interesting clothes for older women," said Kay Ellis, sales manager of Eaton's fashion department.

She and sales supervisor Bea Morrison took a dress off the rack. Two-tone with long torso and pleated skirt. Size 24.

"Can you imagine trying to talk a stout older woman into trying that on? Most of them won't even look at it."

There were similar styles in all sizes, but even size tens hesitate about pleats.

Women have been brainwashed into believing pleats are fattening, but as Mrs. Ellis points out, the long torso with pleats starting well below the hips, is actually slimming.

Next to the rack of half-sizes with a flair was an awe-inspiring collection of typical grandmother dresses: Jersey print shirt-waists with long full skirts.

Women, who wear these won't mind midis at all.

Mrs. Ellis explained why these drearies are still kept in stock:

"Every time we've dropped them, customers complain. They keep asking for them, so we order them," she said, looking quickly away.

Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Morrison picked a dozen dresses from the racks to prove that over-thirties clothes aren't all "blah."

"They may look blah on the racks," Mrs. Ellis said, pointing out that this is another reason people say they can't find anything fun to wear.

"If only they'd come and tell us what they want," Mrs. Morrison added. We could help them find it and advise them about what styles suit them.

"Women here seem to reject a lot of styles that would probably look great, because they're too conservative to try a new style." She pointed to her staff in pantsuits as an example of older women wearing new styles successfully.

Mary Rawnsley, Eaton's fashion co-ordinator, agreed.

"In spite of Paris, in spite of cheerful colors and more youthful styles, middle-aged women with less-than-perfect proportions still prefer classic lines. It's too bad, because it's fun to try something new.

Many women say the clothes look fine in window displays or on models at fashion shows. But either they can't find the same things in the stores, or they figure they should lose 20 pounds so they'd have some hope of looking like the models.

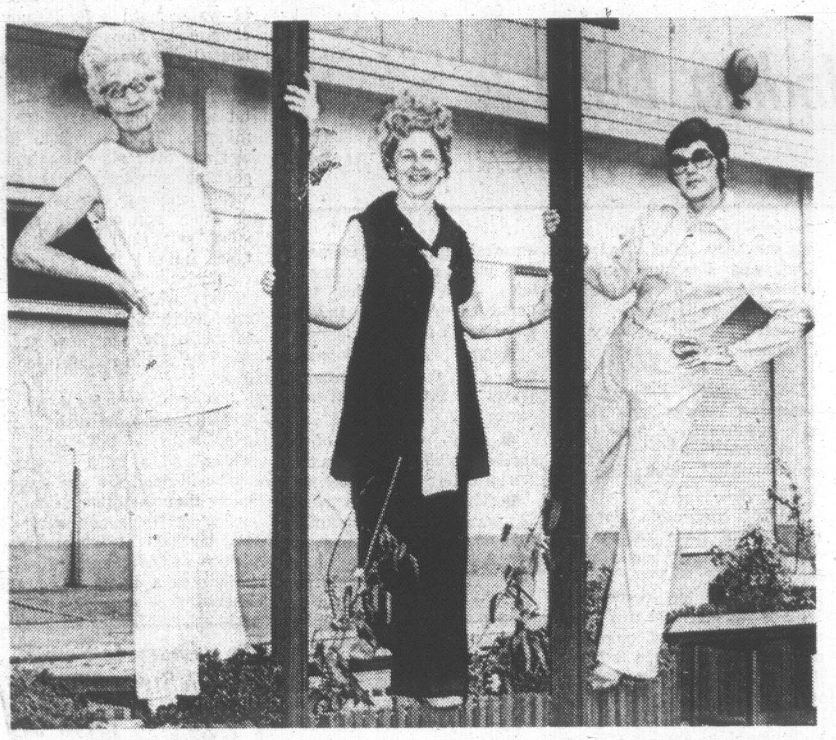
"The thing is, some of our models are chosen just because they do take larger sizes, to prove that an outfit can look great on a size 16 as well as on a size eight," Mrs. Rawnsley said.

"The difference is that in fashion shows you see the total look — hats, shoes, accessories — all chosen to make the most of the outfit and the wearer."

The three experts agreed that, in general, complaints about lack of interesting clothes for older women aren't justified.

"Sure the kids have more amusing things to choose from and I don't blame older women for refusing to wear minis. "But fashion is elegance and you'll still find that in Victoria stores for women of all ages," Mrs. Rawnsley stated.

"In fact there's more to choose from these days than before because you can wear anything you like any time of the day."



Kay Ellis, sales manager of Eaton's fashion department, decided that clothes look better on people than hanging limp on racks, so she put her entire sales staff into pantsuits for a few days to see how shoppers would react. They reacted with surprise and delight when they saw how attractive the women, young girls and grey-haired grandmothers, looked. Kitty Genn, Anne Chacko and Tracy Yasinski, left to right above, are three of the staff who look forward to pantsuit days at work. (Robin Clarke Photo.)

VICTORIA FASHION SHOW

The Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club will show the latest in fashions for Victoria women Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Holyrood House. Mrs. G. R. Fountain strolled through Centennial Square recently wearing one of the outfits, from Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, to be modelled at the show. Convener for the evening is Edith Forsyth. President Kae Fleming will open the show.

Who Cares About Paris? It's What's Right Here That Counts

Further comments on the local fashion:

HATS: Not necessary, but give a better dressed look. More fun, less stodgy than in recent years. Looking more like proper hats than blobs of straw or flowers with veiling.

(More young girls are wearing hats. Victoria and Halifax stores sell more hats than other cities).

MIDIS: It is not necessary to buy midis. Stores have some, but nearly all skirts are still above-knee length.

It is not necessary to be bullied by Paris.

SHOES: It is not necessary to buy chunky shoes, but they look better than dainty slippers with some of today's styles, especially pantsuits.

PANTSUITS: It isn't necessary to wear pantsuits but it's fun. They come in so many styles and sizes any one can wear them any time of day.

Unlike standard slacks, which do nothing favorable for the pleasantly plump matron, pantsuits are strategically designed to hide bulges and do flattering things for almost all women.

MOST USEFUL BUY: Dress with jacket. Sounds dull and conservative, but visit accessories and jewelry departments to find out how to change basic classic into swinging eye-catcher.

CONCLUSION: Clothes for Victoria. They are more likely to be found with help of knowledgeable sales staff. Just steer clear of the teen boutiques.

IN ITALY

Dull, Dark And Dowdy

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) — It's a black day for fashion at the Italian fall and winter ready-to-wear shows — black in color and black for leg-watchers.

Colors are out and the midcalf length is in — solidly, definitely, no choice about it. After a season of women not buying new clothes because they didn't know which way the hemlines were going, designers have made up their minds and it's midi.

It is also:

Dull colors or black, lots of knee boots in straight-cut suede or tight-laced kid, dull satins, dull panne velvets, smocking, pleats for skirts movement, tassles, long beads, sleeves tight or half-tight, half-full, and an overall skinny look.

Sleeves so skinny they look like a second skin are back, sometimes with crepe or chiffon elbow-length capes tacked on. If sleeves aren't skinny all the way, they have a leg-of-mutton look — or sometimes are tight above the elbow, full below, then tightly cuffed.

Everyone is mad for black, with a good economic reason. The wave of strikes in the Italian textile industry going back to last fall has meant no deliveries on specially ordered prints. What's a designer to do?

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

You, too, can walk like a queen . . .

The name "Ferragamo" is probably the most prestigious name in the whole shoe world . . . something like Rolls Royce in the motor industry! . . . Queen Elizabeth II wears these beautiful handmade shoes from Florence, Italy . . . so do thousands of other famous women the world over! . . . (The Maharani of Baroda orders 20 or 30 pairs at a time!) . . . Where can you buy a pair of Ferragamo shoes? Right here at Munday's . . . the only store in Canada to stock them . . . Munday's have three casual, sporty type models in soft suede . . . incredibly light and pliable . . . New this spring is "Aqualana" . . . brown suede with crepe sole, buckled strap trim and slightly raised toe which has quite an intriguing look . . . an excellent walking shoe . . . "Dommy" is a dainty little softie . . . in fine suede with smooth leather collar and trim in green, camel and . . . new this year . . . navy with red trim . . . a real honey! . . . Old favorite "Suez" is a 2-eyelet tie with crepe rubber sole . . . in Havana (beige) . . . And . . . we've been saving this one till last . . . there's a dressy shoe called "Rughtj" very elegant in camel calf with high stack heel or black patent . . . gold buckle, all-leather lined . . . whose price tag reads $55 . . . Money well spent if your budget runs to it! . . . The other Ferragamos are a more modest $29.95 . . . See them all at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Shape of shoes to come: High front, low back silhouette, new slimmish rounded toe, new high 2-inch heel.

A new label to keep your eyes on . . .

"Collection 30" is the label on a fairly new line of Canadian-made clothes which we saw in Eaton's Town House this week . . . These clothes are very new looking . . . made of good fabrics, well finished . . . and are inclined to be petite, scaled to flatter the smaller figure . . . (The manufacturer of Collection 30, we're told, sells most of his output in the U.S. to stores like Saks Fifth Avenue and Bonwit Teller . . . where, like so much of the finer Canadian clothing, it is held in high esteem by fashionwise customers!) . . . One costume we like consists of pure silk print dress in a black, brown and orange design with long torso, pleated skirt and tie neckline . . . Over this is worn a sleeveless black wool coat which zips down the front . . . Most of the ensembles' coats, you'll notice, have zipper fastening instead of buttons . . . and may be worn interchangeably with other dresses . . . Noticed a smart daffodil yellow dress and jacket with short sleeves, inverted front pleat . . . in very fine wool worsted . . . A white double knit dress with slightly gathered skirt zips right down the front . . . There's a sleeveless navy coat dress which can be worn as is, with a bright scarf . . . or over a print dress . . . These young, yet sophisticated clothes, are not too expensive, and you'll find them at . . . Eaton's Town House, 382-7141, local 367.

Neckbands are a new jewellery favorite, and many of them are in snakeskin, real or fake.

Handbags to swing into spring with . . .

The shoe and handbag industries have really worked together this season in using the same leathers and colors . . . a happy circumstance which makes it far easier to match up shoes and bag than it's ever been heretofore . . . Wilson's have just received a shipment of handbags for spring . . . as nice a collection as anyone could ask for . . . For the most part, they're hand-made in Canada . . . by a fashion award winning manufacturer . . . from imported leathers . . . and this means they're more reasonably priced than are a lot of imported bags . . . Ones we looked at were in the $25 - $35 price range . . . A lot of these new bags are "crinkle cape" . . . real leather treated to look like crushed patent . . . There are lots of shoulder straps and convertible straps . . . and while the bags are not necessarily large, they're a lot roomier than they used to be . . . Colors include cognac, bone, jet, scarlet, beaver and navy . . . so you shouldn't have any trouble finding a bag to complement any outfit . . . If you're planning to travel, there's an excellent bag in camel calfskin . . . full of compartments with zip pockets . . . just grand for travelling . . . Another in bone . . . well compartmented, and with sturdy double handles . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

The young feel the longuette is wild, new and never worn before. (It hasn't, by them!)

Marble topped tables hark back to Victorian days . . .

Among people whose taste in furnishings runs to the traditional . . . there's a big revival of interest in Victorian furniture (and we're referring now to the period . . . not the city!) . . . The marble topped tables you'll find in The Gallery at Home Furniture are faithful reproductions of pure Victoriana . . . Made by the same people who manufacture those delightful Victorian chairs Home is so famous for . . . They're solid mahogany, beautifully hand-carved . . . and have tops of richly grained Carrara marble from Italy . . . What's more, they come in all shapes and sizes . . . round, oval, square . . . little round ones just the right size for putting beside a chair to hold ashtray and glass . . . larger ones for lamps . . . great big ones for coffee tables . . . Nothing flimsy about these . . . they're solid and heavy and would provide a definite focus of interest to a room . . . You wouldn't want more than one or two at the most . . . so as not to overdo a good thing! . . . Saw a big console table which would be terrific in a hall . . . Another hall table has an attractive lyre base . . . and there are some very striking occasional tables . . . Not astronomical in price, and well worth a visit! . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Safe and painless method of hair removal . . .

It won't be long now before we all start exposing more of ourselves to the public gaze . . . bare arms and legs . . . abbreviated swim suits . . . And when that day arrives, one thing we can very well do without is unsightly superfluous hair on legs, arms or thighs . . . Or dark fuzz around the upper lip . . . because bright sunlight has a way of making such hair twice as noticeable! . . . Superfluous hair is un-feminine and un-aesthetic . . . and if you've got any, we suggest you get rid of it now by making an appointment at House of Glamour for their Unique Epilatory hair removal treatment . . . Take it to de Goutiere who has more than 20 years experience behind him . . . and specializes in repairing high-grade watches like Patek Philippe . . . Movado . . . Omega . . . Longines . . . Universal . . . His skill is simply phenomenal . . . We've seen him take an old beat-up watch and make it act like brand new! . . . And all his work is unconditionally guaranteed . . . While you're in the store, have a look at some lovely gold brooches Mr. de Goutiere showed us this week . . . Brooches are coming back in style again . . . and these are really contemporary ones to set off the new clothes . . . There's one in 14K gold like a feather . . . Another is carved gold, and a third a free-form design we won't attempt to describe . . . A very striking silver brooch is designed around a big shimmering grey baroque pearl . . . It's hand-made, and is, of course, one of a kind . . . Saw an interesting wide carved gold ring which Mr. de Goutiere has set with seven fresh water pearls . . . SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer:

I am making my spring suit and have just finished the most beautiful bound buttonholes, thanks to your easy-to-follow instructions. Guess I should have followed you all the way through. Instead I followed the pattern instructions and made my buttonholes through the interfacing. Now, the front of my jacket seems to be pulled out of shape and the right side is shorter than the left side. Is there anything I can do with it now? — Mrs. J.M.

Dear Mrs. J.M.:

Wish you would have done what I advised: it could have saved lots of extra work and been much more satisfactory. When you prepare your fabric for the buttonholes, baste your guide lines through your fabric only. Then place a 3-inch-wide strip of organdy on the wrong side of your garment. The buttonholes are made through the organdy and your fabric.

After they have been truned, and pressed, you may cut the organdy away from each buttonhole. Be sure to cut close to the buttonhole so that the edges won't curl up. Now, place your interfacing over the completed buttonholes and baste in position. Next, cut a rectangle a slight bit larger than the buttonholes out of your interfacing, pull the welts through to the wrong side and you'll never have another problem like yours.

As to a solution to your problem, you will have to cut the interfacing away from around the buttonholes to release the pulling.

If you want my free instruction sheet on "Bound Buttonholes" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Rhubarb Recipes Provide New Ways To Make Early Spring Stalks Palatable

By HILDA BEASTALL

Rhubarb means spring to the menu just as much as green peas with new potatoes, and has the merit of being available fresh from garden and market weeks earlier than either.

Already stalks are of usable length in our south-facing gardens with the result that homemakers will be looking for new ways to make rhubarb palatable.

All the older recipe books include rhubarb in vegetable lists, and one calls it a "fine substitute for fruit."

We've all heard of cooks who spoil water when they boil it. Rhubarb can be quite ruined by the same means —overboiling.

As an initial preparation cubed rhubarb, complete with its bright red outer covering, is boiled with only a tablespoon of water (less for small quantities) for 10 to 15 minutes according to its age. Try to hold some shape to the cubes.

For a warm dessert, turn the cooked rhubarb into a skillet with a tablespoon of butter, sprinkling of cinnamon, half a cup of currants to two cups of pre-cooked rhubarb, and a half cup of sugar. Stir gently, just long enought to plump up the currants.

Remove from heat, add a teaspoon of fresh lemon juice and a quarter cup of finely ground nuts (ground sunflower seed kernels are fine.)

This is delicious served warm over a freshly baked shortcake, or plain homemade biscuits.

Another delicious way with rhubarb, for a cold dessert, is to pre-cook the cubes and set them aside until they are almost cool. Then add a half cup of coconut, half a cup of honey and a cup of cut marshmallows. These proportions are for the basic two-cup amount of pre-cooked rhubarb.

Serve this with either fresh pouring cream, commercial thick sour cream or yoghurt.

A gelatine dessert is sure to please, and as with all cold desserts can be made well ahead.

This is rhubarb whip. Cook rhubarb cubes with one cinnamon stick in a tablespoon of water until soft. Remove cinnamon. Measure off one and three-quarter cups of fruit. Soak one packet of plain unflavored gelatine in one tablespoon cold water for 5 minutes. Then stir into hot rhubarb over slow heat until gelatine completely dissolves.

Add one-half cup of sugar or honey and one-eighth teaspoon salt. Cool in refrigerator until thickening commences.

Then whip with a beater until frothy, and carefully fold in the stiffly beaten white of one egg. Set in refrigerator at once.

Rhubarb cooked in a covered casserole dish in the oven with a tablespoon of water and a third of lemon rind will need far less sweetening than the other methods.

Try it thickened with a quarter cup of wheat germ before serving, either hot or cold, over a mound of cottage cheese.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Indian Daze

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thank goodness somebody finally gave the American Indian a little attention. If only to credit him with the distinction of keeping his hair long after other men have lost theirs. (Seldom does one ever see a bald Indian.)

Being a Cherokee, I can acquaint you with several other natural advantages we Indians have:

Our eyesight and hearing is superior to most white men's. And our sense of smell is extremely acute. (I can smell the presence of a poisonous snake at 40 paces.) I can also communicate with the jay bird, grey squirrel, and coyote in their language—not mine.

The white man has never been able to build a dwelling that compares with the "air-conditioned" teepee built by the Indian. Also, Indians have been preserving food for centuries, far superior to the dried, canned and frozen concentrates of the whites.

Another, startling fact is that the Navajos have had very few unwanted babies. For centuries, the juice extracted from a certain plant has been used successfully for birth control.

And lest anyone tell you that we were savages, I point out that scalping was introduced to the Indian by the French, who wanted to exterminate the English. The French offered a bounty to the Mohawks for every Englishman they killed. And the proof was a scalp. And no white woman was ever scalped by an Indian!

Happy hunting, Abby — Cherokee Ernie.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the American Indians kept their hair because they knew how to take care of their bodies, and beautiful thick hair is healthy hair.

In this connection, American Indians have known for centuries that tobacco and alcohol were bad for their bodies, and self-respecting Indians smoked only two days a month under a full moon as a religious rite, hence Indians did not poison themselves with tobacco.

Also, Indians would never eat anything that was decayed, spoiled or rotten. This included fermented fruit, from which alcohol was made. Generations of shunning anything fermented made the Indian tolerance for alcohol very low. That is why Indians cannot tolerate alcohol, and respectable Indians will not touch it.

Also, before Columbus landed here, the Indians were already doing dental work, comparable to that performed by the finest dentists in civilized Europe.

I could write a book about how civilized the American Indian was. But nobody would believe it. Proud American.—

DEAR ABBY: Your search for bald Indians was highly entertaining, and I congratulate you for having come up with some interesting facts about the American Indians. Here are a few more:

- ● The average weekly wages of the black man in Watts is $64. The red man earns $30.
- ● Fifty per cent of all Indian children drop out of school before high school.
- ● The infant death rate is 12 per cent higher among American Indians than the national average.
- ● The Indian suicide percentage is the highest in the United States.
- ● The average Indian is dead at age 43.

Maybe that's why you rarely see any bald Indians. Very truly yours, Virginia.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know anything about bald Indians, but I am nearly 90 years old and I lived among Indians most of my life down here in Oklahoma. And I can tell you that if the white man's word was as good as the Indian's I have known, we would have a much better land. Oklahoma White.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

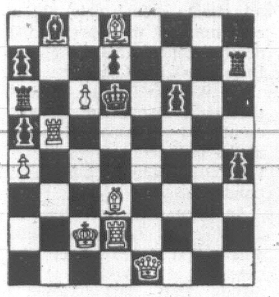
CHESS MASTER

By George Koltanowski
International Chess Master

PROBLEM
By Arnoldo Ellerman, Argentina
BLACK: 9



WHITE: 8

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

THE RATING GAME

Most serious players in the United States have a rating.

You get this by playing in any official United States Chess Federation rated tournament. If you have less than 1,400 points you are a D player; 1,400 to 1,599, C; 1,600-1,799, B; 1,800-1,999, A; 2,000-2,199, Expert; 2,200-2,399, U.S. Master; above 2,400, U.S. Grandmaster. Thus you obtain rating points by playing in these tournaments.

Most of the ratings hold water, but there are always exceptions. This happens when a young player with a low rating advances rapidly, say within a six-month period. Though he is rated low, his rating should be at least 200 points higher than it is, if not more. All adjusts itself in due course, but quite often a U.S. Master gets caught short, playing a lowly rated player in the first round of a tournament.

Let me illustrate the point in question: After all, when a 1,633 player beats a 2,224 master, it's newsworthy. The following game was played in the Los Angeles County Open, 1970. What is interesting in this game is that White obtains a good game until he reaches the ending, at which time Black obtains the upper hand and all seems to be coming up roses. Then, suddenly it's all over! Black blunders in an unusual way, for there's not much left to blunder with. White MUST find the winning move — and he does.

NEW FIDE PRESIDENT

Dr. Max Euwe, ex-champion of the world, has been nominated as next president of the International Chess Federation. The changeover should take place in Siegen, W. Germany, during the Chess Olympics in September of this year. Most of the grandmasters look forward keenly to this change, as they feel that at long last a grandmaster will be really representing them and will understand their problems and attitudes much better than has been the case in the past. To top it all off, the great Dutchman is also the perfect gentleman.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. Q-KR1.

Drummers Have Own College

TORONTO (CP) — Take 251 drummers doing their thing for 44 weeks every year and, yes, you have a great deal of noise.

Give these same drummers a building to drum in, $12,000 worth of instruments to practise with and a 34-year-old instructor with 20 years' experience and you have the Ontario College of Percussion in Toronto.

Paul Robson, head of the college, started drum instruction at 14, when he had a drumming class in a Toronto technical school. This class was parlayed into a working arrangement with the Toronto board of education which continued until 1965, when he opened his own school.

Mr. Robson has a staff of 21 full- and part-time instructors. His students enrol for a two-year course which goes on for 44 weeks each year.

Says the college head: "I don't go for these free, loose and undisciplined drummers.

"I turn out drummers who are musical. That's the key word — musical."

He rates as good drummers avant-garde performer Tony Williams; Blood, Sweat and Tears percussion man Bobby Colonby, and Alan Dawson, drummer with Dave Brubeck at a recent Toronto Symphony concert.

RIVALLING EUROPE'S BUSINESS CENTRES

Birmingham Burghers Invest in a Showcase

By JAMES CONWAY

LONDON (CP) — The shrewd burghers of Birmingham invested just £350 ($910) toward turning their city into a national trade shop window which could rival other European showcases such as Italy's Turin or Leipzig in East Germany.

The Birmingham city council has won initial backing from the British government to build an £11,000,000 ($28,600,000) national exhibition centre, a move that has astonished London authorities and sparked the first shots in what could become a heated regional war.

Most trade and industrial organizations and the Greater London Council assumed the capital would get the project which has been under discussion for years.

But quietly, while London lobbyists were still talking, Birmingham businessmen and city councillors presented their own plans to the government. It liked what it saw.

Given the go-ahead, Birmingham will buy a 350-acre farm property outside the city for the exhibition site with 1,000,000 square feet of show space, hotels and a convention centre. It paid an option of £1 an acre towards the total purchase price of £250,000.

OFFERS CIVIC LOAN

A major attraction which swung the trade department was the offer to provide a £3,000,000 loan from city funds to launch the project.

London has maintained it will provide a site only if the government will foot the bill.

Supporters of a London location haven't given up yet. They have until July or August before final approval is given by Parliament and their big guns are being primed to blast the Birmingham proposal.

With its civic pride bristling, London's council is reviewing its plans, likely to be published in May. It has narrowed possible sites down to five, four in suburban locations and one at King's Cross, a dilapidated railway district a mile or so from the city centre.

Lined up behind the London council is a formidable array of organizations which stage the annual industrial, automobile, home-keeping, boating and other leisure-time exhibitions in London's outdated and cramped halls.

Some reports indicate 90 per cent of the potential users of the national centre are against moving out of the metropolis.

The influential Confederation of British Industry has said it doubts the Birmingham site would be economically feasible.

LISTS ADVANTAGES

Birmingham countered that the Midlands area provides 40 per cent of Britain's exports and its site will be the ideal spot to promote them. It contends it has a prime location economically and geographically.

Three major highways nearby provide fast transportation from most parts of Britain and the city also plans to spend £2,500,000 on expanding the civic airport to take transatlantic jumbo jets.

A speedy electric train service opened a couple of years ago now puts the Midlands industrial centre less than 85 minutes from London.

The city's weakness is its lack of accommodation and entertainments. It has only 6,000 hotel beds available within a radius of 20 miles and fewer than 2,000 inside the city.

Critics claim the city couldn't take the strain of a sudden influx of overseas salesmen and delegates.

Birmingham officials argue they can provide about 5,000 additional beds in private homes and student accommodation during university vacations until new hotels are built.

The point out London suffers a similar shortage during its ever-lengthening tourist season when hotels are booked solid for months.

LITTLE NIGHT LIFE

While building in London is getting prohibitively expensive—one estimate put the cost of new hotels at about £15,000 a room — provincial cities qualify for the government's regional tourism development grants of between 20 and 30 per cent on new buildings.

However, Birmingham can't begin to match London's night life. Three clubs closed down there last year and one of the city's three professional theatres is likely to go the same way within a few months.

Officials aren't unduly worried about this drawback.

"It's a popular myth that businessmen want nothing more than flashy nightclubs," commented one.

"By the time they have spent a day walking round an exhibition hall, most businessmen are too tired to hit the night spots.

"Those that do will be provided for. It will, of course, be respectable entertainment."

Birmingham's biggest worry is that the government will yield to London-backed pressure. Even if it doesn't, some commercial interests are threatening to set up a rival exhibition centre in London anyway to siphon off customers from the Midlands site.

Man Is The Prey

By JAMES CLARKE

Snakes are strange creatures. Most are incapable of exerting themselves to any great extent, for only the left lung has survived the evolutionary processes which have made snakes what they are — just one long, narrow rib cage with a head at one end.

The remaining lung is so elongated that the rear end is almost non-functional. Nor have they any antibodies in their blood, in the normal sense, and thus even a tickbite, if it is infected can kill them.

Every continent has its dangerous snakes, although some have considerably more than others. Europe, for instance, has only a dozen species of snakes, none really dangerous. Asia has not the variety one finds in Africa. Australia is unique in having far more deadly snakes than harmless.

★ ★ ★

One or two islands in the world are inexplicably free from snakes: Madagascar is one and yet it lies just off snake-infested Africa. The West Indies (except for a few southern islands) is free of snakes, and yet tropical America has scores of species.

Ireland too is free of snakes and yet England, across the narrow sea, is well populated with them. New Zealand and Hawaii are also free of snakes and both forbid them to be brought in for any purpose.

The World Health Organization makes a "conservative estimate" that 40,000 people die of snakebite annually — 70 per cent of them in India. Parts of Burma have the highest incidence of fatal snakebites in the world — 30 deaths per thousand head of population, according to one authority.

Part 4 in a Series

The United States loses just over a hundred people a year. In Africa, where few written records exist for this sort of thing, I would imagine the annual toll must be 7,000.

A Nairobi safari firm instructs its employees that if a client is bitten by a venomous snake while on a safari they must insist that the snake was harmless. They must say the injection of antivenim is a precaution—and presumably if they have to apply a tourniquet they pass it off as a practical joke.

★ ★ ★

The idea is sound, for the more a patient relaxes, the less the heart pumps and the longer it takes for the venom to travel through the body. By the same token, quite a number of snakebite deaths are caused by the victim mistakenly drinking alcohol, which stimulates the heart and quickens the action of the venom.

Generally speaking, snake venom falls into one of two types according to species. The cobras carry a highly efficient neurotoxin which attacks the nerves and can cause paralysis of the heart and lungs. The adders carry a haemotoxin which destroys the blood vessels and clots the blood.

The cobra venom is slow in local effect but quite rapid in general effect, so that a tourniquet should always be applied. The adder venom is the reverse, so that a tourniquet should NOT be applied.

FAREWELL TO CLEO is said by Mark Antony shortly before she commits suicide by dropping an asp in her bosom. Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor brought romance to the event in film but real Cleopatra likely died grotesquely from bite of snake.

PLAYING WITH SNAKES is a thrill for some like 23-year-old Marilyn Hawkes, who works at Jungle World in Sarnia, Ontario, but one accident can be painful; possibly fatal.

How do you know which is which? Generally speaking, the adders are thickset and short, with broad heads, while the cobras are slender, long, have no visible neck unless the hood is spread and the head in inconspicuous.

The adder's toxin causes immediate intense pain: the cobra's neuotoxin causes sleepiness, weakness, vomiting and partial paralysis within a fairly short time.

It is much more pleasant to be bitten by a cobra," a snake-catcher once told me.

★ ★ ★

A lot of literary licence has been taken with the various species of large constricting snakes, and although they may not be capable of dangling from trees waiting to snatch cattle off the ground (as one author claims) there are some very large ones.

Authenticated specimens have reached these sizes: regal python of Eastern India and Malaysia —33 feet; South America anaconda — 25 feet (but heavier); Indian rock python — 25 feet; African python — just over 20 feet.

A few years ago a slightly built young man in Johannesburg demonstrated for me how to deal with a python. We selected a 14-foot python weighing 130 pounds. When the snake began to constrict he uncoiled it from the tail and it did not have the strength to resist.

"The secret," he said, "is always keep one hand free. I think if it had pinned both my arms I would have been in trouble."

Africa is unique in being the home of the spitting cobra, Naia nigricollis, which can eject a fine spray of venom with fair accuracy up to eight feet. The action is uncannily expert. The snake rears, spreads its hood, and opens and shuts its mouth; it is as quick as that. The twin jets of venom are pushed with tremendous force through the tiny holes at the end of tubular fangs and from a distance of six feet it just cannot miss. It can eject venom three to four times in a few seconds.

★ ★ ★

The effects are immediate and, if one has a scratch on the face, possibly fatal. The eyes become inflamed, possibly for days, and rubbing may lead to permanent blindness.

The African remedy is to lay the victim on his back and urinate in his eyes. This is fine and it usually works, but one day somebody will find the heart to tell them that ordinary water, milk, lemonade, almost any liquid, will do just as well.

There is still controversy over the species of snake Cleopatra used in committing suicide; the odds are that it was an asp. The asp had deep religious connections in ancient Egypt and political prisoners were usually given the choice of death by torture or by the bite of an asp.

But paintings of the beautiful Cleopatra lying serenely in death with her hands clasped and her gown smoothed down, with her dead handmaidens draped around, are more fanciful than accurate, for although she would quickly have gone into a coma, death would have been preceded by violent convulsions, copious salivation and evacuations of the bowels and bladder.

Incidentally, Cleopatra's enemies the Romans for a time used snakes in warfare at sea. They used to drop eatherware pots ful of them on the decks of enemy ships as boarding parties gathered.

SPREAD OVER FOUR HALLS

Music Festival Program

Music festival activity on opening day, Monday, will be spread over four separate halls.

At Sir James Douglas School auditorium, noted Canadian musician — composer Murray Adaskin — will preside over string sessions of elementary school orchestras, starting at 9 a.m. and continuing all day.

Also starting at 9 a.m. and continuing through the day at Central Junior Secondary auditorium, there will be folk and creative dance sessions. The adjudicator is Mrs. Marcia Snider of Vancouver, part-time lecturer in folk dance at UBC and president of the Vancouver International Dancers.

●

At Oak Bay Junior Seconday auditorium, beginning at 1 p.m., six classes for recorders will be followed by three for rhythm bands and related instrumental groups.

Dr. Frank Gamble, UBC's noted authority on recorders, will adjudicate.

An evening session at Victoria Senior Secondary auditorium will be devoted to junior and senior secondary orchestras. Starting time is 7:30 p.m.

Strings and dance sessions continue in the same halls Tuesday, with dance concluding Tuesday afternoon and string classes continuing through Wednesday.

●

On Wednesday morning at Oak Bay Junior, school choral classes continue through the day and evening. Adjudicator is Douglas Talney, associate professor of music, theory and history at UBC.

School choirs continue throughout Thursday from 9 a.m. to approximately 6 p.m., while Blanshard School auditorium hosts accordion classes all day and evening. Well known B.C. accordion authority, Crawford Clarke, returns as adjudicator.

Only session on Friday is the evening honor performance by outstanding school groups.

In the second week adult and junior vocal solo, ensemble and choral classes, piano, pipe organ, brass and woodwind, school bands and speech arts will take the stage.

Halls where the various events are scheduled are as follows:

Vocal — Fellowship Hall, First United Church.

Pipe organ and piano — St. John's Church and Memorial Hall.

Speech Arts — St. Ann's Academy.

Brass and Woodwind — Blanshard School.

●

Vocal and piano classes will be adjudicated by touring Britons from the Federation of Canadian Music Festivals chain.

They are Rankin Bushby, professor of singing at the Royal College of Music, London, and Sidney Harrison, recitalist, lecturer and author and a graduate of the Guildhall School of Music, London.

Mrs. Leona Paterson will adjudicate speech arts. She is chairman of the speech and drama department of Mount Royal College, Calgary.

Dr. William Revelli, head of the wind instrument department and professor of music at the University of Michigan, is to adjudicate the winds and band classes.

An open class for classical guitar has attracted five entries. It takes place the evening of April 24 at St. John's Hall. Adjudicator is Chris Jorna, founder of the Guitar Centre in Vancouver and former specialist instructor in guitar at Simon Fraser University. (See also page 37.)

Writing Eases Love's Pain— A Bridge Over Troubled Water

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Writing can be a great help; it's like a rope to a drowning person. It was writing that helped me keep my head above water."

Dory Previn was talking. For 10 years she was the wife of the composer-pianist-conductor Andre Previn. Then he left her and became the father of Mia Farrow's twins. The Previns still are not divorced.

"The matter is in litigation, and that's all I'm going to say about it," she says.

She seems to be recovering from the affair. Obviously the hurt ran deep, but now she had other things to think about — such as a career as a film writer and Tuesday night's academy awards. She is a nominee for lyricist of Come Saturday Morning, the song for The Sterile Cuckoo which she wrote with Fred Karlin.

An attractive young woman with brown poodle-cut hair, Dory Previn grew up in Woodbridge, N.J., and went to New York for a career as an actress.

GOT CONTRACT

In 1959 she landed an MGM contract with Arthur Freed, who wanted to establish a stock company for musical creators. Her collaborator was Andre Previn.

The collaboration led to marriage, and she wrote lyrics for Previn's songs in films for several studios. She also teamed with such composers as Gene DePaul, Elmer Berstein, Johnny Williams and even Fred Astaire.

Four years ago she started writing screen plays, because Previn had begun work on Coco with Alan Jay Lerner.

Dory has written five scripts, and one. Don't Touch Me, has been optioned by producers seven times. Two others have also been optioned, and one was commissioned by a film-maker.

She will also be writing lyrics for the stage musical of Great Expectations.

She says: "If you are a lyricist, you can can write your private emotions. You can tell people in song: 'Look —I have been in pain'."

The Joy of Music The Thrill of the Dance

SPEECH ARTS have attracted the youngest and oldest entrants in the Festival. S. R. Thomson, 77, listens as sextet from Jiminy Crickets Kindergarten speech choir recites test piece, The Bagpipe Man.

Music Festival Opens Monday

By AUDREY JOHNSON

With all the talk of generation gaps and communication difficulties, the Greater Victoria Music Festival stands out as one major annual event with no problems along those lines.

It is, in fact, compact, packaged proof of the observation that music — and certain other allied performing arts — is a universal language transcending age, creed, race and nationality.

The 1970 Victoria Music Festival begins at 9 a.m. on Monday and, with only a Saturday-Sunday recess, continues through April 25.

It is more than 20 years since the festival was reorganized. And each year its universality has been proved time and again.

Norwegian and Chinese groups have enriched the festival with the ethnic beauty and color of their folk dances.

Family groups, sisters, brothers, parents, have performed together on the festival stage. New Canadians and native-born have met on common ground, joined forces, found mutual encouragement.

★ ★ ★

This year the festival's possible 425 classes have attracted approximately 1,200 entries ranging from four, five and six-year-olds to adults in their 60s and 70s. Since many of these are group entries — such as dance, band, orchestra and choral — the number of people actually participating actually mounts into the region of two and three thousand.

Add to that the couple of dozen Festival Association members who work all year on organization, the volunteers who staff the nine halls where festival events take place, the teachers and adjudicators, to say nothing of the periphery of relatives and friends and interested public, and one begins to get an idea of the extent of the total involvement.

This year the festival directors have made a move towards the non-competitive concept.

In several instances in the schools' section there is a choice of either competitive or non-competitive classes and it is interesting to note that there are good entries in both categories.

It is the feeling of many people, including some adjudicators, that the non-competitive festival, where entrants receive an evaluation of their work but no marks or grading, provides the ideal situation.

Another feature this year is the celebration of the bicentenary of Beethoven's birth in 1770.

For this purpose special classes stipulating Beethoven works for piano, violin, voice and other instruments have been included.

★ ★ ★

Winners of these classes will proceed to provincial finals at the University of B.C. School of Music in Vancouver, May 30. Provincial awards are in the form of scholarships donated by the B.C. Music Festival Association and prominent Vancouver teacher, Mrs. Phyllis Schuldt.

The Beethoven classes will be held on the evening of April 23 at First United Fellowship Hall.

This evening will be an addition to the customary special concerts.

Next week, Monday through Friday, is devoted to schools' participation and two of the special concerts are on Wednesday (dance) and Friday (schools' honor performance.) These will both be in Central Junior Secondary auditorium.

The speech arts honor concert is in the second week, Friday, April 24, and the festival winds up with the gala Festival Highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse, Saturday, April 25.

The Highlights Concert will feature winners of the CBC choir award. Rose Bowl vocal award, Victoria Medallion piano award, Congress of Strings competition and other outstanding performers.

Incidentally, for anyone interested, the economy buy of the month is a $3 season ticket which admits the holder to any festival session only excepting the Highlights Concert, and which gives them a half-price rate even for that event.

These, and programs giving full information and names of all entrants will be available at the halls at every session.

FESTIVAL THEME of the Beethoven Bicentenary is concentrated in special Beethoven classes in the festival's second week. Two of the entrants are singer Jennifer Angus (left) and Heather Attwell, pianist.

MAJOR INCREASE appears in string classes this year with schools participating heavily. Chamber group from Oak Bay Senior Secondary includes violinists (left to right) Brian Nisbet, Dan Barker, Andrea Bertram and Steve Calder. Festival is more than 20 years old and offers a varied program of music and dancing in competitive and non-competitive events.

Nudity And All That

By FRANK GRAY

TORONTO — If the nudity now showing on stages here is any indication, Toronto theatre has come a long way since dancer Isadora Duncan's 1909 visit to Massey Hall.

Dusty records show that audiences and city officials were shocked at Miss Duncan's performance, which involved a display of nude limbs—she danced barefoot to a ballet by German composer Christoph Gluck.

So far this year, at least five plays, ballets and musicals have shown not only bare feet but total bareness—both male and female. Some have even featured simulated sex acts and profane language.

In Hair, the rock-musical showing at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, the entire 29-member cast appears in the buff at the end of the first act.

SWEET EROS

Sweet Eros, a one act play at the Theatre Passe Muraillen calls for performers Margaret Keith and Gordon May to disrobe onstage. In an accompanying satire, In His Own Write, by Beatle John Lennon, the cast of six, all clad in white jump suits, indulge in some provocative poses.

In Spring Thaw 1970, Canada's annual revue being performed at the Playhouse Theatre, one scene features actress Nicole Morin and Alan Jordan naked with their backs to the audience.

Pauline Carey and D'Arcey McHayle in the play Dionysus In '69 at the Studio Lab Theatre take turns appearing without clothes, sometimes beckoning audience participation in some erotic aspects of the performance.

WAREHOUSE

Opening this spring at the Global Village, an old but expensively equipped warehouse, is the rock-ballet Justine, which its director says will contain, by conventional definition, some nudity and four-letter words.

By most accounts, the theatres have been packing them in, and with little or no interference from the Toronto morality squad.

Officials at the 1,447-seat Royal Alex report that nearly every performance has been sold out since Hair opened Jan. 11. Despite reports to the contrary, they say there has been no police interference.

Producer Ernest Schwartz said his production of Dionysus has drawn many capacity audiences to the 285-seat theatre, attributing the good crowds to the audience participation rather than the nudity.

FELT SURE

"We thoroughly rehearsed and previewed the play so we felt pretty sure of ourselves when we opened last November," he said in an interview.

"About the only troubles we've had from the morality squad have come about the profanity, not the nudity, but there has been no action."

Spring Thaw producer Howard Bateman commented:

"Sure, our skit contains nudity and also has that four-letter word. But our whole attitude is to approach nudity and profanity with humor. No point in being solemn about it.

"The morality squad has been around to pay us a visit. . . They didn't laugh or applaud, but afterwards had a chat with the stage manager. But that's about all."

Director Martin Kinch said that Sweet Eros and In His Own Write have been popular enough "to bring some viability" to his theatre group. Attendance at the 200-seat theatre has been high on weekends, bringing gross revenues of $1,200 a week.

CONTROWWERSY

Montreal-born director Robert Swerdlow was disdainful of the controversy.

"Justine will have some four-letter words and nakedness but it will be tasteful and in context with the work. As far as I'm concerned, there is no such thing as nudity and profanity.

"What we are trying to do here, is develop a Canadian theatre troupe using original Canadian material. Justine is based only very loosely on the character created by De Sade."

LAST PERFORMANCE with Bastion before leaving for Charlottetown (where he will be in two summer festival productions) will be Bill Hosie in title role of That Man From Moscow. Also in Bastion production are his sister Dorothy (left) and wife Sylvia. (See story at right.)

Bill's That Man From Moscow

Victoria's talented Hosie family—Bill, his wife Sylvia and sister Dorothy—form a notable team in the Bastion Theatre production of That Man From Moscow.

The Marge Adelberg musical comedy gets its premiere performance Thursday at McPherson Playhouse.

Bill, whose featured roles in Bastion productions have included everything from Sammy Schlupp-Schlupp the wolf, to Sir Lancelot, plays the title role.

He portrays Hlestakov, a young traveller who is mistaken for a government official from Moscow when he visits a small provincial town riddled with graft and corruption.

The resulting chaos, covering up and attempted bribery of town officials makes hilarious comedy.

Fourteen original songs have been written for the show, which is an adaptation of Gogol's Inspector General.

* * *

A fine Victoria bass soloist, Hans Steffen, appears for the first time on Bastion's stage as the Mayor.

Sylvia Hosie plays his social-climbing wife and Dorothy Hosie his daughter, both of whom believe Hlestakov is smitten with them.

This will be Bill Hosie's last appearance with Bastion before leaving for Charlottetown where he is under contract for roles in two festival productions this summer — Jane Eyre and Turvy.

Other well known city stage personalities appearing in the production are Norman Tyrrell, Roy Silver, Margaret Martin and Barry Grimshaw.

Musical arrangements have been made by Chet Lambertson, arranger of music for many of the Butchart Gardens revues.

General direction is by Peter Mannering and Howard Denike will conduct the orchestra.

The show will run through April 24 with special youth theatre performances April 20, 21 and 22.

Time for Change In Blues Music

By MICHAEL BENNETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"The time is right for a new direction in blues music. Having decided to dispense with heavy lead guitar and drums, usually a must for blues groups today, I set about forming a new band which would be able to explore seldom-used areas within the framework of low-volume music."

That is English bluesman John Mayall's succinct statement on the back of Turning Point, an album which probably marks the most radical departure in form in pop music today.

"To make a piece of music, everyone seems to use a lead guitar or up-front instrument, bass, a keyboard—piano or organ, and drums," Mayall said following a recent standing-room-only concert in Vancouver.

"When they experiment, they add some instruments, but they always stick to the same four, as if it were a rule.

"It's unnecessary. The possibilities are limitless."

Gone are the banks of amplifiers and the bare-wire guitar sounds of the Blues Breakers. Mayall uses Jon Mark on acoustic finger-style guitar, Johnny Almond on flute and tenor and alto saxophones, and bass guitarist Steve Thompson.

CHANGES DON'T STOP

"It's just that there is a breaking point in everything," Mayall said.

"That's why I quit mine last year. I hate categories.

"Structure is essential in some forms of music, but I can't do it. I can't read or write music and I'm not a technician.

"A musician can't give up learning. He must continue to discover or he finds everyone —especially his audience—has moved ahead."

And Mayall's changes don't stop with Turning Point.

He said people expecting more of the same on his newest album, Empty Rooms, are going to be disappointed and a lot of critics are going to be confused.

"Empty Rooms is a subdued, listening album with a concentration on lyrics rather than musical interpretation.

"It's not like Turning Point where there were words at the beginning and end and music in between.

"You can't compare them. Turning Point was a gig, a live album (recorded last July at the Fillmore East in New York). Empty Rooms is a studio thing. They are two different mediums."

The 12 tracks were finished in December and recorded in bits and pieces in London, Los Angeles, New York—"four or five different places."

"It's all about today . . . about love and loneliness—the things that are important to me," said the 36-year-old blues innovator, who does four one-man-band cuts and all the vocals on Empty Rooms.

"There isn't a track where I don't play more than one instrument."

BALLET AT EXPO

Swords, Skulls And Slippers

TORONTO — Two gigantic boxes containing 270 pairs of slippers, swords and skulls left for Japan ths month.

The cargo, weighing 15,000 pounds valued at $150,000 included everything the National Ballet of Canada will need for its week of performances in May at Expo '70 in Osaka.

As the only representatives of classical Western dance to appear at the world's fair, the Toronto-based company wants to make sure nothing goes wrong.

FIRST TIME

The Expo appearance is the first overseas venture in the National Ballet's 20-year history and the first time it has had to ship equipment months in advance.

The expedition will also be remarkable because Romeo and Juliet will be staged with 14 Japanese extras and the ballet will perform to the accompaniment of the RCMP brass band on Canada Day, May 27.

The Canada Day performance of a waltz from Swan Lake will be the company's only appearance in the world's fair grounds.

In downtown Osaka's Festival Theatre, the company will perform John Cranko's Romeo and Juliet May 24, 25 and 26. On May 28-29, the Canadian dancer will present a three-part program of George Balanchine's Four Temperaments, Roland Petit's Le Loup and Kenneth MacMillan's Solitaire.

The ballet will join other representatives of Canadian culture in the trek to Japan: the Montreal symphony, Les Feux-Follets folk dance group and Charlottetown Festival's production of Anne of Green Gables.

Artistic director Celia Franca said the National Ballet's program was chosen in consultation with the Japanese authorities.

"They know their public's taste better than we do."

The founder of the National Ballet said she expects an enthusiastic reception from Japanese audiences.

"The Japanese have such an ancient and profound culture themselves that they are quick to respond to somebody else's culture."

BARD BOPULAR

Wallace Russell, the company's general manager, said Expo authorities requested that the Canadians include Romeo and Juliet because the Japanese are very fond of Shakespeare.

"And they're delighted with Le Loup because animals being portrayed by humans has always been part of Japanese culture."

He estimated the cost of the expedition as about $250,000-$140,000 paid by the Canadian government, the rest by the Japanese.

One reason the company is looking forward to the Osaka engagement is the expected presence of international critics.

"Any acknowledgement of our artistic success there is bound to be good for us."

The 60 dancers and 22 members of the company's artistic, musical, technical and administrative staff will go by jet to Japan.

Banned In Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — Warned that nudity is still banned in Boston, the cast of the rock mucical "Hair" ended their run here Friday night by giving a free concert fully clothed from the balcony outside the Wilbur Theatre.

The producers of the show cancelled the engagement Friday following a ruling by the Massachusetts Supreme Court Thursday that performers must wear minimal clothing and that scenes simulating sexual acts be deleted.

Faust Is No Love Story

TORONTO (CP) Barker Fairley, the kindly scholar who for 20 years headed the University of Toronto's German department, and Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, the towering genius of 19th century German literature, have something in common.

Both, in their 80s, climaxed lifetimes of creative work by completing a version of the epic drama Faust.

Goethe's Faust was a modernized version of the medieval legend about the man who sells his soul to the devil and finally succeeds in breaking the pact and achieving salvation.

Faust has often been rendered into English but Mr. Fairley maintains the previous translators made the mistake of trying to duplicate Goethe's complex verse forms.

RING BELL

"None of these translations rang the bell," he said in a recent interview. "So many people have started to read Faust—and never finished."

This feeling prompted him to render Goethe's masterpiece into contemporary English—all 12,000 lines of it.

Fairley's Faust will enter the repertory of the St. Lawrence Centre Theatre Company April 21 and its premiere will be an important event in the English-language theatre world because, although abridged, it presents Part I and the lesser-known Part II of Goethe's work.

Mr. Fairley says Faust is largely known through Gounod's opera version which is nothing more than "a bourgeois love tragedy."

"It doesn't represent Faust at all. Faust isn't a love story; it's a philosophical poem."

He says that because of the continuing influence of Gounod's opera, "Faust is either about seducing a simple girl or going to hell."

"Goethe was a modern man and he converted a medieval story about man's self-confidence and progress. He treats the problems of life and solves it positively. He indicates a solution."

This solution, he says, is that salvation comes through productive activity.

He Doesn't Poke Fun At Ghosts

Do you believe in ghosts?

"I'm a skeptic," replied a 39-year-old Englishman who in the last few years has probably been exposed to supernatural writings and material more than anyone else.

"But sometimes I'm inclined to think there must be something to ghosts," said Richard Cavendish, a leading authority on magic and witchcraft and author of The Black Arts, a study of black magic in Europe.

Cavendish, who is also editor of the new magazine Man, Myths and Magic, an illustrative encyclopedia of the supernatural published in London, was in Victoria this week on a business visit.

Ghosts are still very much around England, he said, but the headless types — the ones that carry their heads in their hands — are definitely out of fashion.

MODERN SPOOKS

"I sometimes meet five or six people a week who see ghosts — modern ones," he said.

He said there is a big interest in the supernatural in the world today.

"Didn't that spell the decline of rationalism?"

"I'm all for the decline of rationalism," he replied. "Since the start of the industrial revolutions we have concentrated too much on science and technology.

"We have been unduly dominated by reason and intellect."

Educated at Christ's Hospital and Brasenose College, Oxford, Cavendish in the last few years amassed material on all aspects of the supernatural.

The result, to appear in the illustrated magazine encyclopedia, is a comprehensive survey of the supernatural — a study of magic, mythology and religion — all over the world. There will be 112 weekly issues.

TWO OF THE STARS of the Canadian cast of Hair, Pauline Peterson (left) and Brenda Gordon, learned more about the mysteries of the occult when they met Richard Cavendish, editor of a new magazine, Man, Myth and Magic, which is devoted to all aspects of the supernatural. The Hair players are especially interested in astrology, a popular subject with the young.

Show Business Journal Takes Fling in Vancouver

TORONTO (CP) — The first edition of a show business journal called Stage Door has appeared with a declaration that it will represent Canada's entertainment field in its entirety.

The tabloid will be published weekly in Vancouver by dancer and choreographer James Colistro and will be nationally distributed on newsstands. It costs 35 cents a copy or by subscription $15 a year.

* * *

A news release said the journal begins "at a time when Canadians are showing more enthusiasm than ever for home-produced shows and performers and when the Canadian Radio-Television Commission is readying Canada's biggest boost for national talent with its new regulations which will increase the Canadian-made productions this fall to a new high level."

The journal's first issue includes columns from Toronto, Vancouver, Montreal, London and Hollywood and an interview with Sydney Newman, special adviser to CRTC Chairman Pierre Juneau.

* * *

For performers, Stage Door publishes castings and reviews of legitimate theatre, films and night club acts.

Actress Toni Sinclair took a full-page advertisement in the first edition listing her 1969-70 engagements. CTV and CBC placed the only other advertisements in the 16-page edition.

DAUGHTER of a noted gypsy family whose name has long been synonymous with flamenco, Rosa Montoya is the fiery partner of Castilian dancer Ciro, whose Ballet Flamenco appears at the Royal Theatre Sunday at 3 p.m. and Monday at 8:30 p.m. Born in Madrid, Rosa is said to have literally danced before she walked and as a child, critics were already predicting a brilliant career for her. When not on tour with the company she is the lead female dancer at Ciro's Chateau Flamenco in New Orleans where she also conducts a successful flamenco school.

Dancer Has Surgery

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sheila Mackinnon, principal dancer with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, has received emergency surgery to an injured knee which leaves her professional future uncertain.

The ballet company annonuced today that Miss Mackinnon, who has danced despite persistent trouble with bursitis in both knees, injured her right knee in rehearsals before the final show of the season last week.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Early Historian Told Tall Tales

By BOB BOWMAN

Bob Edwards, the colorful publisher of the "Calgary Eye-Opener," once said "Never spoil a good story with facts." One of Canada's first historians, Father Hennepin, had the same idea. He was a Recollet priest who was sent to Quebec in 1675 and attached himself to the great explorer, LaSalle. Although Hennepin has gone down in history as "the most impudent of liars" he left a great deal of valuable writing including the first description of Niagara Falls.

Hennepin might not have lived to tell his tales if it had not been for one of the bravest French officers who came to Canada, Daniel Greysolon DuLhut, after whom the city of Duluth is called. Hennepin claimed to have gone from the Illinois River to the mouth of the Mississippi and back in 30 days, although it was a distance of 3,200 miles. That was good paddling for three men in a canoe!

He and his companions were captured by Sioux Indians on April 11, 1680. Fortunately for them DuLhut was travelling on the waters of the upper Mississippi and heard that three white men had been captured. He thought they were probably Englishmen poaching on territory claimed by France and went to investigate. When he found that Father Hennepin and his companions were the three prisoners he decided to rescue them even though there were 1,000 Sioux in the camp.

DuLhut marched into the centre of the village where he found the chief, and berated him for having taken Hennepin's robes and making him work like a slave. The Indians were so impressed with DuLhut's bravery that they released Hennepin and his companions.

Later Hennepin claimed that it was he who had rescued DuLhut!

Other events on April 11:

1617 — Champlain left France on sixth voyage to Canada bringing Dr. Lousi Hebert.

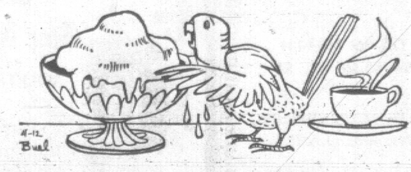
1713 — Britain obtained Nova Scotia from France by Treaty of Utrecht.

1768 — Montreal greatly damaged by fire.

1872 — Parliament began session that made trade unions legal.

1884 — Amateur Athletic Union of Canada was formed.

The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

People who've never owned a bird don't know what they are missing. I haven't been without one for the last 50 years. Pudgie, my parakeet, is more people than bird. He has a 400-word vocabulary you wouldn't believe. He eats at the table with me (has excellent table manners, too) for meals and at tid-bit times. He loves cream and sugar in his coffee, likes mashed potatoes and gravy, and his favorite dessert is chocolate pudding.

I know you're thinking he's too fat but he isn't because he doesn't eat much but people food. I have to sprinkle his birdseed on his dessert to get him to eat any at all. He is now five years old and seemingly in perfect health except his feathers are pretty scraggly. (They get pretty gummy when he gets too deep in the chocolate pudding sometimes but it washes off.) I just wonder if there is some kind of shot or pills to get his feathers back in better shape — H.M.

DEAR H: You can expect Pudgie's pampered palate to affect more than his feather folicles eventually. For one thing, his digestive tract, including his gizzard, isn't geared to the glop he has been stowing away. He can't maintain anything faintly resembling adequate nutrition on seedless servings. The sooner you get him back on a reasonably birdy banquet, the better his chances to improve his plumage and other portions of his anatomy as well. (Changes induced by chronic malnutrition are generally insidious.) The doctor should check him out and give you specific advice, dietary and otherwise, regarding Pudgie's proper care.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I don't claim to be a dog expert, but I do know something about my favorite breed, the cocker spaniel. I do anjoy going to dog shows, particularly the speciality shows. I know something of the standards of this breed, and it constantly amazes me how different judges pick a winner. You would think all judges, if equally competent, would pick the same dog. Yet this rarely happens. Why the differences from the men who are supposed to know? — O.G.

DEAR O.G.: Here's one clue: Dog judges are as human as anyone else. Each places his own interpretation of the standard presented. This (usually slight) difference in interpretation of the breed standard often accounts for a difference of opinion between judges. Then, competition aside, while every dog may or may not have his day, there's bound to be some dog days when a dog isn't at his best, in the ring or out of it.

DEAR DR. MILLER: A death in our family has had a strange twist. It was Pixie, our nine-year-old cat. She died from an internal abcess. We thought shy, retiring, Clunie would miss her terribly. They were half-sisters, had been together six years. But in these two months since, just the opposite has heppened. Clunie has come out of her cocoon, becoming more friendly, more playful, and in every way a happier cat. She even seems a lot smarter than she used to. Everyone is amazed at the difference. Would she welcome, or resent, a new "sister"? Does this sort of transformation occur often? — A.B.

DEAR A.B.: Yes, the subordinated sister may never really get a chance to blossom while under the shadow of her stronger sibling. Clunie is relieved and happy to be the head cat even, if that means being the only cat. She would probably tolerate another feline in the family but doubtless would resent it a little or a lot depending on whether Clunie remained the head cheese.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: A friend has a butterfly fish and, of course, has to keep the top of the tank covered with glass so the fish won't fly out. Which brings me to my question: how far can a flying fish fly? — B.F.

DEAR B.F.: Most flying fish are marine species. The most aeronautical of these may fly (glide, actually) through the air for distances up to 1200 feet.

Meals of Fungus Could Save Starving Third World

By GORDON WAINMAN

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The protein-hungry underdeveloped part of the world may have an answer to its nutrition problems in a mushroom-like fungus which was isolated from sewage two years ago in a University of Western Ontario laboratory.

Bohumil Volesky, a graduate student and immigrant from Czechoslovakia, in consultation with Dr. J. E. Zajic, head of the biochemical engineering department at Western, discovered the fungus by chance.

They were attempting to isolate a certain bacterial form from sewage in a chemically neutral solution, when by mistake the solution was allowed to become acidic. Not only did they find the bacteria in the sealed glass container, but also a hitherto undiscovered fungus.

"We had a choice," Dr. Zajic said. "We could throw the batch out and start all over or we could continue the experiment to see what the fungus would do."

They chose to continue, and discovered that when exposed to a mixture of natural gas, mineral water and compressed air, the fungus thrived.

OUTSTRIPS PLANTS

Graphium fungus, which is about 56 per cent protein and contains vitamins, fats and other nutritious substances, doubles its mass in six hours compared to plants which in the best growing conditions double their mass in 10 days and animals, at the best growth period, in 20 days.

Dr. Zajic said tests have shown the amino-acid content of the fungus he and Mr. Volesky discovered and named compares favorably to the standard described by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the World Health Organization.

The key to the fungus's rapid growth is natural gas which is comprised mostly of methane and ethane. It takes two pounds of natural gas to produce one pound of protein-rich fungus. The cost of production is one-quarter of a cent a pound compared with 12 cents when using glucose or sugar instead of natural gas, and five cents using starch.

The cost involves the materials only, Dr. Zajic said, stressing that if the product were to be mass-produced the cost of the production plant would have to be included.

EASILY RECOVERED

"We hope to work on an even cheaper source of ethane gas called flare gas which is a byproduct of the refinery process," Mr. Volesky said. To produce a pound of the fungus from flare gas the cost is only .04 cents a pound.

Natural gas was chosen for the experiment because of its worldwide availability, Dr. Zajic said. "It offers high purity, ease of handling and low cost. It also leaves no toxic products in the medium.

"Thus when the process is completed, it is a simple procedure to recover and dry the proteinacious food."

The growth of microbes in methane and ethane is not new, Dr. Zajic said. The famed Sohngen isolated bacteria in 1906 which grew on these two hydrocarbons.

"The world had a 60-year dry spell until our research team at the university isolated the first fungus to grow in ethane and lighter gaseous hydrocarbons," Dr. Zajic said.

He noted that the only part sewage played in the discovery and production of the fungus was that it was the original source. Once the fungus was isolated, he and Mr. Volesky simply held back portions from each batch to be used to start another batch.

All the fungus is freeze-dried for storage and handling purposes.

However, as more funds become available he says he hopes to get his team working on an inexpensive way to convert sewage or other industrial wastes to methane and ethane gas to be used in the process.

Although the fungus hasn't yet been put through the extensive tests needed to declare it fit for human consumption, he said he has no doubts it will pass because he and Mr. Volesky have eaten small quantities themselves with no ill effects.

"What we need to develop the process further is money and in North America, which has little need for protein, we have to find another angle to sell the idea to industry," Dr. Zajic said.

An American himself who studied both at the University of Wisconsin and the University of California, he hopes to apply a bit of promotional knowledge to get money from industry for developing the process.

"We're a vitamin-conscious people," Dr. Zajic said, "so we may just be able to interest industry in the idea that vitamins in the fungus can be produced very cheaply."

PLAN FIELD TESTS

The research has expanded to include Dr. Angela Wellman, of the botany department at Western. Steven Davis and Patrick Dabinett are developing biochemical information, and the initial nutritional research is being conducted by Dr. K. K. Carroll of the biochemical department.

This summer Dr. Zajic and Mr. Volesky, who graduates this year with his doctorate, plan to conduct a field experiment in which a 100-gallon metal drum will be used as a container for the process instead of the small sealed glass containers now used.

Also under investigation is possible field testing on animals to be undertaken in some underdeveloped part of the world and the possible isolation of other fungus cultures which can be produced in the presence of methane and ethane gas.

But first things first. Through Canadian Patents Ltd., information is being gathered to have the process patented.

"If it ever goes into production," Dr. Zajic said, "it could mean a great deal of money for the university."

LAB ACCIDENT led to discovery of high-protein fungus isolated from raw sewage solution by graduate student Bohumil Volesky and Dr. J. E. Zajic, head of the biochemical engineering department of the University of Western Ontario. Both think the mushroom-like fungus could fill needs of protein-hungry world. (CP photo.)

Food Prices High In Cold Inuvik

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK

INUVIK, Northwest Territories (WP) — Prices, like the weather, are seldom out of the conversation in this vigorous town 125 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Life here is comfrotable for those who enjoy cost-of-living allowances paid either by the government or by private industry. But by outside standards some of the food prices at the modern Hudson's Bay Company supermarket are fiendish.

Staples can come in by barge during the summer season, but fresh foods must come by air 1,300 miles from Edmonton or 675 miles from Yellowknife.

DOLLAR A DOZEN

Meat prices—95 cents a pound for ground beef and $1.49 for round steak—are not as high as at Frobisher Bay in the eastern Arctic. But milk is higher—98 cents a quart. Eggs, which cost 59 cents a dozen in Yellowknife, are $1.09. Tomatoes (63 cents a pound), potatoes (48), apples (46), and oranges (43) all reflect the air-freight charge of approximately 18 cents a pound from Yellowknife.

One private industry executive from the South figures he spends $350 a month on groceries for himself, his wife and two children. Obviously he has an allowance.

The coldst Inuvik temperature this winter was about —52; but —70 has been recorded. Several years ago it did not get above —50 for about six weeks.

ARCTIC DESERT

Snowfall is relatively light, recalling the fact that the Arctic is a desert. For five weeks each winter the sun does not get above the horizon, although there is a sort of twilight. For a similar period in summer the sun does not set. Already it is light until well after 9 p.m.

People learn to live with the cold; schools permit normal recess periods when the temperature is above—40.

As a rule, airplanes do not fly when it is below —50 because of the danger of metal crystallization. But autos warmed by electric engine heaters operate at any temperature here, as do the popular snowmobiles (although wind chill in the face is a danger with them).

22 BELOW

Since I have been here the lowest temperature has been —22, and because of the dryness it felt about like 10 above in the eastern United States. Inuvik is probably the only community in the world that has a church shaped like an Eskimo igloo. It is the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Victory designed by its pastor, Father Joseph Adam, OMI, who has spent 34 years in the north.

A 17-year-old Metis girl, Mona Thrasher, did much of the art work. Father Adam takes an interest in Eskimo and Indian painters. Outside the church an ice creche sculpture survives from the Christmas season.

Eskimos and Indians may benefit from a new territorial law that permits them to sell their polar bear hunting licence to outsiders. Only natives are now licensed to take polar bears. Sale of the licences may bring them as much as $2,000 instead of the $300-$500 they formerly received for the skins. Under the law outsiders must donate the meat to natives.

Indians in this area belong to the Loucheux tribe of the Athabaskas and speak a language akin to Navajo — a memory of the common migration from Asia thousands of years ago. Persons who know Navajo can understand much Athabaskan.

SINGING STAR Anne Murray appears regularly on the CBC Friday night variety show Singalong Jubilee, 9 p.m. on Channel 2.

From My Side Of the Tube . . .

By WALTER McKINNON

I've been conserving my strength all week to deliver a scathing blast at some facet of television today. But I can't remember exactly which one.

Lucky for television.

Be forewarned ... Apollo 13 is going on schedule, so TV programming will be going off schedule for the next ten days. The third lunar landing mission includes plans for 13½ hours of television from space, including more than ten hours from the moon's surface.

I hope they remember to take a hammer, in case the camera quits on them.

Tonight

Musical Chairs Department

There's a lot of guest-swapping going on tonight. Glen Campbell (6 p.m., Channel 12) plays host to Johnny Cash, Rich Little and Linda Ronstadt. Later in the evening he shows up on Jimmy Durante Presents the Lennon Sisters (9:30 p.m. on Channel 4), along with Arte Johnson from Laugh-In and The Lettermen.

Durante does some visiting, too, when he drops in on Andy Williams (7:30 p.m. on Channel 5) to share the spotlight with Andy's regulars and guests Leslie Uggams and Judy Carne.

Gleason Department

Original sucker Ralph Kramden (JACKIE GLEASON, 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30, Channels, 7 and 12) is under the gun again in this 1967 rerun. When wife Alice dubs him the original sucker you know the Honeymooners are at home. Ralph gets conned into buying a hair restorer invention and quickly spreads the risk by getting friend Norton in on the scene.

Massive Mayhem Department

Viewers tonight get an insight into the background of our hero on Mannix (10 p.m. on Channel 7), when he goes home to investigate a murder on behalf of an old friend—a very close lady-type friend. The woman's husband is the prime suspect but the plot thickens, because he lives in an iron lung. Guests Vera Miles and Victor Jory help to make the show a success.

Government intelligence agents crowd McGarrett, during what starts out as a co-operative effort to find a famous scientist who's been tricked into thinking he is a murderer, tonight on Hawaii Five-O (10 p.m., Channel 2).

Accidental death is immediately ruled out when a colleague is found drowned tonight on Department S (10 p.m. on Channel 6). Jason is chosen to take over the late agent's case—and sets himself up as the next victim.

Appeasing the CRTC Department

The CBC's Saturday night musical filler (COUNTRY-TIME, 7:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6) offers performances by singers Joanne Newman, Gene MacLellan, Doug Bell and the Diamond Trio.

Sunday

Early Movies Department

If you're looking for a nostalgic couple of hours of easy afternoon viewing, try an old movie. Channel 12 is offering the 1958 insanity of Carry On, Sergeant. A crusty old British sergeant, facing retirement, finds that his last batch of recruits is collectively nit-witted.

Another syrupy entry is By the Light of the Silvery Moon, a 1953 musical comedy with Doris Day on Channel 11 at 5.

Nature Department

The Night of the Squid (JACQUES COUSTEAU, 7 p.m., Channel 4) is an excellent documentary on squid on the spawning grounds in the sea off Southern California. Cousteau filmed their life cycle, including the actual mating and spawning acts. This show was seen earlier this year.

In the snow-capped peaks of Yellowstone National Park (WILD KINGDOM, 7 p.m., Channel 5) a large bear is tracked. The object is to tranquilize the animal and tag it for future identification. There is some excellent footage of a pair of playful cubs.

Family Viewing Deparment

For all you baseball fans, Charlie Brown has a message (CHARLIE BROWN'S ALL-STARS, 7:30 p.m., Channel 7). The Peanuts baseball club maintains its perfect record of defeat in this thoroughly enjoyable cartoon feature. Charlie can't do anything right and he takes a big ribbing from the gang.

Cartoonist Monroe and his daughter (MY WORLD, 7:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) like their rather off-hand relationship just as it is . . . but what do they know about it? Lydia's principal and her mother both worry about a lack of paternal affection.

The Longest Hook Shot in the World (BILL COSBY, 8:30 p.m., Channel 8) is a repeat worth watching. Coach Kincaid is putting a basketball team together and he overlooks one of the aspirants because the kid's only about five feet tall. It turns out, however, that he has the longest hook shot in the world. There's a message here, but it's not overdone.

Songs from Sergio Franchi and Florence Henderson, and monologues from comedienne Joan Rivers and raconteur Myron Cohen make Ed Sullivan (8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12) worth watching. Also, the Muppet Puppets perform and so do the singing Young Saints.

Sagas Department

A Family Scandal (8 p.m., Channel 9; 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) rocks the Forsytes in the second visit with John Galsworthy's famous 19th-century British family. Be forewarned that brilliantly written and executed confrontations await you in quick succession. The whole cast is excellent, too, particularly Eric Porter as Soames Forsyte.

PRIME PROGNOSTICATOR PREDICTS

Sullivan, Welk Shows Soon to Go

CHICAGO (WP) — Give Lawrence Welk just one more year on network television. And put down Ed Sullivan for the same sentence.

This is part of the annual forecast made this week by Herb Jacobs, the television industry's most honored prophet. Jacobs has been batting well over .900 in the annual "new season" forecasts he began seven years ago. His success has been good enough for him to expand his TV Stations Inc. consulting business into a new, bigger company called Tel Com Inc.

Welk and Sullivan will have to go after the 1970-71 season because of television's new emphasis on programs that appeal to persons under the age of 50. This is the emphasis that led CBS TV to cancel both "The Jackie Gleason Show" and "The Red Skelton Hour."

The reason Jacobs thinks that Welk is heading out of television is that "enough of his audience have gone to their maker. And its safe to bet, after next season, he'll be back in North Dakota giving polka lessons."

Jacobs predicted a similar fate for Sullivan, whose Sunday night variety show has been a CBS staple for 22 seasons. Jacobs says Sullivan will "continue to lose steam" in audience readings. "And I might add that it should be his last year in line with CBS TV's announced face-lifting policy."

In the Jacobs forecast, NBC will be in first place next January when the TV networks re-tool for the annual "second season." He says that NBC will have average prime time ratings of 20, followed by CBS with 18.8 and ABC's 17.2.

In Jacobs' view the most certain hit of next season will be "The Andy Griffith Show" on CBS. Andy is returning, not as the sheriff of Mayberry, but as the head of a co-educational prep school.

Jacobs' forecast is done each year at a breakfast attended by about 300 persons. Attendance is by invitation and the tickets are a prized item, not only because of Jacobs' track record but also because of the crackling one-liners that accompany the predictions.

For example, ". . . the non-violence kick makes most of the TV schedule seem like benign neglect."

And, "for years 'Lassie' has been lousing up actuary tables that tell us people live longer than dogs."

He Helped Shape a Nation in the Fourth Estate

By BEVERLEY BRAHIC

MONTREAL (CP) — Shortly after New Year's an article on the editorial page of the Montreal Star reported the retirement of the newspaper's editor of 23 years, George Victor Ferguson, at 72.

"Such a retirement marks the formal conclusion of a period which greatly affected the present shape of Canada and in which George Victor Ferguson played an anonymous but significant part," The Star said.

G. V. Ferguson would probably prefer to remain anonymous—he only consented somewhat grumpily to an interview—but the idea that he has retired, though he didn't say so himself, appears to be a misconception.

PLANS NEW BOOK

The outward train of events, which included ascension through the editorial echelons of the Winnipeg Free Press and the Montreal Star—on both he was ultimately appointed editor-in-chief—would normally indicate well-earned withdrawal to long winters in Florida and regular pension cheques.

However, Mr. Ferguson still is a formidable presence in one of the largest and brightest of The Star's editorial offices.

"They were kind enough to let me keep a place around here as long as I want it," he said, still giving at least the impression of a man with imminent deadlines to meet.

"What am I going to do now?" He looked across a deskful of well-sharpened pencils. "I'm going to write a book about my experiences in 45 years of newspaper life."

Already the author of two books, one published in 1948 about J. W. Dafoe, the man he succeeded in 1944 as executive editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, and a second three years later called How We Are Governed, Mr. Ferguson says the book now in his mind will be mostly hindsight.

"It will be looking back with more wisdom than I had—talking about what we did and what we could have done, and about the ways Canadians have changed over my lifetime."

Fifty years ago, Mr. Ferguson said, English Canada was "a pretty unorganized orthodox collection of people," who, if they bothered at all with the thought of national identity, thought of themselves as British colonialists. Today, there is "a great deal more Canadian thinking going on."

He has had occasion to take a verbal swing at the CBC, commenting drily that he can "love Lucy and perform missions impossible without their help." Pious statements about the independence of Canada's foreign policy from United States meddling once provoked an impious "You know as well as I know who deals the cards."

Born in Ireland during the mellow last years of Queen Victoria and the 19th century, Mr. Ferguson was hoisted off to backwoods British Columbia at the age of six by his Scottish missionary father and Irish mother. Later the family moved across the Rockies to Alberta where Mr. Ferguson attended university and re-embarked for Europe in 1916 with the Canadian Mounted Rifles.

The year 1921 found him a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, which he left with a master's degree for a brief stint on The Times of London.

By 1925 he was back in Canada where he found a job on the Winnipeg Free Press after being rejected by the Montreal Gazette for having "too damned much education."

He stayed in Winnipeg, "joining the work of throwing off the British colonial yoke" and observing the devastating effect of the Depression years on the prairies, until 1946. Then, having risen to become the paper's executive editor, he had an impulse it was time to find another niche, and so came to Montreal and The Star.

Less concerned today by the threat of tthe British colonial yoke, Mr. Ferguson reserves his vehemence for Canadians who wonder aloud whether the border with the U.S. is really worth preserving.

He thinks it is, and advises those who feel otherwise there is "something wrong with their heads in that they do not fully realize what freedom of choice they have."

He also has a few words for those who engage in "introspection and tortured self-analysis" on the question of national identity, or what makes Canadians not Amricans or Europeans.

"It is a topic which has an absorbing fascination for a large number of our intellectuals who complain endlessly that we have no national identity and what the hell is the matter with us," he has written.

"To tell you the truth I am heartily sick of it. If we can't accept ourselves for what we are, we have not come too far."

What we are, he says, is a people with a talent for self-criticism and a country with "a basic frontier mentality that our neighbors long ago lost."

NORTH IS FACTOR

"Most of us live in cities and few of us actually visit the North. Yet that huge empty space of the North affects us from the moment we are born until we die. This is one of the main factors which mark Canadians off from their neighbors.

"Since most of our national spokesmen deplore the lack of positive factors in the creation of what is called a national identity, let them take note of this.

"We are a different people because we have a different history and a different physical background and a different political background, and all that makes for quite remarkable differences, despite a profound belief among Canadians that they are dull, mediocre and second-rate."

After 45 years in the newsroom's atmosphere of daily crisis, dour headlines and stale cigarette smoke, Mr. Ferguson is still optimistic about the state and future of the human race.

"I'm old-fashioned enough to believe in progress," he said. "You don't blow it up to be much bigger than it is, but it's there.

"I think human beings are capable of every conceivable folly, but I've lived through two world wars—both of them catastrophic, frightful departures from any ideal of humanity you can imagine—but we've lived through them both and we've restored a great deal."

OLD FEELING GONE

He recalled that when he was a young man and unemployment was standard in Western Canada, "the Establishment of the prairie cities believed that if you didn't have enough to eat or enough fuel for your house it was because you were lazy and lacked initiative."

"Today that feeling has pretty much disappeared—oh, it's still there a bit, but there has been some progress in our acceptance of responsibility.

"And the Church used to tell the people in Quebec it didn't matter if they starved or not, because their reward would come after their death. That was their teaching in the convents and schools of Quebec until not too long ago, but now it's been abandoned by the people of Quebec—isn't that progress?

"Perhaps there is only so much progress possible for human beings—I think the answer to that is in more education. You widen peoples' sights, you widen their minds and your hope is that we will emerge in a more civilized context in time. You hope. What's the good of living if you don't hope?"

And that is probably not George Ferguson's final last word on any subject.

"Fortunately, though he has retired, his place is still here and he in it, and for that not only his colleagues but also his country should be grateful," The Star said.

Medical Milestone Hit by Transplant

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Louis B. Russell, a robust schoolteacher who refuses to worry, set a medical milestone Friday by living longer with a transplanted heart than anyone else in the world.

His doctors have laid down just two restrictions, both familiar to many other persons: Don't smoke and watch your weight.

"I violate both of them but the doctors don't harass me about them," he said with a smile.

He kicked the smoking habit in 1965, after his second heart attack, but took it up a year ago because he said he was tense.

His 200-pound weight is 20 pounds more than the doctors want.

He pumps an exercising bicycle two or three miles a day in his living room "when I have time" but his routine has become so busy that his wife, Thelma, jokes that she has to make appointments to see him.

Russell has lived 596 days with a heart transplanted from a 17-year-old youth who died of a gunshot wound in the head.

The transfer took place Aug. 24, 1968, at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

His survival up to today has been 2 days longer than that of Dr. Philip Blaiberg, the South African dentist who died last Aug. 17 at the age of 58.

"I knew I was going to get this far," Russell said. "That's one of the things I told them when I went into surgery: 'I'm going to live.'"

He will be 45 April 26.

Baby-Making Still Best

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Man may go on trying to produce life in a test tube, but will probably find the result isn't worth it, according to Nobel Laureate George Wald.

The idea of a "test tube baby," Wald said, will keep scientists busy and "within the next 25 years, someone, somewhere will put the right molecules together."

But the result he said, will be a blob not unlike the one-celled amoeba — interesting but not much more. "Amoebas make amoebas and people make people," the Harvard biologist said, "and people will go on making people in the same old fashioned way."

Wald spoke Thursday night to a symposium at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies.

SUGAR-WHITE SAND and towering pines offer a dramatic setting for visitors on South Pacific Isle of Pines, named for trees in background. The island is fast growing popular as a resort.

Isle of Pines Offers Tourist Exotic Tropical Vacationing

NOUMEA, New Caledonia — Not many travelers have even heard of the Isle of Pines but this condition is bound to change.

This South Pacific gem has just about everything the tropical island fancier could desire. It's uncrowded, utterly relaxing, beautiful in a most distinctive way and, for the tropics, surprisingly free of humidity and bugs.

The Isle of Pines is a half-hour flight from Noumea, capital of French New Caledonia, which lies about 1,200 miles north-east of Sydney, Australia.

This flight is a glamour build-up to what is to come.

* * *

The sea is studded with tiny pine-crowded islands with coral reefs strung around them like brilliant necklaces. The water is emerald, jade, turquoise, indigo, cinnamon, gold — 'depending on depth and how close to the surface the coral is.

Reaching the Isle of Pines, the plane circles around the thatched roof of the long-house resort hotel, the Relais de Kanumera, which is set on a narrow neck of land between broad curves of bright white sand.

It's a seven-mile drive from airstrip to hotel. Grassland thick with fern, wild orchid and spiky sisal plants soon gives way to coffee trees and lush tropical vegetation.

The hotel's setting is an eye-stopper and your introduction to it is dramatic.

The bus plunges into the semi-darkness of a long grove of sandalwood and just as suddenly emerges in bright sunlight amid a scene that takes your breath away.

On either side is a broad sweep of sugar-white beach almost invisible. On one side the water darkens gradually in greens and blues out a mile or more to a surf-creamed reef, where it suddenly turns cobalt. On the other side are several tiny islands shaped like hour-glasses with head-dresses of scrub.

The hotel's thatched bungalows are almost hidden in a confusion of sandalwood, colеander, frangipani and coconut palms. Scattered all over, and towering high above all else, are the solumnar pines for which the island is named.

* * *

It's a scene of complete tranquility. A few guests laze on the warm sand, which is fine as talcum powder and hard-packed. Others snorkel in the clear water and others still peddle out around the reef in craft that combine the catamaran and the bicycle.

There's also much to see elsewhere on the island. Close to the hotel there are several other beaches, large caves of fossilized coral, forests of giant tree ferns and a number of Melanesian native villages.

The hotel itself is done out in strong South Seas motif. The main building, incorporating dining room and bar, has no walls on the sides facing the beaches and gentle sea breezes waft through it continually.

Most of the staff are French and this is reflected in what comes out of the kitchen. Sea food is a specialty — spiced crab, Tahiti fish salad, lobsters fresh from the lagoon, and popinees, a delicious crustacean peculiar to local waters.

The Isle of Pines is famed for its glamor sunsets, and at the end of the day it's something of a ritual for guests to sit sipping drinks at outdoor tables to watch them.

* * *

As the sun dips to the horizon it seems to grow enormously. It brightens with such intensity that the entire surface of the sea turns to a blazing, brilliant orange.

New Caledonia can be included easily in a South Pacific itinerary. It is little more than a two-hour jet flight from Australia or from New Zealand, and can be a delightful stopover for the traveler between Fiji and either of these countries.

Mutual Life Celebrates 100th Year

As part of the celebration of the 100th anniversary of Mutual Life of Canada, a centennial dinner will be held at Victoria's Union Club Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Some 50 agents, branch office employees, pensioners and their wives associated with the company's branch office will attend.

Among them will be Fred McGregor, who has represented the company in Victoria for 61 years.

The dinner is one of 30 being held across Canada to mark the 100th anniversary of the issue of Mutual Life's policies on March 1, 1870.

Principal speaker will be D. A. Post, vice-president of corporate services.

Other participants in the program will be N. E. McLeod, chairman; J. W. Peyton, who will propose a toast to the company, and K. O. Henderson.

Indians 'Fear Assimilation'

WINNIPEG (CP) — David Courchene, president of the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, says Indians fear the federal government intends to impose assimilation rather than economic and social integration.

He told the concluding session of the brotherhood's annual meeting Friday that proposals to erase references to Indians from the constitution and the statute books are "clearly discriminatory and inconsistent."

"It is not the legislative distinctions that have caused the problems that plague us," he said. "It has been the acts of man that have caused the problems."

Courchene said a century of imposed isolation has made it difficult for Indians to adapt to new conditions. Dialogue between Indian and non-Indian now is imperative but is "inhibited by prejudice on both sides."

"What white society must face and learn to accept is that the Indian must attain freedom from oppression before he can, in realistic terms, deal with the problem of integration."

GRADS LED CLASSROOM TAKE-OVER

Members of Oak Bay senior secondary's graduation class wound up Grad Week Friday by taking over some of their own classes for a day.

The brief changeover had approval of teachers concerned, said acting principal Don Oliver. In most instances students opened up their classes for discussions, Oliver said.

The first annual Grad Week included noon-hour activities all week, culminating in a dance Friday.

Hanky-Panky Charge Laid

SALIN, Kan. (UPI) — The State of Kansas Friday charged Abbie Hoffman of the Chicago Seven with blowing his nose on the American flag.

Salina County Attorney Bill Crews issued a warrant charging that Hoffman, who spoke Thursday night at Kansas Wesleyan University, "unlawfully, wilfully and publicly defaced, defiled and cast contempt upon the flag of the United States by blowing his nose on said flag."

At the moment the charge was largely academic, since by the time it was filed Hoffman was reported in Abilene, Tex., and beyond the reach of sheriff's deputies.

'Drugs Are Act Of Revolution'

SASKATOON (CP) — Drugs give their users courage to fight the establishment and its rules, the LeDain inquiry into non-medical uses of drugs was told Friday.

A young drug-user told the inquiry the monied class controls the country and young people will revolt and radically change society within two years.

"We see an enemy and we must join our brothers around the world in the fight. In order to fight you old people, we need strength. Maybe after the revolution we won't need dope."

The youth said drugs provide courage to break windows and fight police — such demonstrations give young people a feeling of comradeship.

"This generation you are castigating has felt this comradeship," replied Gerald LeDain, 45, chairman of the commission.

Persons who fought in the Second World War feel the same comradeship, he said. It is not unique to youth.

Later, the five-member commission — missing its only woman member, Marie Bertrand of the University of Montreal — held an informal hearing at the University of Saskatchewan campus.

The Saskatchewan Social Worker's Association considered it inappropriate to classify LSD-users as criminals and recommended withdrawal of criminal sanctions on the use of LSD, marijuana and hashish.

Stewart Vickers of Saskatoon, representing the association's northern district, also recommended establishment of a marketing system for marijuana and hashish to ensure users get pure products.

The Swift Current branch of the Saskatchewan Council of Women presented a different opinion.

Police should prevent further spread of LSD by detecting manufacturers and traffickers, said spokesman Anne Benjamin.

Marijuana should not be made legal but should be placed under a section of the Food and Drug Act which concerns non-addictive drugs that are subject to misuse, she said.

School Taught Sex, Violence

BERLIN (UPI) — The West Berlin city government has ordered the closing of an experimental school that taught children sex games, how to fight police during demonstrations and methods of assassination.

The school, officially called "Red Freedom," was established as a part of Berlin Free University last July for children aged 6 to 12, with the announced aim of promoting "democratization of society."

Horst Korber, chairman of the city youth department, said the school was used to "stimulate children sexually in a loathsome way and encouraged hatred of police and authority."

MACE RULED OUT IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Police Commission published Friday strict regulations controlling the use of firearms by police and banning use of the riot-control chemical Mace.

The new regulations, effective immediately, were drawn up by the commission under amendments to the Police Act last year and affect all Ontario police forces.

G. W. Mullen, executive officer of the commission, said several Ontario police forces, including London and Windsor, have used Mace, which may cause eye damage in some cases.

Under the new regulations, the only gas or chemical weapon permitted for police use is tear-gas, and even that must not be "applied intentionally in concentrated form directly to the person."

Cable TV Plans Local Shows

Victoria's first television channel with strictly local programming will go into operation a few hours a day next fall.

Victoria Cablevision president Les Curran said today the company plans to introduce shows on "just about anything of local interest" using local talent and local production staff.

The local programming would occupy channel 10, running two or three hours daily initially, and gradually expanding as resources permit to take up a complete broadcast day.

Channel 10 is currently used by radio station C-FAX for music.

Curran said introduction of local programming is in line with new recommendations by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission which direct cable systems to rank CBC, CTV, and educational and community programming over United States station signals.

"Let's face it," Curran said, "our local station (channel 6) is just an extension of CTV and the CBC.

NO OUTLET

"There is no local outlet."

He said C-FAX would continue to broadcast over channel 10 when local programs were not being run.

Curran's anouncement of Victoria Cablevision's plans for local programming come after CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau, announced a set of guidelines for operation of all Canadian cable systems.

The guidelines are aimed primarily at areas like Calgary where there is no cable television.

Systems like Victoria will be affected when their licences come up for renewal. The Victoria Cablevision licence expires in August, 1971.

At that time there could be two developments in local viewing:

- CRTC could refuse to authorize distribution of the KVOS (channel 12, Bellingham) signal;
- Second showings of non-Canadian programs — such as Laugh-In — will be blacked out, a recommendation that prompted Curran to predict programming on U.S. channels will be reduced by half for Canadian viewers.

The commission said Friday it reserves the right to prohibit U.S. stations near the border that solicit Canadian advertising and disrupt "the economic balance."

KVOS, which broadcasts mainly into southern B.C. and the Island, could be affected. Management of the Bellingham station could not be reached today for comment.

The prohibition on duplicate shows says a program carried on a local station can't be allowed a week before or a week after by the cable company.

For viewers that means if a popular American show is carried by the CBC, it can't be seen again on a Seattle channel—except by people who still use a roof-top aerial.

"It's obviously aimed at protecting the Canadian broadcaster," Curran said.

Heart Attack Kills Author

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — John O'Hara, who chronicled a generation of eastern establishment Americans, with a series of short stories and novels including "Appointment In Samarra," died today at the age of 65.

O'Hara, born Jan. 21, 1905 in Pittsville, Pa., which became the "Gibbsville" of his novels, died of a heart attack in his home in this university town, a family spokesman said.

Wounded Survivors Tell of Massacre

By LAURENCE STERN

PRASAUT (WP) — The bodies of nearly 100 massacred Vietnamese civilians lay stacked under the sun and the flies Friday in a detention compound at this outpost on Cambodia's eastern border.

They were killed during a firefight that raged most of the night between Cambodian troops and Viet Cong forces who attacked Prasaut shortly before midnight.

The bodies were set out along a barbed wire fence that marked the boundaries of the compound where they had been herded by Cambodian troops Wednesday as suspected Viet Cong sympathizers. I saw them that day being marched in from their homes under armed guard.

Some of the approximately 100 survivors, many still bleeding and in great pain, told a Vietnamese-speaking cameraman that when the Viet Cong attacked, the Cambodians ordered them to run. When they complied, the Cambodians opened fire on them at close range, they said.

MILITARY SILENT

There were a large number of spent Chinese-Communist cartridges within the compound, attesting to the fact that a considerable amount of shooting had been done from inside the area where the civilians were clustered. Both the Cambodians and Viet Cong use Chinese ammunition.

Cambodian military officials here would not make themselves available for questioning after the incident was discovered by a small group of newsmen.

From all the available evidence it had to be concluded that the incident was a mass execution of unarmed civilians by Cambodian troops.

The most charitable surmise is that the Cambodians, in penning the Vietnamese into a hazardous outpost where imminent attack was expected, acted with utter disregard for human life.

One little girl of about eight lay in a semiconscious state with a bloody bandage around her mid-section. She moved her head only when files landed in her eyes and on her mouth. Another young woman with a gaping thigh wound was being sutured by a Cambodian male nurse who had no anesthetic. The woman was gasping and half-fainting with pain as the operation proceeded.

PAINFULLY WOUNDED

Clustered in the shade some of the wounded were moaning. Some lying very still with their faces contorted in pain. A tiny boy cried as he threaded his way amidst the wounded.

I counted 82 dead and two dozen wounded. Another correspondent counted 91 dead and still another 79. In some cases as many as two or three bodies lay under the same cloth covering, making a precise count impossible. The little children who had died made tiny lumps and were difficult to detect.

The impact of the massacre of civilians may well be to intensify the scale of the eastern border war. The

NOW HE'S HOPING HE GETS MEASLES

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — It will be a crying shame if Thomas K. Mattingly II doesn't come down with German measles next week. Then, at least, he won't have been disappointed for nothing.

He was to have left for the moon today!

But instead of waving cheerily and saying, "Goodbye world, for 10 days," Mattingly will watch from the sidelines while Apollo 13 leaves with John L. Swigert Jr. occupying his seat.

Two years of practice and study, days and weeks away from home and family, had prepared Mattingly for participation in man's third mission to the moon.

All of it was shot to blazes because a little kid got German measles and gave it to another kid, who gave it to an astronaut, who breathed on Mattingly and his two crew mates.

The others, doctors say, are immune to measles. But Mattingly isn't.

MATTINGLY
. . . no spots yet

Did Mattingly make any comments, astronaut boss Donald K. Slayton was asked. "Yes, but you wouldn't want to write any of them down." replied Slayton.

CIVIL DEFENCE TEAM READY FOR GAS LEAK

British Columbia's civil defence chief said Friday night B.C. officials will work with their counterparts in Washington State in case of an accident involving shipment of U.S. nerve gas.

The gas is to be shipped from Okinawa to Bangor, Wash., using Juan de Fuca Strait off Vancouver Island, then go by rail to Hermiston, Ore., and the U.S. Army's Umatilla, Ore., ordnance depot.

★ ★ ★

John Erb of Victoria said the B.C. civil defence organization has been in touch with its Washington State counterpart and "we have certain basic, standard plans." He declined to give details.

In Washington and Oregon, opposition to the planned shipment continued to build up Friday, with Gov. Dan Evans of Washington promising "every possible" action to have the shipment halted. No date has been given.

Oregon Gov. Tom McCall said the U.S. defence department's assurances of security appear to be hollow talk. The two states could not effectively guarantee the safety of their residents, he said.

Rhodesian Whites Back Smith Rule

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesia today entered a new phase in its fight against international condemnation and sanctions with Premier Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front entrenched more firmly than ever.

Final results from Friday's first general election under a republican constitution cleanly divided the government and opposition on racial lines.

The Rhodesian Front won all 50 seats it contested in the 66-seat parliament. The country's 87,020 white voters decided who should hold the 50 seats.

The only opposition returned in this first Rhodesian election run on racially segregated lines consisted of eight Africans returned by the country's 8,326 eligible black voters, representing the Mashona and Matebele tribes on a parity basis.

Eight other African parliamentarians will be selected April 14 and 17 behind closed doors by tribal leaders who mainly support the white rulers.

Smith's victory means he controls the composition of Rhodesia's first republican Senate. Of the 23 senators, 10 will be directly elected by the Rhodesian Front caucus, three will be appointed by the president (formerly officer administering the government) and five African tribal chiefs each from Mashonaland and Matabeland will make up the remainder.

It was the first nationwide election since Rhodesia's white-minority government declared the British colony independent in November, 1965. The seizure of independence without providing for eventual rule by the black majority brought international condemnation and economic pressure in the form of trade sanctions voted by the United Nations.

A month ago, the Smith regime declared Rhodesia a republic.

Launch Called Perfect

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 13 astronauts rocketed away from earth today on man's third moon-landing expedition, a search for clues to the origin of the moon in the rugged, ancient Frau Mauro highlands.

James A. Lovell Jr., 42, a U.S. Navy captain, and civilians Fred W. Haise, 36, and John L. Swigert Jr., 38, rode the fearsome power of their giant Saturn V rocket into space at 11:13 a.m. PST to start a daring and difficult journey almost postponed by German measles.

Swigert earned a late-hour seat on the flight Friday after proving in a crash training program that he could move up from the backup team to the first team.

He replaced Thomas K. Mattingly II, 38, who was exposed to German measles and is not immune to the childhood disease.

After examining the Apollo 13 crew several hours before launch, doctors described their condition as "top shape."

SECOND STAGE IGNITES

After two minutes, 36 seconds of flight at an altitude of 40 miles, the second stage ignited.

"We confirm ignition," Lovell reported.

"You're looking perfect," a ground controller told the crew a few minutes later as they were 200 miles downrange.

The disappointed Mattingly had flown back to the Manned Spacecraft Centre at Houston to help out and watch the launch on television.

Pushing Apollo 13 toward an earth orbit before the journey to the moon, the 36-storey Saturn flashed to life with a roar and a sheet of flame.

RISES MAJESTICALLY

The super rocket screamed on its launch pad for 8.9 seconds while a computer system made certain all five first stage engines reached a full thrust of 7,600,000 pounds. Then steel restraining arms folded back and the rocket rose majestically, arching out over the Atlantic Ocean.

Lovell reported the inboard engine of the second stage shutdown early. However, Mission Control said the other four engines functioned properly and the mission was "go."

The engines are designed so that if one stops early, the others will take up the slack.

To reach the moon, Apollo 13 first had to circle the earth 1½ times in 2½ hours while Lovell, Haise and Swigert checked spacecraft systems. Then a second burst from the Saturn's third stage was to hurl the three men and their space home toward the waiting moon, 246,524 miles away.

From deep in space, they will beam back a 30-minute television program Sunday, giving viewers a tour of the command module starting at

Tub Rusts in Millstream

Off Millstream Road, a Junk Pile Grows

Litterbug Plague: When Will It Stop?

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Despite repeated warnings that the resources of our environment are not infinite, people continue to pollute creeks with junk and rubbish and to litter the green countryside with old cars and every conceivable type of hardware.

Does society have to put up with this?

"No," says Dr. Alan P. Austin, biologist at the University of Victoria. "And it's vitally important that it doesn't.

"Until the message sinks through that society can no longer tolerate such malpractices, anti-pollution and anti-litter laws should be rigidly enforced," he said.

•

In many western European countries, the citizens just wouldn't put up with what their counterparts in Canada have to accept from a small minority who have no respect for environment and nature, he said.

Austin's views are shared by thousands of Victorians who feel it's time provincial and municipal governments cracked down on people who abandon their old cars and hardware along public highways, creeks and crown lands.

David Sterling, an official of the Victoria Natural History Society, said the Highland district is a favorite dumping ground for old bed springs, washing machines, cars, bathtubs, glass bottles, oil tins and greasecans.

There Are Those Who Don't Give A Damn and Those Who Feel They Have Right To Dump Junk On Vacant Land

Parts of the creeks are littered with rubbish of all sorts," he said. "I imagine the bottoms of some lakes are no better."

The creek along Humpback Road which runs between Goldstream and Sooke Road, is another bad spot where junk has been dumped, he said.

Dick Chudley, president of The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, said some people do it because they "just don't give a damn."

•

"There are others," he said, "who feel they have the right to dump junk on vacant land, especially crown land and creeks — even though this is offensive to people and detrimental to an environment."

He said this attitude resulted from the Industrial Revolution in the 19th century.

Few people questioned methods of waste disposal in those days, and the practice of dumping junk in rivers and streams became a common practice, he said.

There were others, of course, who abandoned their junk all over the countryside because that way it cost little or nothing.

"It's a cheap method of disposing waste," he said. "And they will continue to as long as they can get away with it."

A Sore Sight on Admirals Road

40 Men Shed White Collars And Clear Way for Church

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Forty slickers sat down to a loggers' breakfast on the Cedar Hill Cross Road site of the new Emmanuel Baptist Church, near the University of Victoria, this morning.

And 43 women plied them with flapjacks, sausages, maple syrup and coffee.

The men — most of them office workers — had responded to a call for unpaid volunteers to prepare the 2.7 acre site for construction of a modern church that will seat 500.

After breakfast, they sat in silent prayer for five minutes. Then individual men and women stood up in turn and offered spoken spontaneous prayers for the future of the church, which will replace an old building at 1900 Fernwood.

Warm sunshine beamed on the gathering and tall trees bordered the site on three sides.

"We hope to dedicate the new church before Christmas," said the minister, Rev. Norman K. Archer, who wore workman's clothes along with his volunteers.

He circulated a questionnaire among male parishioners asking them to state what jobs they could do best. The men offered to do land clearing, carpentry, brickwork, landscaping cement work, tile-laying, painting and laboring.

The church will be built by Dewey De Vries, who has constructed more than 40 churches in Western Canada. The architects are Wagg and Hambleton of Victoria.

A bell from the old church will be transferred to a square-built tower in the new. Besides the sanctuary, the church will have a fellowship hall and library, offices and an apartment for a caretaker.

"We are happy to be so near the university," Archer said, "because we have a fair number of students in our congregation and we hope to get more."

The old church on Fernwood will be sold.

VOLUNTEER workers breakfasted on flapjacks and sausages this morning on site of 2.7-acre site of new Emmanuel Baptist Church on Cedar Hill Cross Road, east of Henderson. Then work on preparing the site for the builder began in earnest. Among the workers were Rev. Norman Archer, church minister, and Dr. David Parfitt, chairman of building committee. Church Head Open to Tax

Property tax on church land and buildings might benefit churches, the president of the Greater Victoria council of churches said Friday.

Rev. John Watson of First Baptist Church was commenting on a suggestion by Ald. Harold Olafson city council should look into the possibility of taxing church property.

Watson listed three possible advantages to imposition of property tax:

- It would force churches to give more thought to what kind of expenditures a religious body should have;
- Plans would be drawn with an eye to community value instead of "pride and comfort";
- And it would act as a stimulus to implementation of ecumenical movements.

EDIFICE COMPLEX

Watson said a property tax might shock church planners out of ther "edifice complex", which he defined as "duplication of facilities beyond foreseeable needs."

He said his views were personal because the council of churches has not yet discussed the property tax issue.

"I do not think the church would throw up its hands in holy horror if it considered this matter, nor would it desire to express a blanket statement that all churches should be taxed," Watson said.

"Churches and civic authorities ought to sit down together and re-examine the issue of property tax and discover what public policy will best serve the needs of the people.

GOOD FOR CHURCHES

"This would be good not only for the country but for the churches."

Rev. Bert King of Metropolitan United said those most critical of the churches are often ignorant of their contribution to the community.

"I think they (aldermen) should move cautiously on this because if the church goes out of existence in terms of rendering these kinds of services then the community will have to take them up."

He said a property tax would probably have a crippling effect on local churches.

"If we were hit with a business tax it would probably put us out of existence, but that's fine with us if its' fine with the community.

"It just means they can tax us out of existence so far as the institution of churches is concerned, but they can't tax our faith out of existence."

Hydro Rechecks Power Line Plan

B.C. Hydro has decided to take a second look at its plans to run an overhead transmission line through five homes on Munn Road in Saanich.

Hydro Chairman Gordon Shrum, in a letter Friday, informed the homeowners he is sending a senior division manager to Victoria to "make a careful assessment" of the problem.

The letter was addressed to Pat Codyre, 1890 Munn, spokesman for the group opposing the expropriation of their properties for the 138,000-volt line.

The line would be strung on 75-foot poles and would run from Jordon River to Munn Road, to Interurban and along Burnside to a substation in the 2900 block Douglas Street.

Shrum said he wants a full detailed report on the matter.

"We don't want to move you or your neighbors, and we will not do so if there is any other practical solution," he said. "Our engineers say that there is not, but this I am going to investigate."

Codyre said Hydro could use 300 acres of vacant land situated to the north of the homes instead of expropriating the five properties.

"It wouldn't bother anybody there," he said. "And I don't think it would cost any more to do so."

"I hope the man Hydro is sending over here looks as the problem from the human angle," he added. "The homeowners are not interested in money. They don't want to move as most have lived here for years." (See story Page 12.)

Scholarship Granted

A University of Victoria bacteriology student has won one of 13 National Research Council library science scholarships.

Nancy Gonnason, 21, of 2056 Kendal, said she plans to attend the University of Western Ontario at London next fall on the $3,600 award.

She will spend 12 months or three semesters working toward a master's degree in library science.

She will graduate from Uvic next month with a BSc in bacteriology.

ANTI-CAR GROUP AGAIN ON PROWL

University of Victoria students Sunday afternoon will circulate a petition to ban cars from certain roads within Beacon Hill Park.

Organizer Mark Jackman, 20, said, barring wet weather, the students, on a person-to-person basis, will try to outline their argument to as many park users as possible.

The petition will be presented to city council.

Jackman said the students will not try to stall traffic, as they did last Sunday. That resulted in hot tempers and some cars drivers making runs at demonstrators.

The petition argues that heavy traffic is ruining the park's peaceful atmosphere and hindering free movement of people on foot.

It proposes the city close down such roads as Park Way, Chestnut Way and Bridge Way, and leave open Camas Circle and Circle Drive, which lead to the main parking area and to the lookout.

Ask The Times

Q. Why was the west bypassed this year to start the production of the Canadian revue Spring Thaw? Does this show have a government grant?

A. The Toronto-based Spring Thaw for the first time will not go on tour this year. During its years of production the show has chosen various cities, not necessarily in the west, to open its tour. This year purchasing rights to use the material can be obtained and local material inserted to make it topical in the city where it is played. There are no records to show that the production has ever received government sponsorship.

Arthur Mayse . . .

THIS MORNING I looked up to see a bearded face and chunky frame advancing into this newsroom. Here was an old friend, and one who claims a unique distinction.

His name is Michael Mehemet Deane, his boast that he was the only Turkish-born Canadian to serve in Canada's army during the last world war.

He went in as a private and emerged as a captain. Then he dived back into newspaper work — circulation and later promotion — in Vancouver.

Sixty and a grandfather now, Mickey Deane is still recognizable as the spry young man who in 1928 launched out on an adventure that changed his life.

His name then was Mehmet Sabahaddin, which in loose translation signifies 'Prophet of the Dawn of Religion.'

"I was a tourist guide on the streets of Istanbul," he recalls, eyelids crinkled in a smile broad as a scimitar.

"One of my clients each year was the director of an American cigarette company. That particular trip, Robert J. Cromie of the Vancouver Sun was with him."

Cromie, a man given to whirlwind tours and swift decisions, took a liking to the 18-year-old guide.

"He asked me if I would like to come to Canada." To Mickey, the rough-and-tumble newspaper publisher long deceased remains a great man. His veneration deepens his gravelly voice. "So he brought me here. I had learned to speak English well, but to me, Canada was a different world."

That was in 1928. Until after the war, Mickey says, he was Canada's only Turkish-born citizen.

"You might say that I opened the door to the Turks," he declares. "Under a law of 1929, my people were classed as Asiatics, and whenever I thought about that, the blood gushed up into my head.

"If anyone can trace the origins of the Turks, he's a miracle-worker. They're such a mixture.

Cromie, persuaded by his protege's eloquence, agreed that Turks were unfairly designated as Asiatics. He saw to it that the prophet of the dawn of religion, his name by then Canadianized, got a hearing from John Diefenbaker.

"He listened," says Mickey Deane, "and he helped bring about changes. In Canada now, there are maybe 800 Turkish Canadians. Most of them are professional men — doctors, dentists, scientists and engineers."

In 1963, the British Columbia Canadian Turkish Society was formed with Mickey as its first president. Similar societies now function in Toronto and Montreal.

"I'm quick with a plug for both countries," he continued, fingering the little star-and-crescent emblem in his lapel. "I remind Canadians that Canada and Turkey fought side by side in Korea. When I went back on a trip to Istanbul, I gave Canada a wonderful image."

What brought him to Victoria?

The B.C. Canadian Turkish Society is seeking help for the stricken city of Gediz through an earthquake relief fund.

Would I tell Victorians moved to contribute that donations may be sent to the Bank of Commerce at Douglas and Bay? Funds are also being set up in Toronto and Montreal, and a Bank of Commerce representative in Turkey will turn over the proceeds in the name of the Canadian people.

As Mickey Deane observes, It's a small world, and growing smaller all the time. Perhaps this cheerful plugger for two countries has helped make it smaller.

AT 10:30 A.M. TUESDAY, an Arbutus Craft bus will deliver four young Cerebral Palsy victims to Boys Club of Victoria Headquarters.

There, entertained by records and by volunteers who will read aloud to them, they'll remain until 1:30 p.m.

For these boys and girls in their upper teens and early twenties, the trip will be the first they've made from their homes in a long time.

Mrs. Genevieve Ali of Victoria Community Council tells me that the group will grow larger as more parents of young adult cerebral palsy sufferers move to take advantage of the new service. Mrs. Ali hopes that parents will get in touch, also more volunteers.

Age isn't a factor — just the ability to read aloud, and a willingness to ease the boredom of those who can't do for themselves.

That's it for this week, and off now to do any number of around-home jobs too long put off. Soon Daylight Saving, when the days will be longer . . . though still not long enough!

52-Year Newsman Honored at Dinner

HUTCHISON
. . . wrote nine books

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bruce Hutchison, author and editorial director of the Vancouver Sun, was honored Friday night at a testimonial dinner marking his 52nd anniversary as an active journalist.

His record of achievement is without parallel in the history of Canadian journalism said Sun publisher Stuart Keate in paying tribute to Mr. Hutchison, who started his career as a sports writer with the Victoria Times and then switched to political reporting.

After working for a number of other newspapers he returned to the Times as editor-in-chief, a position he held from 1950 to 1963.

A water color painting of Lake Cowichan, a Vancouver Island area familiar to Mr. Hutchison, was presented by Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of the Supreme Court of B.C. It was done by Victoria artist Brian Travers-Smith.

Dinner guests included former prime minister Lester Pearson, publishers, editors and businessman.

Editorials and columns represent only a fraction of Mr. Hutchison's output.

"Assaulting his old typewriter with jack-hammer ferocity, he never ceased to amaze us with the volume of his copy, nor of its quality," Mr. Keate said.

WON SEVERAL PRIZES

He has written nine books, including The Unknown Country, The Incredible Canadian and Canada: Tomorrow's Giant—all winners of the Governor-General's Award.

Mr. Hutchison, 69 in June, also won two National Newspaper Awards for editorial writing and one national award for staff corresponding.

He was the first winner of a silver medal awarded by the Royal Society of the Arts in London to the best Commonwealth journalist outside the United Kingdom.

In 1951, the University of British Columbia awarded him an honorary law degree. Yale University conferred on him a doctorate of humane letters in 1968, the year he became a member of the Canadian News Hall of Fame.

To the sheer zest for newspapering which made him approach every story as though it was his first, "Bruce added that extra dimension known as Style," Mr. Keate said.

"He never wrote a dull line. His rich vocabulary and genuine feel for the swing and rhythm of words were the product of a lifetime of reading and studying the masters.

IS PATRIOT

"And there is something more that must be observed in his work: That deep and abiding love for Canada which shines through all his writings."

Mr. Keate said that in addition to his work as a journalist, Mr. Hutchison was being honored "because he has been for half a century a fine family man, a firm and trusted friend and a great citizen of this country."

Explaining why it was decided to mark Mr. Hutchison's 52nd year in journalism—it seems a sort of off-beat number —Mr. Keate said it wasn't until a year ago that it was remembered he had passed the 50-year mark.

"Let a veteran alderman or retiring president of the sewage-disposal plant be presented with a golden shovel and he's good for a four-column picture, 1,000 words of passionage prose and a ringing editorial.

"We, on the other hand, tend to forget our heroes. One reasons may be that there's so damned few of them."

Is Mr. Hutchison, who lives near Victoria, retiring?

"Not as long as we can prevent it," said Mr. Keate.

"The CRTC knows Canadian broadcasters can't compete with American networks, so they've decided to eliminate the competition, and I don't think that's the way to go about it."

CRTC priorities for cable operators are:

- Provision for the CBC network;
- Provision for CTV, the private Canadian network;
- Canadian TV stations located in nearby areas whose signals reach the cable operator's area;
- Community channels, to be as accessible as possible to groups in the community who want to use it;

Non-Canadian commercial stations are ranked sixth on the CRTC priority list, followed by non-Canadian, noncommercial stations (for example, Channel 9, Seattle).

CRTC last December announced a ban on use of microwave relays for "wholesale importation" of U.S. programs. The restrictions raised strong protests from Kamloops, Edmonton, Calgary and Sudbury, all too far from the U.S. border to pull in American signals with the usual cable TV antenna tower.

Ottawa Riders Add Newcomers

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference Tuesday announced the names of two new players who will attend their June training camp.

John Paddon, 25, an Ottawa player who attended Lenior Rhyne College under an athletic scholarship provided by Riders, is seeking a spot as either an offensive end or flanker.

Paddon is six feet tall and weighs 188 pounds.

The second player is defensive end Don Gerhardt who played for Saskatchewan Roughriders in 1966, 1967 and 1968.

Gerhardt, also 25, is 6-3 and weighs 237 pounds. He is making a bid for an Ottawa job because he prefers playing is Eastern Canada.

Civil Service Pay Boosted

Salary increases up to $2,800 for senior civil servants in the provincial government were announced Friday by cabinet orders-in-council.

The unfilled post of premier's executive assistant now pays $18,900, up seven per cent.

Geoffrey Stewart, chairman of the Medical Services Commission, received the largest boost, almost 14 per cent, from $20,200 to $23,000.

The comptroller-general's salary goes up by 6.5 per cent to $24,000.

Other increases:

Public Utilities Commission chairman J. F. K. English, up 5.9 per cent from $20,400 to $21,600.

Purchasing Commission chairman R. G. McKee, up 6 per cent from $18,700 to $19,900.

Senior Public Utilities Commission officers Lyle Wicks and E. W. Bassett, up 7 per cent from $17,700 to $18,900.

B.C. Assessment Commissioner W. P. Wright up 7.9 per cent, from $16,140 to $17,420.

Increases were also granted to employees in the office of the leader of the opposition with administrative officer John Wood's salary reaching $12,900.

All increases were effective April 1.

Earlier this week $7 million worth of civil service pay increases were announced.

Vietnamese, a large minority in these provinces, are suspected and feared by the Cambodians.

HOMES BURNED

As we drove back toward Phnom Penh Friday afternoon Cambodian soldiers were burning Vietnamese houses in towns along the national highway. It was explained that the houses belonged to Vietnamese who had gone to join the Vietcong.

But one Vietnamese family was standing on the road with all their household effects stacked beside them. They had the confused and forlorn look of evictees.

What is in progress here is a pogrom against the Vietnamese in Cambodia. This is one of the byproducts of the war here that is beginning to look more and more each day like a page out of the war in Vietnam.

Lake Pollution Control Agreed by Canada, U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Canada and the United States took their first practical steps Friday to control pollution of the Great Lakes.

A communique issued after inter-governmental talks, held at the request of Michigan Gov. W. G. Milliken, announced a joint action program to clean up the lakes.

Representatives of Michigan, Ohio, Ontario and the two federal governments agreed to establish technical committees to co-ordinate control efforts and indicated a conference of governors and premiers of states and provinces bordering the lakes will be held in June.

The emergency meeting was a result of Canada's decision earlier this month to impose restrictions on fishing in Lake St. Clair, the St. Clair and Detroit rivers and in sections of Lake Erie and Lake Huron.

The restrictions, including an outright ban on fishing in the St. Clair system and a ban on fish sales in other areas, were imposed after fish were found to have been contaminated by industrial mercury to a level believed unsafe for human consumption.

Although the International Joint Commission last year issued a report decrying damage caused the Great Lakes by phosphates used in detergents, pesticides such as DDT and sewage, officials only recently became aware of the presence of mercury contamination.

MAP OUT PLANS

The 31 government representatives who attended the meeting agreed to take these steps:

—Michigan will institute proceedings to close down Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River to all fishing as a precautionary measure pending further study.

—Michigan will not restrict fishing on the U.S. side of Lake Erie or on the Detroit River, but Michigan, Ohio, Ontario and the U.S. federal water pollution control administration will cooperate in investigating the situation in these areas.

—Two permanent technical committees, one dealing with health matters and the other with environmental control, will be established to co-ordinate anti-pollution efforts by both countries.

—A major pollution conference to be held in June, probably in Toronto, will be recommended for convening by Ottawa and Washington.

—The participants agreed to co-operate in eliminating mercury contamination, to consult with other authorities prior to taking action affecting the Great Lakes and to investigate other sources of pollution.

—The participants will urge the affected agencies of both federal governments to investigate sources of mercury contamination in all states and provinces.

—The U.S. food and drug administration will take action to seize fish in interstate commerce containing mercury in excess of the level of .5 parts per million believed dangerous to humans.

Investigations into mercury contamination of the St. Clair system by a Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. plant at Sarnia, Ont., may result in Dow accepting responsibility for compensation. The company already has taken action to reduce mercury pollution.

Mr. Milliken told reporters he had been informed by Wyandotte Chemical Co. Ltd., located on the Detroit River near Detroit, that the company is taking steps to terminate all discharges of mercury. Ontario had blamed Wyandotte as the major pollutor of the river.

5:28 p.m. PST. U.S. television networks said they would not have live coverage of the show, but would consider later transmissions by videotape. Canadian networks will carry coverage of the events on regular news programs.

The spacemen fire themselves into lunar orbit Tuesday night, and on Wednesday night Lovel and Haise are to attempt the most risky space adventure yet — steering the lunar lander toward a precision landing in a narrow valley on the eastern shore of the Ocean of Storms.

Fra Mauro is a battered region of hills, ridges, deep craters and huge boulders — some the size of automobiles. Scientists believe it may harbor rocks dating more than 4,500,000 years to the creation of the moon and perhaps the solar system.

During 33 hours on the moon, Lovell and Haise plan two outside excursions to set up a nuclear-powered science station, collect rock and dirt samples, and drill 10 feet into the lunar crust.

New Fund Limits Outlined at Talks

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark talked all day Friday with the people who build and operate hospitals and two points emerged:

- There's no change in the government edict of a week ago which limits funds available to meet hospital wage increases;
- And government, hospital boards and administrations, doctors, nurses and architects will join forces in the search for ways to counter the soaring cost of operating hospitals.

At the same time Loffmark predicted services besides hospitals and schools face having their spending restricted by government. He did not elaborate.

T. C. Marshall, Vancouver lawyer and president of the B.C. Hospitals' Association, said today the meeting probed every facet of hospital functions and went well except on the subject of the new fund limits.

On that point there was disagreement, he said.

Out of the discussion came the decision to put task forces to work immediately examining promising economy moves like expansion of day care units (for same-day surgery), regionalizing services like laundry and more bulk purchasing.

Late in the just-completed legislative session the government introduced legislation which gave it authority to take over hospitals in financial trouble. Marshall was highly critical, asking if it was another step towards a provincial takeover of B.C.'s hospitals.

He said Loffmark answered this Friday by saying it was still government policy not to unduly interfere with a hospital's local atonomy but with available funds short any hospital piling up a big deficit can expect more limitations.

CAR CHASE SPEEDS HIT 120

Police chasing a car driven by Wolf A. Lehmann, 20, of 530 Dumeresq, couldn't close the gap at 110 miles per hour, prosecutor J. W. Anderson told Judge J. A. Byers in court today.

But the police car did start to catch up when it was travelling at 120 miles per hour, he said.

Lehmann was fined $100 after pleading guilty to dangerous driving.

The judge said he would recommend to the superintendent of the motor vehicle branch that his licence be suspended for three months.

The police chase started when the accused was seen speeding on Douglas Street in Saanich.

After travelling for about 3½ miles Lehmann stopped his car.

He told the court he did not realize he was being followed by police.

Victoria-Born Centre Signed By Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference announced the signing of defensive halfback James Henshall and centre Peter Travis, both Canadian prospects.

Travis, 24, formerly with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference and British Columbia Lions of the WFC, received a wrist injury in the Lions' training camp last year and finished the season wity Spokane Shockers of the Continental League.

Travis, six-foot, four-inch, 250-pounder, signed with Montreal in 1968 after graduating from University of Louisville. He was born in Victoria.

Henshall, 23-year-old graduate of University of Western Ontario, was selected to the Canadian college all-star team in 1969. He was Edmonton's second draft choice in the 1970 college draft.

Violence In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Violence once again marked Montreal's 68-day postal dispute Friday as seven trucks rented by the post office to haul mail were attacked and one man suffered minor injuries.

Full soft drink bottles were hurled through the truck windshields as they made their rounds on busy city streets. Security vehicles following the trucks could do little to prevent the attacks because of heavy traffic.

One driver was punched in the face.

Chilliwack Choir To Sing Sunday

The Youth Choir of Chilliwack United Church, directed by Colleen Erb, will sing at a choral vesper service at 5 p.m. in the chapel of Metropolitan United church Sunday.

The regular 7 p.m. service has been cancelled.

$100 to Hospital

The local chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Xi sorority presented St. Joseph's Hospital Administrator E. G. Q. Van Tilburg with a $100 cheque Friday afternoon. The money will be used to purchase hospital equipment. The group raised the money at a St. Valentine's dance.

WOMAN TOLD TO PAY IN DIVORCE TRIAL

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Louis Cohen, 63, learned Friday that after months of litigation he will be the first Canadian to receive alimony from his divorced wife.

The Ontario supreme court ordered his wife, Ruth, to pay him $355 a month.

Cohen, the first man under relaxed Canadian divorce statutes to be granted alimony, has been living in Toronto the past year on a $100-a-month welfare allowance.

Mrs. Cohen started divorce proceedings last fall, after the couple had been separated since 1951. The case was argued before the supreme court here in January. In Friday's decision, Justice John H. Ostler ordered the alimony payments, less costs involving the custody of their two daughters.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The strong ridge of high pressure will remain over B.C. and a sunny weekend is looked for. Some cloudiness will, however, persist along the mountains since the air over the province is fairly moist and cool.

Cloud and rain is expected over the Charlottes this evening with a weak disturbance. However, this system will weaken rapidly as it moves through the ridge of high pressure and other areas of the province will experience little weather with it.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Man has always sought water from the heavens. When he was a savage, he did it through ritual dancing, incantation and fireworks. Then he sought rain with prayer and, finally, he turned to science and had the clouds seeded.

Modern scientists want to make rain come at will and they want to modify the weather in critical regions where the balance between the various factors in the cycles of solar energy could be upset to produce better weather and changes in the land itself. They see the possibility of warmng Arctic areas so that farming may be possible and profitable where now there is nothing but frozen wastes.

To do it they might be able to use the destructive force of the nuclear bomb to manipulate the atmosphere by creating or obliterating or altering large bodies of water. It scares one, doesn't it?

MACE RULED OUT IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Police Commission published Friday strict regulations controlling the use of firearms by police and banning use of the riot-control chemical Mace.

The new regulations, effective immediately, were drawn up by the commission under amendments to the Police Act last year and affect all Ontario police forces.

G. W. Mullen, executive officer of the commission, said several Ontario police forces, including London and Windsor, have used Mace, which may cause eye damage in some cases.

Under the new regulations, the only gas or chemical weapon permitted for police use is tear-gas, and even that must not be "applied intentionally in concentrated form directly to the person."

Cable TV Plans Local Shows

Victoria's first television channel with strictly local programming will go into operation a few hours a day next fall.

Victoria Cablevision president Les Curran said today the company plans to introduce shows on "just about anything of local interest" using local talent and local production staff.

The local programming would occupy channel 10, running two or three hours daily initially, and gradually expanding as resources permit to take up a complete broadcast day.

Channel 10 is currently used by radio station C-FAX for music.

Curran said introduction of local programming is in line with new recommendations by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission which direct cable systems to rank CBC, CTV, and educational and community programming over United States station signals.

"Let's face it," Curran said, "our local station (channel 6) is just an extension of CTV and the CBC.

NO OUTLET

"There is no local outlet."

He said C-FAX would continue to broadcast over channel 10 when local programs were not being run.

Curran's anouncement of Victoria Cablevision's plans for local programming come after CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau, announced a set of guidelines for operation of all Canadian cable systems.

The guidelines are aimed primarily at areas like Calgary where there is no cable television.

Systems like Victoria will be affected when their licences come up for renewal. The Victoria Cablevision licence expires in August, 1971.

At that time there could be two developments in local viewing:

- CRTC could refuse to authorize distribution of the KVOS (channel 12, Bellingham) signal;
- Second showings of non-Canadian programs — such as Laugh-In — will be blacked out, a recommendation that prompted Curran to predict programming on U.S. channels will be reduced by half for Canadian viewers.

The commission said Friday it reserves the right to prohibit U.S. stations near the border that solicit Canadian advertising and disrupt "the economic balance."

KVOS, which broadcasts mainly into southern B.C. and the Island, could be affected. Management of the Bellingham station could not be reached today for comment.

The prohibition on duplicate shows says a program carried on a local station can't be allowed a week before or a week after by the cable company.

For viewers that means if a popular American show is carried by the CBC, it can't be seen again on a Seattle channel—except by people who still use a roof-top aerial.

"It's obviously aimed at protecting the Canadian broadcaster," Curran said.

Heart Attack Kills Author

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) —John O'Hara, who chronicled a generation of eastern establishment Americans, with a series of short stories and novels including "Appointment In Samarra," died today at the age of 65.

O'Hara, born Jan. 21, 1905, in Pottsville, Pa., which became the "Gibbsville" of his novels, died of a heart attack in his home in this university town, a family spokesman said.

Wounded Survivors Tell of Massacre

By LAURENCE STERN

PRASAUT (WP) — The bodies of nearly 100 massacred Vietnamese civilians lay stacked under the sun and the flies Friday in a detention compound at this outpost on Cambodia's eastern border.

They were killed during a firefight that raged most of the night between Cambodian troops and Viet Cong forces who attacked Prasaut shortly before midnight.

The bodies were set out along a barbed wire fence that marked the boundaries of the compound where they had been herded by Cambodian troops Wednesday as suspected Viet Cong sympathizers. I saw them that day being marched in from their homes under armed guard.

Some of the approximately 100 survivors, many still bleeding and in great pain, told a Vietnamese-speaking cameraman that when the Viet Cong attacked, the Cambodians ordered them to run. When they complied, the Cambodians opened fire on them at close range, they said.

MILITARY SILENT

There were a large number of spent Chinese-Communist cartridges within the compound, attesting to the fact that a considerable amount of shooting had been done from inside the area where the civilians were clustered. Both the Cambodians and Viet Cong use Chinese ammunition.

Cambodian military officials here would not make themselves available for questioning after the incident was discovered by a small group of newsmen.

From all the available evidence it had to be concluded that the incident was a mass execution of unarmed civilians by Cambodian troops.

The most charitable surmise is that the Cambodians, in penning the Vietnamese into a hazardous outpost where imminent attack was expected, acted with utter disregard for human life.

One little girl of about eight lay in a semiconscious state with a bloody bandage around her mid-section. She moved her head only when files landed in her eyes and on her mouth. Another young woman with a gaping thigh wound was being sutured by a Cambodian male nurse who had no anesthetic. The woman was gasping and half-fainting with pain as the operation proceeded.

PAINFULLY WOUNDED

Clustered in the shade some of the wounded were moaning. Some lying very still with their faces contorted in pain. A tiny boy cried as he threaded his way amidst the wounded.

I counted 82 dead and two dozen wounded. Another correspondent counted 91 dead and still another 79. In some cases as many as two or three bodies lay under the same cloth covering, making a precise count impossible. The little children who had died made tiny lumps and were difficult to detect.

The impact of the massacre of civilians may well be to intensify the scale of the eastern border war. The

NOW HE'S HOPING HE GETS MEASLES

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — It will be a crying shame if Thomas K. Mattingly II doesn't come down with German measles next week. Then, at least, he won't have been disappointed for nothing.

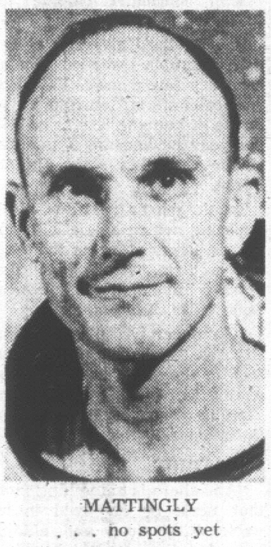
He was to have left for the moon today!

But instead of waving cheerily and saying, "Good-bye world, for 10 days," Mattingly watched from the sidelines while Apollo 13 left with John L. Swigert Jr. occupying his seat.

Two years of practice and study, days and weeks away from home and family, had prepared Mattingly for participation in man's third mission to the moon.

All of it was shot to blazes because a little kid got German measles and gave it to another kid, who gave it to an astronaut, who breathed on Mattingly and his two crew mates.

The others, doctors say, are immune to measles. But Mattingly isn't.



MATTINGLY
. . . no spots yet

Did Mattingly make any comments, astronaut boss Donald K. Slayton was asked. "Yes, but you wouldn't want to write any of them down." replied Slayton.

NERVE GAS LEAK DEFENCE READY

British Columbia's civil defence chief said Friday night B.C. officials will work with their counterparts in Washington State in case of an accident involving shipment of U.S. nerve gas.

The gas is to be shipped from Okinawa to Bangor, Wash., using Juan de Fuca Strait off Vancouver Island, then go by rail to Hermiston, Ore., and the U.S. Army's Umatilla, Ore., ordnance depot.

★ ★ ★

John Erb of Victoria said the B.C. civil defence organization has been in touch with its Washington State counterpart and "we have certain basic, standard plans." He declined to give details.

In Washington and Oregon, opposition to the planned shipment continued to build up Friday,

Oregon Gov. Tom McCall said the U.S. defence department's assurances of security appear to be hollow talk. The two states could not effectively guarantee the safety of their residents, he said.

Rhodesian Whites Back Smith Rule

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesia today entered a new phase in its fight against international condemnation and sanctions with Premier Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front entrenched more firmly than ever.

Final results from Friday's first general election under a republican constitution cleanly divided the government and opposition on racial lines.

The Rhodesian Front won all 50 seats it contested in the 66-seat parliament. The country's 87,020 white voters decided who should hold the 50 seats.

The only opposition returned in this first Rhodesian election run on racially segregated lines consisted of eight Africans returned by the country's 8,326 eligible black voters, representing the Mashona and Matebele tribes on a parity basis.

Eight other Arfican parliamentarians will be selected April 14 and 17 behind closed doors by tribal leaders who mainly support the white rulers.

Smith's victory means he controls the composition of Rhodesia's first republican Senate. Of the 23 senators, 10 will be directly elected by the Rhodesian Front caucus, three will be appointed by the president (formerly officer administering the government) and five African tribal chiefs each from Mashonaland and Matabeland will make up the remainder.

It was the first nationwide election since Rhodesia's white-minority government declared the British colony independent in November, 1965. The seizure of independence without providing for eventual rule by the black majority brought international condemnation and economic pressure in the form of trade sanctions voted by the United Nations.

A month ago, the Smith regime declared Rhodesia a republic.

Launch Called Perfect

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 13 astronauts rocketed away from earth today on man's third moon-landing expedition, a search for clues to the origin of the moon in the rugged, ancient Frau Mauro highlands.

James A. Lovell Jr., 42, a U.S. Navy captain, and civilians Fred W. Haise, 36, and John L. Swigert Jr., 38, rode the fearsome power of their giant Saturn V rocket into space at 11:13 a.m. PST to start a daring and difficult journey almost postponed by German measles.

Swigert earned a late-hour seat on the flight Friday after proving in a crash training program that he could move up from the backup team to the first team.

He replaced Thomas K. Mattingly II, 38, who was exposed to German measles and is not immune to the childhood disease.

After examining the Apollo 13 crew several hours before launch, doctors described their condition as "top shape."

SECOND STAGE IGNITES

After two minutes, 36 seconds of flight at an altitude of 40 miles, the second stage ignited.

"We confirm ignition," Lovell reported.

"You're looking perfect," a ground controller told the crew a few minutes later as they were 200 miles down-range.

The disappointed Mattingly had flown back to the Manned Spacecraft Centre at Houston to help out and watch the launch on television.

Pushing Apollo 13 toward an earth orbit before the journey to the moon, the 36-storey Saturn flashed to life with a roar and a sheet of flame.

RISES MAJESTICALLY

The super rocket screamed on its launch pad for 8.9 seconds while a computer system made certain all five first stage engines reached a full thrust of 7,600,000 pounds. Then steel restraining arms folded back and the rocket rose majestically, arching out over the Atlantic Ocean.

Lovell reported the inboard engine of the second stage shutdown early. However, Mission Control said the other four engines functioned properly and the mission was "go."

The engines are designed so that if one stops early, the others will take up the slack.

To reach the moon, Apollo 13 first had to circle the earth 1½ times in 2½ hours while Lovell, Haise and Swigert checked spacecraft systems. Then a second burst from the Saturn's third stage was to hurl the three men and their space home toward the waiting moon, 246,524 miles away.

From deep in space, they will beam back a 30-minute television program Sunday, giving viewers a tour of the command module starting at

Two Irritants Stall Wall St.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved downward this week although it appeared for a few days it might be building a base for an assault on the 800 resistance level.

For most of the week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials held firm despite increased numbers of declining issues. But on Friday the Dow Jones dropped, too.

Some analysts thought the market is in much the same situation as it was in late January and early February when fourth-quarter earnings reports were being announced.

The peak of the period for reports on first-quarter earnings wi'l be over in another week or two.

While elimination of this temporary restraining force, and the other temporary irritant — selling to raise money for the April 15 U.S. personal income tax — may not be enough to perk up the market, it could help pave the way for the revival of optimism.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 1.38 to 790.46 for the week.

Bonds Close Higher

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian bond market closed higher in quiet trading this week.

Dealers are reporting that investors are cautious, waiting full details on the Canada Refund issue, on Monday.

Day-to-day money was available Friday, at the lowest rate of the week, 6 per cent.

They traded throughout the week at 7 per cent.

Three- and six-month treasury bills traded Friday, at 6.80 and 6.55 per cent, respectively, also the lowest rate of the week.

The 90- and 182-day treasury bills ranged on the week from 6.80 and 6.55 per cent to 6.99 and 6.71 per cent, respectively.

In Ottawa the finance department said Friday $375 million of bonds maturing May 1 will be refunded by a cash offering of a new 33-month issue and a 59-month issue 'open to maturity'.

As well, $200 million of a new seven-year-four-month bond will be offered in exchange for holdings of a like par value of 4¼-per-cent government bonds due Sept. 1, 1972. The exchange offer is a partial refunding of $1,267,000,000 of bonds due Sept. 1, 1972, and will reduce the amount coming due on that date to $1,067,000,000.

Opinions Differ on Possible Bank Rate Cut

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets broke a two-week rally this week, dropping moderately in dull trading.

The upswing began after several large American financial institutions cut their prime lending rates to eight per cent from 8½.

There were hopes that the reduction in prime rates — the interest charged to a bank's best customers — would be the beginning of an easing in tight monetary conditions that have depressed Canadian and American markets since last June.

However, when it appeared that there would be no immediate relief in Canada, Canadian markets turned lower in lacklustre trading.

DROPPED FIVE DAYS

Markets opened slightly lower Monday and continued to fall in each of the next four sessions, with Friday's losses the largest of the week.

Credit restrictions were imposed last summer in an attempt by the federal government to fight inflation.

But the government has not indicated that it thinks inflation has been retarded or beaten.

Still, some observers feel a cut in the Bank of Canada bank rate may be announced soon.

A reduction in Canadian bank prime rates has traditionally followed a central bank rate cut.

Observers believe that if such a cut comes, it will not be simply in response to interests rate reductions in the United States but because the Canadian government feels that inflation in Canada has been slowed down.

Another point in favor of a bank rate cut is that federal authorities now face the task of refunding $375,000,000 in bonds and $175,000,000 in special treasury bills falling due May 1.

Nesbitt, Thomson and Co. Ltd. said in a money market letter that it expected the bank rate to be cut before the new issue is announced to create more settled market conditions.

But Burns Bros. and Denton Ltd., disagree. "At present, the monetary authorities appear content to hold the line, and prospects of a bank rate change are slight until the May 1 refunding is completed."

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials were down 2.73 to 182.79, golds 7.17 to 166.69, western oils 4.01 to 195.58 and base metals 1.51 to 116.0.

Volume was 10,971,000 shares compared with 11,286,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 485-304 with 200 issues unchanged.

Cocky Yancey Doesn't Expect Any Bad Rounds

Shares Lead With Littler; Knudson Six Shots Behind

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Confident Bert Yancey shot a 70 Friday to match Gene Littler at five-under-par 139 for the lead at the halfway mark in the Masters golf tournament.

"I'm capable of two more good rounds," Yancey said Friday. "Somebody else had better shoot better to beat me, because I don't think I'll turn in any bad rounds."

Besides the American contingent, Yancey withstood golfers from Canada, South Africa and Japan.

Billy Casper stormed in with 68 to trail by a stroke at 140. The Bonita, Calif., star was tied with young Bob Lunn of Sacramento, Calif., who had a second-round 70.

Gary Player, the little South African trying to allow talk of threats on his life fade away used sensational iron play to shoot 68 and moved into contention at 142, three behind the Yancey-Littler tandem.

Takaaki Kono of Yokahoma blazed in with 68 for 143.

And then there's Tommy Aaron the first-day leader at 68. Aaron had early troubles going four over par in the first three holes but fought back, to par the next five holes and shot a sharp 34 on the back nine to tie Player at 142.

KNUDSON SIXTH

George Knudson of Toronto was six off the pace at 145. The lone Canadian in the tournament, he shot a 72 Friday to go with his opening-round 73 Thursday.

Among notables failing to make the cut of 150, six over par, were Ray Floyd at 152 and Argentine Roberto de Vicenzo at 151.

Jack Nicklaus' hope of a fourth Masters green coat faded when he blasted his second shot on the par-five eighth hole into a deep ravine. He shot 75 for 146, seven strokes behind the leaders Arnold Palmer, seeking a fifth title, shot a 73 for 148. Last year's winner, George Archer, shot 72 for 145.

Chelsea, Leeds Battle to Draw In Soccer Final

LONDON (CP)—Leeds United and Chelsea battled to a 2-2 overtime tie today in their English Football Association Cup soccer final, the first time there was a draw in an English Cup final since 1912.

The score was 1-1 at half time and 2-2 at the end of the normal 90 minutes of play.

A sell-out crowd of 100,000 watched at Wembley Stadium as the two English League First Division teams battled for 30 scoreless overtime minutes. The game will be replayed April 29 at Wembley.

Meanwhile, Aberdeen upset Scotland's crack team, Glasgow Celtic, 3-1 in the Scottish FA Cup final at Glasgow.

Aberdeen led 1-0 at half-time on a 27th minute penalty by Joe Harper.

MacKAY SCORES TWO

Celtic, favorites for the European Cup of Champions, did nearly all the attacking but couldn't get a goal. Then in a storming finish MacKay scored two goals for Aberdeen in the 82nd and 89th minutes.

Between those two goals Bobby Lennox got one for Celtic.

At Wembley the game was a grim struggle on a heavy field that had been treated with 100 tons of sand.

The ball bounced badly in the mud and both goals in the first half were soft affairs.

In the 27th minute Eddie McCreadie completely missed his kick on the goal-line and a header by Jackie Charlton trickled in to give Leeds a 1-0 lead.

In the 41st minute Gary Sprake, Leeds' Welsh international goalkeeper, let a shot by Peter Houseman slip through his arms for the equalizer.

GOALIE STANDS OUT

Leeds stepped up the pressure in the second half and only brilliant goalkeeping by Peter Bonetti—one of England's World Cup squad—stopped them.

Bonetti held Leeds at bay until the 83rd minute. Then a header by Allan Clarke hit the post and Mike Jones shot Leeds into a 2-1 lead on the rebound.

The game was even more gruelling than the famed World Cup final of 1966, when England defeated West Germany 4-2 after 30 minutes extra time. At that time the Wembley field was at its best, but today it was deep in mud and the players had difficulty keeping going to the end.

At Glasgow, Aberdeen, with Danish star Henning Boel a strong man in defence, spoiled Celtic's bid for a four-point triumph. Celtic have already won the Scottish League and the Scottish League Cup and were aiming to add the Scottish Cup and the European Cup as well.

Now Aberdeen will go into next season's European Cup of Cup winners.

Higuchi Takes Grapple Battle

Dean Higuchi was a double winner in professional wrestling action Friday night at Memorial Arena.

Higuchi outlasted his rivals to win a "battle royal" and also downed Pierre Legrand in another bout.

In other bouts, Bulldog Brown defeated Mark Lewin in a "battle to the finish," Johnny Quinn beat Duncan McTavish and Don Morrow grappled to a draw with Bud Rattell.

Here are some leftovers to nibble on between periods tonight, and tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night. Gosh! And somehow the Masters Golf deserves a look-see as well.

Quiet mother!

Remember the post-game disagreement between the two Patricks, Lester and Frank, in which blows were reportedly exchanged and which was referred to in an earlier item in this corner?

Here's why it happened.

Archie Wills was sports editor of the Times at that time and recalls the heated rivalry between the brothers well.

"It was in a game between Vancouver and the Cougars here," he said, "and began over a disputed goal."

This was the era when the goal judges stood inside the playing surface at the back of the net. The nets weren't quite the same design as those of today, and often were knocked from their footings, Archie said.

On this particular occasion, Helgie Bostrum of Vancouver let go a shot that entered the net either at or before the time the goal had been knocked askew.

The goal judge signalled "goal," and referee Mickey Ion upheld his decision.

Lester took violent exception to the ruling.

The late Byron (Boss) Johnson and brother Johnny were the goal judges at the time, and it is not known if Lester berated the guilty one. But he did dispute the matter with brother Frank who, besides running the Vancouver club, also was league president.

●

The argument continued long after the game, and also on the way to the midnight boat, which the Vancouver team was boarding. And it was very bitter most of the time.

"It wasn't a fair goal," was Lester's point, and, as it was the only goal of the game, Lester perhaps had reason to be annoyed.

As it was, he finally demanded what Frank, as league president, was going to do about it.

Frank finally agreed that the argument was valid, and suggested that if the result of that game had any bearing on the standings at the end of the season, the game would be replayed.

Lester was appeased, but as it turned out, there was no need to play the game over again.

Still, the incident serves to prove, again, the deep sincerity of purpose the two brothers had.

On hockey, too, there was a reference in a news story the other day to the fact that this was the first year since 1926 that no Canadian teams were in the Stanley Cup playoffs. It should have said, perhaps, that it was the first time Montreal Canadiens and Toronto had missed. Because in the 1926 season there definitely were two teams from Canada.

One was from Montreal, the other from Victoria. And in that series, Jocko Anderson of the Victoria Cougars broke his leg in the first game in a collision with Babe Seibert, and the Maroons went on to take the cup. The Cougars were defending champions, having won it from Montreal Canadiens the year before.

●

And some shorties — Nanaimo Hornets, Second Division Rugby League champs this year with an 8-1-1 record, will move up to the first division next year . . . and there won't be any hole left, because they are going to field a second-division team as well, as will Navy, and probably Castaways . . . the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League has rejected a suggestion that Inter-City League games featuring an all-star team be played on a regular basis against teams from other northwest centres . . . or did you know that "Hank" Greenberg has registered for the 10th annual summer hockey school at Esquimalt, July 20 to Sept. 5? . . . This "Hank" is six years of age.

Did you know that the top five lifetime hitters in the majors are in the National League? They are Roberto Clemente (.314), Hank Aaron (.313), Matty Alou (.312), Rico Carty (.311) and Pete Rose (.309) . . . The Du Maurier international ski championship is an event of the past . . . The Imperial Tobacco Co. has dropped sponsorship because of its policy: "To engage in no endeavor which constitutes a direct appeal to youth" . . . It is the plan of the ski association to carry on with the world cup event which began in 1966 . . . Pat Kelly of the Kansas City Royals is a brother of Leroy Kelly, running back for the Cleveland Browns football club . . . Lenny Wilkens has been signed to a two-year contract as coach of Seattle SuperSonics . . . The Sonics closed with a rush this season, winning 21 of the final 26 games, but missed the playoffs . . . If Curt Flood wins his case against pro baseball, it could mean a big payoff as in an anti-trust suit such as Flood's treble damages are virtually automatic . . . Flood is suing for $1 million.

And, get this, there is a revolt brewing on the pro golf trail . . . the younger pros are complaining that the more successful of their kind are pre-empting all the best caddies . . . They can afford to send their caddies to a tournament days in advance, study the course, and chart every blade of grass . . . The younger players say this puts them at a disadvantage . . . the charge was to be heard this week at the Masters . . . In that regard, it has been said that Billy Casper has his caddie on a $12,000 retainer . . . Perhaps the caddies should get together and form their own guild . . . the benefits are good.

Aaron Still Hurdling Baseball's Milestones

By Associated Press

Atlanta Braves Hank Aaron, with the bases loaded in the third inning, slammed a Tom Griffin pitch into the left field seats for his 556th career homer and 13th grand slam that launched the Braves to a 5-0 victory over the Houston Astros Friday night. Lefty George Stone hurled a six-hitter for Atlanta.

It was the season opener for the Astros.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis beat the New York Mets 7-3, the Chicago Cubs nipped Montreal Expos 2-1, Philadelphia Phillies blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0, San Diego Padres trounced Los Angeles Dodgers 7-2 and San Francisco Giants edged Cincinnati Reds 4-3.

In the American League, it was California Angeles 11, Kansas City Royals 7; Boston Red Sox 4, Washington Senators 1; Chicago White Sox 5, Milwaukee Brewers 4; Baltimore Orioles 3, Detroit Tigers 2 in 10 innings.

Aaron's four RBI boosted his career total to 1,732, pulling him even with Honus Wagner for the ninth spot on the all-time list. He also took over 10th place in career hits with 2,963, passing Sam Crawford.

BIG CROWD FOR WIN

The Cardinals thrilled a record St. Louis opening game crowd of 47,568 by scoring all seven runs on six hits in the third inning and coasting past the Mets.

Singles by Lou Brock and Jose Cardenal and a walk to Richie Allen set things up and Joe Torre doubled the first two runs across. Leron Lee's double made it 3-0 and the Cards continued their assault after Ray Sadecki replaced starter Jim McAndrew. Cardenal singled home the final run.

Ron Hunt opened the eighth inning with a pinch double and Bobby Bonds singled him home with a tie-breaking run as the Giants ended Cincinnati's winning streak at four games. The Reds had tied the score in the top of the eighth inning on Pete Rose's single and a triple by Bernie Carbo.

Ken Henderson, who scored the Giants' first run in the second, singled home two more in the fifth.

PADRES DOWN DODGERS

San Diego's triumph over the winless Dodgers was highlighted by Nate Colbert's two-run homer in a four-run first inning and the relief pitching of Dave Roberts, who retired the first 17 batters he faced.

The Cubs were one out away from their third consecutive defeat when Ron Santo singled and Johnny Callison unloaded a two-run homer, ruining a fine performance by Montreal's Joe Sparma, who allowed only three hits over the first eight innings. It was the fourth straight setback for the winless Expos.

BASEBALL RULE BENDS IN MONTREAL WEATHER

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal's 40-degree weather Friday caused a slight bending of one of baseball's controversial pitching rules.

Umpire Paul Pryor ruled in the third inning that pitchers could put their hands to their mouths after the cold weather made it nearly impossible to keep hands warm.

Baseball rules prohibit a pitcher from putting his hands to his mouth.

Victoria Trails Volleyball List

BURNABY (CP) —Kitimat jumped into a first-place tie with Revelstoke Friday night in the round-robin competition of the British Columbia boys' high school volleyball championships.

The two teams topped the list of 16 entries with 7-1 win-loss records. Their only losses were to each other as they split two games.

John Oliver secondary school, Vancouver, ran its record to 6-0 to stay ahead of Grand Forks and Penticton, each 6-2.

Victoria and Templeton of Vancouver were tied with three wins in eight games.

Bike Meet Postponed

Soggy course conditions at Blink Bonnie Farm, caused by recent heavy rains, have forced officials of the Victoria Motorcycle Club to postpone Sunday's scrambles event.

The contest has been re-scheduled for April 19 at 1:30 p.m.

Closed Champs Tumble Early

WINNIPEG (CP)—Bruce Rollick was muttering out loud, Jennifer Dakin was crying and the Mexican roadrunner kept on running during opening day of the Canadian open badminton championships Friday.

Rollick, Canadian closed singles champion, had reason to mutter as he led the parade of closed champions that tasted defeat Friday.

By the end of the day Rollick, women's singles champ Alison Ridgway, men's doubles winners Jamie Paulson and Yves Pare, women's doubles champions Pat Moody and Nancy McKinley and Pare and Mrs. Moody, the mixed winners, were beaten.

Roy Diaz Gonzalez, nicknamed "the Mexican roadrunner" by opponents, shook off an early bout of nervousness then whipped Rollick 12-15, 15-5, 15-9.

The 17-year-old Mexican champion put on a brilliant display of footwork and net play that had Rollick talking throughout the final two games.

BEATS U.S. STAR

Miss Dakin, an 18-year-old from Toronto was overjoyed as she upsetted ranking U.S. star Caroline Hein of Seattle, Wash., in the morning draw. But she couldn't hold back the tears after beating Mrs. Ridgway in the second round.

Miss Dakin, who won 11-6, 11-5 said she "felt so relaxed in the open, not like in the junior where there was so much pressure."

Paulson, of Calgary, and Pare from Montreal lost to Rob Patterson and Abdul Shaikh of Vancouver 9-15, 15-7, 15-2 in the men's doubles.

JUDY ROLLICK LOSES

Pare and Mrs. Moody were beaten 15-2, 15-10 by Patterson and Mimi Nilssen of Vancouver in the mixed doubles.

Marg Shedd and Barbara Hood of Toronto ousted Mrs. Moody and Miss McKinley from the women's doubles with a 15-13, 1-15, 15-12 triumph.

Top seeded Junji Honma of Tokyo, 15-6, 15-5 victor over Don Smith of Calgary faces his first test when he meets Paulson, 15-6, 15-6 winner over Paul Whetnall of Kent, Eng.

In women's singles, Tyna Barinaga of Port Angeles defeated Sherrie Boyse of Calgary 11-2, 11-0. Miss McKinley beat Sue Whetnall of Kent, Eng. 11-12, 11-4, 11-1, and Marg Boxall, also of Kent, defeated Judy Rollick of Vancouver 11-1, 11-5.

LATEST COMPUTER AID . . . . . . FOR BASEBALL MANAGERS

Dial-a-Lineup Time May Soon Be Here

Seattle (AP) — Baseball may be entering the age of dial-a-lineup when a manager can tell a computer the other team's pitcher and find out the best batting order to use against him.

The time might not be that far off, because a Seattle computer analysis firm already has such a program worked out and is positive it can help a team win 20 more games a year.

What's more, the system might go even further into baseball and a general manager will use computer analysis to determine which players in the minors will make it to the major leagues.

One team already has expressed interest in the possibility, say officials of Systems Analysis, Inc., of Seattle. The firm, which prides itself on its creative approach to the computer age, has made trial runs to see if the system would work. They say it would.

"We're still negotiating with an eastern team about it," said Perry Sikes, head of SAI's research and development section.

"We estaimate that it would mean 20 more victories a year, give or take three," he added.

Obviously, managers now use what they consider the best lineup possible. The big difference is a computer's ability to amass factors ranging from a player's past performance to the weather. Another factor is human predictability, Sikes commented. Psychological tests indicate humans are very predictable.

"We've looked at the possibility of using computers in scouting and we believe it can be done," he said. "Human behavior and reactions are among the most predictable things in the world. A computer would be able to use factors scouts can't even begin to use to make predictions."

The system would cost a team perhaps $100,000 a year, depending on how much a team used it. But a team's expenses likely would be reduced if the system lives up to SAI's expectations.

Shrum Asks Report On Power Line Plan

B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum is getting a personal report on the controversial overhead transmission line which the Crown corporation plans to run through four miles of urban and suburban Victoria.

This was disclosed Friday in a letter from Shrum to Mrs. Marie Bown, 1266 Dunsterville, one of the organizers of petitions against the overhead line along Interurban and Burnside.

"We are certainly giving serious consideration to the great number of complaints which we have received and as a result I am sending one of our division managers to Victoria to prepare a personal report for me on this whole problem," write Shrum.

"He will examine all possibilities of relocating the line or even part of the line if this will help to meet some of the objections which have been raised.

SYMPATHY

"I have the deepest sympathy with those who are protesting but as I have said before, we have only so much money available and we have to keep within our budget.

"The legislature this year very generously increased our borrowing power by $250 million. However we shall exhaust nearly all of this in less than two years in providing for increased load growth due mainly to an increased population.

"During the next five years we shall require $800 million in order to provide the service that will be needed in B.C. by 1980."

UNDERGROUND

Shrum said that until he has a further report, he would not attempt to give detailed estimates of putting the line underground.

In an earlier letter he has said the whole problem would be solved immediately if local residents paid the extra cost. Mrs. Bown wrote back asking for the costs in detail.

In his latest letter, Shrum said he thinks it would have to be handled through municipal councils, "probably an increase in the mill rate. Of course the cost that would have to be met by the municipalities would be the difference between underground and overhead installation."

STEEL POLES

B.C. Hydro has said underground costs are $303,000 a mile compared with $80,000 a mile for the planned steel poles, which will be 75 feet high, or equivalent to a seven-storey building.

Opponents have labelled the overhead lines as an eyesore and a blight on surrounding residential areas, reducing property values.

The Interurban-Burnside line is the last leg of an overhead line from Jordan River, carrying extra power for Greater Victoria's needs.

Purchasing Areas Are 'Soft Targets'

Purchasing departments of industry are new soft spots vulnerable to labor union bargaining techniques, a Vancouver shipyard labor relations officer told western Canada and Pacific northwest purchasing men Friday.

Speaker M. A. Pierotti, of Burrard Dry Dock, Ltd., was luncheon guest of the 30th annual Pacific northwest purchasing conference and products show at the Empress Hotel.

He said that while the opportunity for massive confrontation between industry and labor exists in B.C. and elsewhere this year, "the bargaining techniques will be of new flavor and sublety." Pierotti referred to the effectiveness of the work-to-rule and slow-down procedure in recent disputes which is "difficult to prosecute or obtain redress" for management.

UNION ACTION

The speaker cited these areas as targets for union attention, as well as the actual products used by or manufactured by industry and hence directly involving purchasing departments:

Growing staff involvement in the gargaining process as white collar unions proliferate and staff groups seek recognition; accreditation by companies of a single bargaining agent within an indusrty; point of origin or union label of goods traded by or made by companies; the ladder progression technique of bargaining.

The latter Pierotti explained is the recent preference of some unions to reject a series of proposed settlements recommended by their union spokesmen before accepting a much higher contract.

CLOSING RANKS

About accreditation, Pierotti said the idea of closing ranks was learned the hard way by unions many years ago, and is just now being accepted by management (e.g. Construction Labor Relations Association).

It affords to labor a united front, producing a standardized rate structure within the industry, and may prohibit the entering of private deals with a union in order to keep working while a competitor is struck, he said.

It would not be extreme to suggest that economic sanctions could be imposed against companies which have broken away and acted irresponsibly in the eyes of the trade orgainization, Pierotti said.

What then might be a company's policy in dealing with a maverick company's products, he asked. "Would it be extreme to consider that perhaps even prohibition of trade commodities could occur?"

Not all these developing situations can be laid to the perfidy of labor, he said. "The bulk of present employees have not experienced the depression or the Second War. They express different concepts, identify to their own images, and collectively follow the sound of a different drum."

Union leaders appear ready to follow the stream rather than change some of these ideas, Pierotti said.

It is only a short hop from union contracts calling for union sub-contract work only, to contracts calling for union-made products only, he warned, and this would be a direct problem for purchasers.

The nature of such techniques may be called obstruction, and to a greater extent the purchasing manager must be prepared to deal with them, to be completely informed and ready to co-operate closely with his company's industrial relations or personnel division.

Youth Different, Says Bishop

People over 30 were brought up in a different social and cultural background from that of yonng men and women today, says Most Rev. Remi De Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria.

"That is why our values are being challenged," he told the Catholic Women's League of St. Andrew's Cathedral at a communion breakfast in the Dominion Hotel.

"We in the Western World were brought up in a cultural pattern which we thought was the only civilized pattern. Today, through modern means of travel and communication, we have suddenly become aware that there are a variety of civilizations and cultures.

"We are going through a process of acceleration change and will have to learn to live in a completely changing world, because everything is being challenged."

ACCEPT CHANGE

"In the field of religion we accept a change on the authority of God and we believe God contributes to the dimension of our knowledge."

Bishop De Roo said the deep frustration people are experiencing in life are a cause for social concern.

"We are gradually moving towards a more unified cultural society and it is going to influence the mode of fashion. The music and language may be different but the beat is the same."

Guests at the communion breakfast were Sister Kathleen Cyr, Superior of St. Joseph's Hospital; Sister Frieda Marie, Superior of St. Ann's Academy; Sister Theodoric, principal of St. Andrew's School; Mrs. W. Rogers, vice-president of the provincial council, Catholic Women's League; and director Msgr. Michael O'Connell.

They were introduced by CWL president Miss Virginia Hanley.

A dollar still goes a long way.

A dollar may buy a lot less these days—but it doesn't buy less Volkswagen.

To begin with, we still protect the bottom of every VW with a solid slab of steel.

Then we stamp the famous beetle shape out of a heavier gauge metal than even most big cars use.

And since we've been stamping out basically the same shape for the past 20 years now, everything fits.

(So well in fact, that the Volkswagen is actually airtight.)

Our paint job is the envy of the industry. 28 pounds worth. 4 coats. And the parts you don't see are finished as well as the parts you do.

The VW's 1600 cc. engine is not only ridiculously easy on gas and oil, it's easy on itself.

(We nearly went broke giving away gold watches to Volkswagen owners who drove their Volkswagens more than 60,000 miles.)

What's more, 1 out of every 8 VW employees is an inspector. They inspect every part of every Volkswagen 3 times. And then they give the finished bug a going over that cars costing twice as much don't get.

And when a VW finally does make it out of the clutches of our finicky inspectors, it falls right into the clutches of our equally finicky service people. And the awesome VW Diagnosis System: every new car we put on the road now gets a series of free electronic checkups.

How much do you have to pay for this amazing automobile? Only $1999.*

And right away a VW will start saving you money. Money you can spend on some of life's little luxuries: like food, clothing and shelter.

All because a bug won't cost you more for upkeep than you can keep up with.

Which is only right.

After all, if you're buying a small car to fight inflation, we think you should buy one that won't fight back.

Cambodian Insurgency Taking on Characteristics of War

By LAURENCE STERN

CHIPHOU, Cambodia (WP) — The hit and run insurgency on Cambodia's eastern border took on the formal aspect of war for the first time this week—with this village as its "front."

A battalion of regular government troops arrived to stake out a defensive position around this village some three miles, at its closest point, from the South Vietnamese border.

Vietnamese Communists were reported to be in control of three border villages, Bavet, Chantrea and Kompaong Trach. At the weekend I visited Bavet and Chantrea with correspondent T. D. Allman and local authorities at that time expressed their concern about encircling Communist forces.

The chief casulaties of the day were two Japanese correspondents from Fuji television and their Cambodian drivers, who were abducted by Vietnamese Communists. Their rented car was burned on the national highway just east of here.

* * *

While the kidnapping was taking place less than a mile away, the Cambodian military region commander was briefing newsmen and foreign attaches on the gravity of conditions in the district.

Three other correspondents, reported to be Americans or French, were abducted along with their rented car, on the same road Sunday near Bavet. They have not yet been identified, though Cambodian authorities here have obtained eyewitness reports of the incident.

Police and local defence forces from the three Communist-occupied villages have taken refuge in the provincial capital of Svay Rieng. The Communist main elements scattered about this frontier region were identified as North Vietnamese by the chief of Svay Rieng province.

He said they were fully uniformed and equipped and numbered some 6,000 in the adjoining districts of Chiphou and Kompong Trach.

* * *

The fresh detachment of government troops which arrived Monday was part of a convoy of several hundred soldiers dispatched from Phnom Penh as a military escort for the newsmen and military attaches. Many of the soldiers returned after the tour to their defensive positions in the capital.

Those who stayed behind were equipped with rockets, armored personnel carriers, American-manufactured M-16 rifles and several Chinese Communist 75-millimetre recoilless rifles, fresh from the crate.

As two of the Chinese weapons were being emplaced earthen bunkers were being dug by Cambodian troops on the northern edge of the village an elderly woman squatted in her front door and looked on impassively.

Hers was one of several houses that lay between the defensive firing position and the direction of anticipated Communist attack.

Chiphou has already felt the impact of near full-scale war. On Friday night, four hours after my visit to the village, three Communist battalions attacked Chiphou with mortars and 75-millimetre cannons and drove out government forces.

The battle went on most of the night, according to Col. Thongvanan Panmuong, the region's commander, despite the presence of only a flimsy defence force in the town.

* * *

Two armed villagers and soldiers's wife were killed and eight other persons wounded in the battle. The Communists later abandoned the village to the government after looting the government arsenal of some 350 rifles, mortars and machine-guns.

The government estimated that 50 Communists were killed in the battle but the enemy removed the bodies during their retreat.

Within the past month, Panmuong reported, 37 Cambodian soldiers and civilians have been killed in 51 separate incidents in this five-province district. The region stretches from Takeo in the south to Snoul in the north. An additional 78 were wounded and 108 captured by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

Large caches of government weapons were also taken by the Communists, Panmuong said, among them 453 rifles and five motorbikes.

* * *

Cambodian authorities were strong in their insistence that there is no joint military planning or communication with American or South Vietnamese forces across the nearby border. Pahmuong noted, however, that it would be possible for troops across the border to monitor military communications here, as they are not coded.

During my visit to the border a South Vietnamese sentry said relations with their Cambodian counterparts across the barbed wire have warmed since the coup d'etat against Prince Nordom Sihanouk.

"Now we can smile at each other," he said. "But that is the extent of it."
